Shattered Jap Fleet Retreats; 11 Ships Sunk and 6 Hit, at Least

Gas for Pleasure Cars Limited to 3 Gallons Weekly

200,000 District Autoists to Register At 28 Public Schools 3 Days Next Week

Officials in charge of gasoline rationing in the District last night announced the times next week at which Washington's nearly 200,000 motorists may go to 28 public schools and register for the ration cards that, Price Administrator Leon Henderson told Congress yesterday, will entitle about one-third of them to no more than 3 gallons a week beginning May 15.

The schools will be open from 3 to 8 p. m. for ration card registration next Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, declared Lawson Cantrell assistant schools superintendent in charge of rationing in the District.

Cantrell's announcement was good news only for the city's public school pupils, who in all schools will be dismissed at 1 p. m. on the registration days to enable teachers to serve as registrars.

All Must Register

Owners of private motor vehicles of all descriptions, including motorcycles, and inboard motorboat owners will be required to register if they expect to get gasoline after Thursday. The only exceptions will be public carriers, ambulances, hearses and autos used by any Federal or local governmental agency.

Henderson disclosed the scope of the Government's gasoline rationing program before the House Interstate Commerce Committee. He stated that for "nonessential" automobiles, the weekly gas dole in 17 Eastern States and the District would not be more than three, and maybe only two gallons. He said there was "no prospect" of getting more than three.

"Adequate" supplies, however,

Congress Eyes Recess; Tax Bill Obstacle

With only two major war bills on the way and a congressional election in the offing, congressional leaders yesterday tentatively discussed the prospect of a mid-summer recess or adjournment.

Chief barriers to adjournment were an astronomical tax bill still in committee and the Administration's forthcoming estimates on an all-time-high, 36-billion-dollar war appropriation bill.

Leaders proposed to rush the war bill and all other appropriations through both Houses in June, and take the big tax bill at least over the House hurdle before the end of next month.

As the President has advised members that he has no other major measures immediately in mind, Congress was making plans for a get-away in late June

Greentree's Entry Favored In Preakness

Race Classic Today Expected to Draw 45,000 Turf Fans

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent

Pimlico, Md., May 8.—Uncertainty, thy name is Preakness. Yes, Derby doubts have turned into Preakness problems but it is a living cinch that something new will have been added to the 3-year-old situation come sundown tomorrow. That's why upward of 45,000 will jam every nook and corner of this ancient turf plant eager to see the 52d running of the Maryland classic. Despite all that has gone before, this Preakness is as wide open as any since that day in 1873 Survivor drove home in front in the initial running. And not since the Preakness was shifted to a week after the Derby instead of a week before has there been more interest in the Baltimore battle at a mile and three sixteenths.

About the only thing the Derby sent to Maryland was a probable favorite in the gallant Greentree entry of Shut Out, winner of the Blue Grass struggle, and Devil Diver, the disappointing. It is agreed that Shut Out and Devil Diver will march postward with the tote board showing 6-to-5 or thereabouts on their chances.

The Derby did help out the Preakness field. To the strains of "Maryland, My Maryland," 10 horses, barring scratches, will step onto the running surface. These will be the

Silver Spring Flier On Plane Lost In Puget Sound

Tacoma, May 8 (AP).—An Army bomber from nearby McChord Field air base fell into Pudget Sound late today and sank with its crew of two captains and a lieutenant colonel, the Army Air Corps reported.

The following officers were aboard the plane, the Air Corps said: Lieut. Col. Perry O. Huff, 41, of 8405 Sixteenth Street, Silver Spring, Md.; next of kin, Mrs. Phylis W. Huff, wife, same address; Capt. R. C. Alexander, 45, Seattle, and Capt. Angus C. B. MacPhee, 26, Tacoma.

[Lieut. Col. Huff was a native of Washington and a brother of Tallman F. Huff, 118 Lexington Drive, Woodmoor, Md. His wife is prominently known here in dramatic circles and is an outstanding member of the Junior Women's Club. The Huffs have a daughter, Gretchen, 3.—Editor's note.]

WAAC Bill Approved by Senate Unit

Amendment to Put Women in Army Withdrawn; Early Action Is Forecast

By Christine Sadler
Post Staff Writer

The Senate Military Affairs Committee yesterday voted unanimously to re-report the "Rogers Bill" to establish a Women's Auxiliary Corps.

This decision was reached after both the War Department and Senator Thomas (Democrat) of Utah had agreed to withdrawal of the amendment proposed by the Senator last week which would have changed the status of the proposed corps so that its volunteer members would be serving in the Army and not just with it.

Reynolds Sees Quick Approval

Senator Reynolds (Democrat) of North Carolina, chairman of the committee, predicted early approval of the measure by the Senate and said opposition would be slight.

"We liked the corps as it was proposed by Representative Rogers because the whole idea is so new it just seems best to have the women in the separate organization. If this plan works out all right, then perhaps they can be taken into the Army later," he declared.

The amendment would have made the WAACS eligible for veterans' compensation and insurance on the same basis with regular soldiers. As the corps was planned in the measure introduced in the House by Congresswoman Edith Rogers (Republican) of Massachusetts its members would have hospitalization and pension benefits under provisions of the United States Employes Compensation Act. The scale of pay is somewhat lower than for regular veterans.

Another difference would have been that women officers of the WAACS might have been given slightly higher ranks than are provided in the Rogers bill.

Voluntary Enlistment

WAACS will enlist on a purely voluntary basis, be subject to discipline under the Articles of War, and be eligible for noncombatant duty both in this country and abroad. A top limit of 150,000 is set in the bill. Ages of volunteers must be between 21 and 45. According to plans of the War Department, the first 12,500 would go into the aircraft warning service, where approximately 6000 women volunteers are now serving. Other tasks contemplated include clerical work, telephone and telegraph operations, laundry and cooking.

A major argument against taking the WAAC into the Army was that the move would confer on some members of the corps rank and title higher than men in combat service. Under the Rogers proposal the corps leaders will have nonmilitary titles.

Fort Benning, Ga., May 8.—From leaping off low platforms, the student paratrooper goes to a machine designed like the side of a transport airplane with the door gone, placed 40 feet from the ground. He straps himself into a parachute harness suspended by slack risers from a pulley on a steel cable and, at a slap from an instructor, jumps, yelling "one thousand . . ." He falls the length of the risers and is snatched upright and rides the pulley to the ground.

On another machine the student is suspended on a set of risers facing backward and rides down an inclined cable, turning himself to face forward as he goes. Near the ground, an instructor pulls a release which drops him and he strikes the ground moving and rolls over, learning to land in a wind without injury.

From these simple machines the student goes to the hill where the two 250-foot towers stand, each with four spidery arms projecting from its top.

On one tower he is given a couple of rides sitting in a chair-like support attached to a parachute which is guided to earth by cables. When he has graduated from this he goes to another place on the same tower where he is buckled into a parachute harness and hauled up, lying horizontal and face down, about half way to the top.

At an order from the instructor he pulls a ripcord and drops the length of the risers, bringing up with a jolt which startles him out of his wits and ends abruptly the "one thousand—two thousand

U. S. Steel Unit Bows in Union Contract Row

Membership Clause Is Agreed to by Shipbuilding Firm

By the Associated Press

New York, May 8.—The United States Steel Corp. today agreed to enter a maintenance-of-membership contract with the industrial union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers (C. I. O.) employed by its subsidiary, Federal Shipbuilding and Drydock Co., ending a months-long dispute which at one time caused the yard to be taken over by the Navy.

In notifying the War Labor Board and the union of its compliance with a directive issued April 24 by the board, the company said of acceptance of the controversial membership provision, which has been described as a modified closed shop:

"This action has been taken solely because of the war emergency, and this country's great need of ships in order successfully to prosecute the war."

Navy Operated Yard

The Navy Department operated the yard, with several hundred million dollars worth of war orders, for 19 weeks last summer and fall, after a strike in which the principal demand of the union was inclusion of a maintenance - of - membership clause in its contract with the company.

When the yard was returned to private operation on January 6, this year, the issue still was unsettled.

L. H. Korndorff, president of Federal, said:

"While this company has thus accepted the 'directive order' of the War Labor Board, we are bound to say that we have done so solely under the compulsion of war.

"We regard the so-called 'maintenance-of-membership' directive as unwise and unsound, and as tending, without the sanction of Congress, to set up a national war labor policy, which will not be conducive to obtaining maximum production at the Kearny shipyard

Ships and More Ships

"But we are at war. There is imperative need for ships and more ships. The prolongation of this controversy might result in serious loss of production. . . .

Wallace Sees 'Last Desperate Blow' by Axis

He Forecasts Attacks This Summer, Uprising In Latin America

By the Associated Press

New York, May 8.—Vice President Wallace, predicting the Axis would strike a "last desperate blow" this summer, said tonight that this might include a Japanese attack on Alaska and the northwest United States coast with a simultaneous German uprising in Latin America.

The Vice President told the Free World Association here that this country must look for "the worst kind of Fifth Column work in Latin America, much of it operating through the agency of governments with which the United States at present is at peace."

"When I say this," he added, "I recognize that the peoples both of Latin America and of the nations supporting the agencies through which the Fifth Columnists work are overwhelmingly on the side of the democracies."

He did not name the nations to which he referred.

Hitler Gathering Forces

Madagascar Mop-Up

By Drew Middleton
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, May 8.—The British quickly sent reinforcements to Ceylon and strove to clean up any remaining Vichy-French resistance on Madagascar today as the urgency of controlling the Indian Ocean was stressed by reports that Japanese invasion forces already were aboard ship in Rangoon, ready to attack India.

Burma, scene of one of the most stubborn delaying actions of the war, had been almost completely overrun by the Japanese.

Military sources acknowledged that the Japanese probably had taken the West Burma port of Akyab, 300 air miles from Calcutta, but said they had no confirmation of a German broadcast assertion that the Japanese already had crossed the border into India. It was conceded that Japanese patrols may have entered India "purely for propaganda purposes," but the informants held to the belief that any Japanese invasion of the tempting treasure-house of India would come from the sea, with Akyab and its airfields as the base of heavy preparatory air attacks on the Ganges Basin.

Fliers Raid Rangoon

Aligned with this view was the announcement that Maj. Gen. Lewis H. Brereton's United States Army bombers from India raided Rangoon again today for their third attack in four days. The bombers, which defied storms and waves of Japanese fighters, set big fires.

Informants said the Japanese had been concentrating much more than a holding force at Rangoon and this was the reason the United States bombers had raided the port so often.

While the British land forces in Burma continued to move up the Chindwind River Valley to the northwest, it was announced here that the British island of Ceylon,

London Puts Sinkings at 18; U. S. Fliers' 'Brilliant' Attack Helps Smash Invasion Force; U. S. Losses Still Unreported

American aerial bombardiers and the guns of an American fleet have shattered a Japanese armada advancing in the Coral Sea northeast of Australia.

The battle has "temporarily ceased" in its sixth day. The enemy, heavily hit, has retreated. The American attacks "will continue."

Thus General MacArthur's headquarters in Australia in a communique dated Saturday, May 9, told a waiting world of the outcome of the greatest battle America's Navy ever fought . . . a battle to prevent the invasion of Australia.

Behind them, the Japanese left thousands of their dead, with at least 11 of their ships sunk and 6 damaged. The toll may have been greater, for the British news agency, Reuters, unofficially placed it at 18 craft destroyed and 4 damaged.

Enemy Building Up Force for Weeks

The headquarters communique, dated Melbourne, said the action represented a "continued effort of the Japanese to extend their aggressive conquests towards the south and southeast."

It was pointed out that the Japanese had been building up their forces, with emphasis on naval transport elements, for a coordinated attack of the combined forces. This attack, the communique said, was "initiated several days ago."

The text of the communique:

"The great naval and air battle off the northeast coast of Australia has temporarily ceased.

"This action represents continued efforts of the Japanese to extend their aggressive conquests toward the south and southeast.

"First efforts were aimed at expanding Japanese air bases but our air force consistently and effectively attacked Japanese air fields during the past six weeks, dislocating Japanese plans through destruction of installations and aircraft.

"Our reconnaissance revealed a gradual building up of Japanese naval and transport elements for a coordinated attack by combined forces, which was initiated several days ago.

"Our naval forces then attacked in interception. They handled themselves with marked skill and fought with admirable courage and tenacity and the enemy has been repulsed. Our attacks will continue."

CORAL SEA BATTLE grew out of a Jap invasion convoy's drive from Rabaul or the Solomon Islands toward (black arrows) th New Hebrides or New Caledonia, probably preparatory to an attempt to cut United States supply lines and invade Australia

Private advices from Sydney earlier last night said Japan had suffered the worst naval defeat in her history, that the remnants of the enemy fleet were fleeing northward, and that the dire threat of attack in force in the Antipodes was over, at least, for the moment.

The claims came via London, transmitted by the United Press, an hour after the Navy Department here had issued a much more cautious communique at 7 p. m.

This Australian report also said the battle virtually had ended. The Navy Department said it was continuing unabated in its fifth day.

Our Navy Avoids Any Claim of Victory

The Washington communique scrupulously avoided claiming a victory but inferentially indicated that Allied losses might be inconsiderable in comparison with Japan's.

"No one can say," one cautious official pointed out, "who has won until the battle is over."

Details of our losses are not yet known, the Navy said, "but no credence should be given to claims that have been or may be put out by Tokyo."

The dispatches from Sydney told this story:

Big enemy concentrations ventured within the reach of land-based aircraft and the American bombers went for them in waves. They sank two large aircraft carriers, at least one cruiser and seven destroyers. Other ships they damaged. The surviving

'Nervous Girls' Are Advised Not to Come to Washington

Women who have suffered from nervous disorders or have been in a mental hospital should not come to overcrowded Washington for wartime jobs with the Government.

This warning was sounded last night by Dr. Winfred Overholser, noted psychiatrist and superintendent of St. Elizabeths Hospital, in an address before the Social Hygiene Society of Washington at the Y. W. C. A., Seventeenth and K Streets Northwest.

Dr. Overholser said that the fact there are more mental patients here per capita than in any other place in the Nation is attributed to the influx of people here since the war, the high tension of living and lack of unmarried men.

"Many girls coming to Washington have become unstable, discontented and have gone off on a tangent," he said. "Many of these had been in mental hospitals. But, with the tensions, economic and social, the high cost of living and the greater number of single girls than men, I would advise girls not to come here. When they get their paycheck from the Government and pay their bills they finally discover that they are not as well off as they were when they left their homes."

He said that of 37 women admitted to St. Elizabeths last month for mental disorders, eight were Government workers.

Dr. Overholser said the morale of the Nation has increased im-

'Lavish Waste of Money'

U. S. Judge Assails Wage-Hour Prosecution of Small Firms

By the Associated Press

Topeka, Kans., May 8.—Federal Judge Richard J. Hopkins interrupted a wage-hour hearing before him today to criticize "wasteful prosecutions" of small companies by the Wage-Hour Administration.

"At a time when the country is at war," he said from the bench, "I object to the lavish waste of money on a little thing of this kind. It is disloyal of any bureau in Washington to waste money in this way."

On the stand was Dr. G. H. Hoerman, owner of the Lyndon (Kans.) Broom Co., against which the Wage-Hour Administration seeks an injunction to prevent violations of the wage-hour law.

"Let's look at the thing in a practical way," the judge, a Republican appointed to the bench by President Hoover, said. "Why should the Government spend literally thousands of dollars on the small things of this kind?"

Why should a "two-by-four" business in a small town (Lyndon has a population of about 700) be expected to keep accurate records, he asked, and why was it so important if it didn't?

He called it unnecessary to bring "five high-powered" lawyers from Washington to "persecute" such small companies.

Kenneth Montgomery, Government attorney who had been questioning Dr. Hoerman, replied that wage and hour rights of the work-

Skipper's Tale

CAPT. ARTHUR G. ROBINSON

COMDR. NICHOLAS VAN BERGEN

By Robert Okin

Associated Press Staff Writer

At an Eastern Port, May 8 (AP).—Capt. Arthur G. Robinson, tanned, gray-haired skipper of U. S. Cruiser Marblehead, brought half around the world despite gaping wounds from Japanese bombs, said today that his ship underwent three hours of incessant bombing by at least 37 Japanese planes.

Interviewed in his office aboard the ship amid the din of riveters and workmen as her repairs proceeded, Captain Robinson, a pleasant, soft-spoken officer, said the ship had less than a 50-50 chance of getting back during the first 8 or 10 hours after the attack in the battle of Macassar Straits.

The Marblehead was on a defensive mission under orders of a Dutch admiral to intercept a large, well protected Japanese convoy which was en route for a landing at Macassar, the captain said.

"En route our force was intercepted by a large fleet of land based enemy planes," he related. "The ships scattered and then it was a question of individual action.

One Unfortunate Hit

"Over 37 Japanese planes began the attack on us and the attack continued with three hours of incessant bombing. We evaded them pretty well with the exception of one unfortunate hit.

"After we were hit the ship was in a very serious situation because we were badly flooded, had two fires, the main deck was covered with fuel oil and water. We had difficulty moving the wounded and the sick bay was completely demolished and we had to improvise a new one.

"Many of the men not detailed pitched in and helped pull the wounded out of the fire. Our steering gear was gone and other hits came while our gear was damaged and we were turning in circles.

"The attack continued while all hands were trying to stop the rush of water. Antiaircraft batteries were blazing away. I was trying to maneuver the ship as best I could. My reaction was fatalistic. There we were going in circles and that's all there was to it."

The ship, which lost 15 men killed in the bombing, made port in the Netherlands Indies where temporary repairs were made, then proceeded under its own power to Ceylon for additional repairs. Later at South Africa, the ship was made seaworthy for its trip back to the United States. Its trip from the place of the battle totaled 13,000 miles.

Resident of Washington

Captain Robinson, who is 50 years old, was born in Brooklyn, N. Y., and now is a resident of Washington, D. C. He was graduated from the Naval Academy in 1913, and is married to the former actress, Inez Buck.

The skipper repeatedly praised his officers and crew for "courage, stamina and resourcefulness" and their "continued cheerfulness." He spent 60 hours continuously on the bridge without sleep during the battle and subsequent fight to reach port.

Comdr. Nicholas B. Van Berger of San Francisco, he said, was a "tower of strength" who took over the executive officer's command when Comdr. W. B. Goggins was badly wounded.

"Commander Van Bergen was everywhere pulling men out and keeping me informed of the general situation in complete disregard for his own safety.

"Lieut. Comdr. Martin J. Drury of Jamestown, R. I., in charge of damage control, saved the ship. We had to have a bucket brigade of all hands to supplement the pumps and the men bailed without stopping for 48 hours. We had to steer 550 miles without a rudder."

Captain Robinson said Lieut. Hepburn A. Pearce of Boston took charge of a repair party and aided in checking the spread of fires and rescuing men. Lieut. (j. g.) Francis G. Blasdel of Coronado, Calif., entered burning areas to find out what repairs were necessary.

2 Invasion Columns Are Wiped Out; 500 Jap Troops Trapped

By the Associated Press

Chungking, China, May 8.—Falling with savage fury upon two Japanese columns thrusting into China along the Burma Road, counter-attacking Chinese wiped out one invading force of 1000 men, killed 500 out of another of equal strength and trapped the remainder Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek's high command announced tonight.

An official announcement said this triumph converted into disaster a Japanese attempt to flank Chinese troops of Lieut. Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell in the sector near Chefang, 25 miles inside the Yunnan Province from Burma.

The flying tigers of the American Volunteer Group protected Chinese bombers which battered Japanese troops and trucks in western Yunnan yesterday, an A. V. G. communique said.

Japs Step Up Air Attack

The Japanese aerial offensive in eastern China, aimed at destroying possible bases for bombing Japan proper, was stepped up today with bombings in Kiangsi and the east coast provinces of Chekiang and Fukien. Some 43 enemy planes in eight flights attacked various Kiangsi province towns, particularly the temporary capital of Kian. Other Japanees planes reconnoitered Hunan Province extensively.

The bloody fighting was said to have occurred yesterday afternoon when truckloads of Japanese reinforcements, moving up from the border town of Wanting, split into two forces and attacked both Chinese flanks.

Some enemy units penetrated behind the Chinese line, the communique indicated, but in the end, the battlefield was strewn with 1500 Japanese dead with between 400 and 500, all that were left, pocketed.

Spearheads May Be Destroyed

From the Chinese account, it appeared that the defenders might have destroyed Japanese spearheads which Tokyo claimed had driven past Chefang to Lungling, 25 miles deeper into China. The Chinese acknowledged yesterday the loss of Chefang itself.

(The Japanese announced officially their forces occupied Bhamo, head of the Irrawaddy navigation in Burma, last Sunday. With the fall of this town and Japanese occupation of Lashio earlier, Domei declared the Chungking government had been cut off completely from outside aid.)

In Hupeh Province the Chinese announced that 10,000 Japanese troops with more than 30 pieces of artillery started a drive in the Mienyang sector, 65 miles southwest of Hankow, last Tuesday but were intercepted by Chinese forces and heavy fighting ensued.

[The United Press said the Chungking communique charged that in their counteroffensive in the Wantao-Hsuying sector of northern Honan the Japanese had again resorted to gas attacks. The Chinese were prepared, however, and suffered only a few casualties.]

Thrust Beaten Back

Another Japanese thrust southward in the Shangyu and Shoahing areas of Chekiang Province was reported beaten back with heavy enemy casualties, while additional casualties were reported inflicted upon the invader in a battle on April 29 at Taoerhpan, Suiyan Province.

[Reliable sources said that the Japanese had instituated large-scale requisitioning of foodstuffs and other commodities throughout occupied North and Central China and were sending huge commodity shipments to apan, where crop failures and spoilage of stored grain were said to have caused a food shortage, the United Press said.]

Los Angeles' Little Tokyo Now Is a Ghost Town

Los Angeles, May 8 (AP).—Little Tokyo is no more.

The calm of desertion fell today over this city within a city—only a block from the heart of Los Angeles' downtown district, and the largest Japanese settlement in America—as the Army completed its evacuation.

There was much of drama but little of emotion as steel-helmeted troopers guided the remaining 2200 of Little Tokyo's 20,000 residents aboard buses for the Santa Anita assembly center, first stage of their journey into wartime exile.

Among them was Harry Ito, who said he fought in three World War I campaigns with the 125th Field Artillery.

"I thought," he said, "perhaps because of my war record my wife and I could stay. But we're going. My market—I had to sacrifice it. But orders are orders."

By the Associated Press

San Francisco, May 8.—President Manuel Quezon of the Philippines arrived with his family and executive staff today after a surprise voyage across the Pacific.

Secretary of Interior Ickes said in Washington that President Quezon would set up headquarters for the Philippine Commonwealth government in the National Capital.

"I have repeated over and over," Mr. Quezon said, "that the Philippines will stand by the United States to the bitter end. Thank God the facts proved I was right and that we still are standing by the United States. I am proud of the way the Filipino soldiers have conducted themselves in battle."

"I have used all kinds of transportation," he said, "under the sea, over the sea and in the air, and all the time there were the Japs somewhere around. My whole family was with me."

President Quezon will rest before proceeding to Washington to meet President Roosevelt. He was met here by Dr. Oscar L. Chapman, Assistant Secretary of the Interior, and Lieut. Gen. J. L. Dewitt, head of the Western defense command.

It was expected the party would remain here several days. Quezon has been ill recently and he said his wife, too, was very tired. "She is not a good sailor," he explained. "She didn't enjoy the trip."

Saga of the Free

London, May 8.—The Norwegian coastal vessel Galtesund has arrived at a British port manned by nine young Norwegian patriots who "kidnaped" the craft while it was plying between Oslo and Bergen, locked the German crew of 23 in the hold and set a course across the North Sea for England. The nine men found their method the easiest way of getting to London to join the free Norwegian forces, according to a report released today by the Norwegian government-in-exile here.

They boarded the Galtesund as passengers on the south coast of Norway. The vessel, bound for Bergen, had only an hour's run before its next stop. In that time the youths rounded up the crew at the point of revolvers and herded all 23 below.

Britain Will Invade

Birmingham, England, May 8 (AP). Sir Archbald Sinclair, air minister, told an audience tonight that Britain would invade the continent after the R. A. F. has smashed the Nazi air force.

Promising the Luftwaffe a "terrible summer," and contrasting the R. A. F.'s position now with what it was during the 1940 battle of Britain, Sinclair declared that "we knew that if we survived that battle our air power would surely grow."

"The German air force knows its power is waning," he continued. "That is our opportunity. We must give it no rest. We must hammer it out of shape. When that will be—how long it will take—I cannot tell, but then will come the invasion.

Fort George G. Meade, Md., May 8.—Maj. Alvin C. York himself could have done little better than Recruit Douglas Bazata, who stepped to the firing line on the rifle range and chalked up 198 hits out of a possible 200 score.

Witnesses' eyes popped, but it turned out that "Rookie" Bazata is a former Marine who holds medals for practically every type of firearm. He was once a member of the United States Marines' rifle team and was one of the first instructors for FBI agents at Quantico, Va.

Hasty Exit

New York, May 8 (AP).—The Free French submarine Minerve plopped out of the sea right into the midst of Nazi escort vessels, crash-dived and took attack after attack by depth bombs, but survived to reach port, it was learned today in an account published in the Free French bulletin.

The submarine torpedoed a Nazi tanker off the Norwegian coast, but, lightened by the discharge of the heavy torpedoes, popped to the surface in the midst of the tanker's convoy.

The submarine dived to the bottom "like a stone." Depth charges and bombs "rained on us" and in the first 40 minutes there was an explosion every two minutes, the captain related. "The Minerve was shaken and shivered like jelly."

After 13 hours the sub rose and, although damaged was able to make port under its own power.

Corpus Christi, Tex., May 8 (AP).—Mrs. George Clyde Hengy was found shot to death today in her home on fashionable Ocean Drive and officials said her son, George Clyde Hengy, jr., 16, and her 3-year-old daughter were missing.

Hengy reported he found his wife's body after arriving by plane from Austin, where he had been on business.

Also missing were the family car, 500 rounds of ammunition and a small caliber pistol. Mrs. Hengy was slain by a shotgun charge.

Prado Visits Naval Academy as Tributes to Him Mount

Military and diplomatic honors galore were heaped yesterday on President Manuel Prado of Peru who arrived in Washington by plane on Thursday.

Prado, here as the guest of the United States Government for a tour of Washington and defense industries, began the day by moving from the White House, where he spent the preceding night, to the historic Blair house, 1651 Pennsylvania Avenue. Later he journeyed to Annapolis for an inspection of the Naval Academy where a 21-gun salute roared welcome.

Returning to Washington late in the afternoon, the Peruvian mission which President Prado heads received members of the diplomatic corps at 5:30 p. m. in the Blair house, and last night at 8:15 Undersecretary of State Welles was host at a dinner honoring Prado at Oxon Hill Manor.

Ushered Into Residence

President Prado's removal to Blair house, his official residence until Monday, when he leaves for Detroit, was timed at exactly 10:48 a. m. Accompanied by members of his party and his United States military and naval aides, he was ushered into the residence by George T. Summerlin, chief of the State Department's protocol division.

Later, Pedro Bustamente, the visiting President's secretary, told reporters that President Prado and President Roosevelt toasted each other's countries at a formal state dinner in the White House Thursday night. President Roosevelt, Bustamente said, offered his toast to the people of both countries, pointing out that Peru was one of the good neighbors of South America, while President Prado, in reply, toasted to the health of his host and reaffirmed his country's complete solidarity to the cause of democracy.

When President Prado, accompanied by American Ambassador to Peru, R. Henry Norweb, and Army, Navy and State Department representatives, arrived at Annapolis early in the afternoon, he was greeted by Rear Admiral John B. Beardall, academy superintendent. While the 21-gun salute roared its tribute, the academy band played the Peruvian national anthem and the flag of Peru was broken from the mast of the station ship Reina Mercedes.

Following a luncheon in Prado's honor, the visitors were conducted on a tour of the academy, which was climaxed by a full-dress parade.

After watching the 2800 future naval officers pass in review, the Peruvian President said they were "magnificent." Later, in conversation with Admiral Beardall, Prado declared "our two navies are today united in defense of the hemisphere."

Today, the Peruvian chief will visit Arlington Cemetery and Mount Vernon and then be received by the governing board of the Pan American Union. Following a late afternoon press conference, he will be entertained at a Peruvian Embassy dinner to be followed by a reception.

President Prado's program for Sunday will open at 11 a. m. when he attends mass at St. Matthews Cathedral. Msgr. Edward Buckey, pastor, will greet the distinguished worshiper in the rectory before mass.

Prado's arrival Thursday touched off the first parade and fanfare Washington has known since Pearl Harbor. The first South American chief executive to visit the United States during his incumbency, he was greeted at Bolling Field by President Roosevelt and rode with him along a 4-mile route, lined by infantrymen with fixed bayonets, back to the White House. The state dinner which ended his first day here was the first since the war began.

Yesterday a White House secretary disclosed that President Roosevelt had received from President Prado some "beautiful pottery and a large silver tray."

Meantime, in St. Louis, Mayor William Dee Becker designated May 10-16 as "Peruvian Week" in connection with the formal opening last night of the Peruvian National Exposition, a comprehensive collection of the arts and crafts of ancient and modern Peru.

Opening of the exposition was timed to coincide with Prado's visit here. Several thousand objects, among them an eighteenth century altar piece from the Pericholli Palace in Lima, are included in the exposition.

Ghormley Heads Allies In South Seas

VICE ADM. GHORMLEY

By Clark Lee
Associated Press Staff Writer

Wellington, New Zealand, May 8. Vice Admiral Robert Lee Ghormley of the United States Navy will have supreme command over all land, sea and air forces of four allies in a vast South Pacific area.

Admiral Ghormley's command, which he is expected to assume shortly, will embrace vital island bases and outposts belonging to New Zealand, Australia, the Free French and the United States. In addition it will include some British territory, principally the Fiji Islands, for whose defense New Zealand assumed responsibility more than two years ago at London's request.

In general, Admiral Ghormley's authority will correspond with that of Gen. Douglas MacArthur in the Southwest Pacific area. Staff officers will maintain a close liaison.

The South Pacific commander will be responsible to Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, commander in chief of the United States Pacific Fleet, who will keep the Pacific War Council in Washington informed of developments through the Navy Department.

The interested nations agreed to an American naval command because the defense problem is primarily naval in an area of great sea distances with relatively few islands.

Strategists here recognize that it would be impossible to mass sufficient land and air forces at any one isolated base to stand off the maximum number of Japanese who might be sent against them.

Therefore holding the islands which safeguard the communication lines is up to the United States Navy. It is expected at least to cripple any approaching Japanese convoy.

Canadian and U. S. Fliers Brave Heavy Fire to Attack

By Sidney J. Williams
United Press Staff Writer

London, May 8.—A Canadian bomber squadron including American fliers, scored hits on seven German supply vessels off Holland last night, bringing to at least 19 the number sunk or damaged in the initial week of the R. A. F. coastal command's spring offensive against enemy shipping.

Pilot Officer G. L. Mosier, of Waverly, N. Y., hit one of the ships. He had damaged one ship Monday in his first operational flight.

Twelve supply vessels were in the heavily escorted convoy which the Hudson bombers attacked near the Dutch coast, the air ministry said. Two thrusts were made at them, the first time at dusk and the second in darkness some hours later. Antiaircraft fire was heavy. Two planes were missing.

"Second Front" Raids Pause

Bad weather broke the series of "second front" night raids on German industrial targets for the first time this week, but R. A. F. planes were over the continent laying mines in enemy waters and on patrol duty.

British defense shot down two of six German raiders harassing the south English coast during the night. It was one of the most impressive victories yet scored by night fighter planes and antiaircraft batteries. The best record was that of two German bombers downed of five attacking Exeter on April 23.

Raiders dropped a few bombs and fired cannon shells on a southeast coast town this afternoon in a 20-second attack that was over before people could reach shelters.

R. A. F. fighter planes escorted Boston (Douglas) bombers on a strong sweep over northern France tonight.

In announcing last night's bag climaxing the first seven days of ceaseless pounding at enemy shipping, the air ministry said that on the previous six days coastal command planes had "bombed and damaged at least 11 supply ships and a destroyer."

(A Stockholm dispatch quoted a reliable Norwegian source as saying that British raiders sank two minor German warships and a transport and blew up 30 buildings in scoring a direct hit on an ammunition dump in the harbor at Vardoe, on the extreme northeast tip of Norway astride the Allied supply line to Russia's Arctic ports.)

Navy Relief Goal Here Is Passed, Raised $75,000

Contributions to the Navy Relief Society campaign have reached $86,379.52, topping by more than $11,000 the original goal of $75,000, according to George A. Garrett, chairman of the Society's Citizens Committee of Washington.

But recent military setbacks at Bataan and Corregidor, Garrett said, have forced the Society to raise Metropolitan Washington's quota to $150,000. Committee members expressed confidence that the new objective would be reached.

Of the total donations received to date, $11,205 was turned in by the Special Gifts Committee, headed by Hoffman Philip. This committee's quota was $10,000. The Group Committee, under Harvey L. Jones and Charles B. Dulcan, collected $24,076.72; John J. McCloy of the Government unit reported contributions totaling $34,687.81 and $12,527.78 was collected by the Women's committee, headed by Mrs. C. C. Glover.

In addition, voluntary subscriptions received at campaign headquarters and through the mail and local radio stations netted $1,687.55.

Bulkeley Says Torpedo Boats Can Lick Japs

By the Associated Press

New York, May 8.—Lieut. John D. Bulkeley, whose torpedo boat exploits in the Philippines etched some of the brightest pages in recent naval history, came home from the war today and opined that "with a couple of hundred torpedo boats we could sweep the Japs from the sea."

Waiting for Bulkeley at the airport was his wife, "the happiest woman in the world," and waiting at his home in Long Island City was John Duncan Bulkeley, jr., whom his father had never seen—the child was born April 3—and Joan, 19 months old.

With Lieutenant Bulkeley on the trip from the Pacific Coast were Lieut. Robert Kelley of New York City, and Ensign Robert E. Cox, Watertown, N. Y., fellow-officers who have shared Bulkeley's adventures in Philippine waters.

Piloted MacArthur's Boat

Lieutenant Bulkeley piloted the torpedo boat on which Gen. Douglas MacArthur left Corregidor for a rendezvous with a bomber which eventually landed the general and his party in Australia.

Lieut. Bulkeley said that generally the Americans were outnumbered about 10 to 1 by the Japanese, whom he described as "very brave, very courageous and very pugnacious fighters who will fight until they are wounded or dead."

"But we can still lick them," he added. "Generally speaking, we can handle them at odds of five to one against us and as soon as our man power is on a one-to-one basis, it will be a steamrollerup."

On Ten-Day Furlough

Lieut. Bulkeley said he had a 10-day furlough and would spend most of it with his family. He said he expected to go to Washington soon and probably would be assigned later to the torpedo boat training center at Newport, R. I.

Mrs. Bulkeley admitted that she almost fainted from joy when she received the news her husband was safe in San Francisco, adding: "It was almost more than I could bear. I have always hoped, despite the terrible danger he faced when taking General MacArthur to Australia, that I would see him again . . . now I am the happiest woman in the world."

Reds Smother 3-Way Nazi Drive Into Karelia

By the Associated Press

Moscow, May 8.—The Red army and air force were reported in official dispatches tonight to have wrecked a three-way German offensive aimed from Finland into Soviet Karelia and to have driven large numbers of Nazi bombing planes from forward bases near Russia's vital water and rail communications in the Arctic.

German troops stabbing across the Karelian frontier at three points were driven from Russian soil with heavy losses, said frontier dispatches to the Communist newspaper Pravda.

From the Arctic front, the army newspaper Red Star reported that German bombing fleets, after a futile six weeks' offensive against the northern sea lanes and Russian rail lines over which increasing American and British supplies are moving via Murmansk and Archangel, had been forced to withdraw to more remote stations in Norway and Finland.

30,000 Nazi Casualties

Still other dispatches, dealing with recent weeks of heavy fighting from Leningrad southwest to Staraya Russia, estimated 30,000 Germans had been lost in counter-attacks which failed to take the initiative from the Red army.

The Karelian fighting represented the second attempt by Russia's enemies to invade this sector, for at the outbreak of the war a Finnish battalion of 1200 men, supported by two German companies, were driven back after crossing the frontier.

During the winter the area remained comparatively stable, with the Russians executing raids behind the enemy lines while the German command planned a spring attack. This, said Pravda, was entrusted entirely to German troops, who launched the assault last month.

Foe Thrown Back

Russian frontier forces ejected three German battalions soon after they crossed the border, the account continued.

Then a particularly intensive battle developed at one Russian post near the border. A German infantry assault was checked in its first day, the Germans suffering 340 casualties, and the forces settled down to a bloody three-day artillery duel.

The Germans retreated on the fifth day, fearing a counterattack, said Pravda. Two other columns were reported to have followed the first back into Finland.

In the northern air action the Russians, hammering steadily at five German airports, carried out 14 raids and in the last two days destroyed 43 German planes, Red Star said.

Philatelic Mail Banned by Navy

The Postoffice Department announced yesterday that it had instructed naval postoffices to discontinue the handling of philatelic mail, effective immediately. The order followed by a few days a similar notice to Army postoffices to discontinue cancellations.

It was explained that this type of mail interferred with the handling of normal mail and was stopped at the suggestion of both the War and Navy Departments.

U. S. May Subsidize Vegetable Growers To Assure Supply

Claude R. Wickard, Secretary of Agriculture, told a meeting of the National Canners Association here yesterday that the Government was prepared to subsidize vegetable growers if necessary to insure production of the enormous canning pack necessary to supply the armed forces, increased domestic needs and requirements for lend-lease operations.

He expressed the fear that the price level as frozen at the March figures would not be attractive enough to insure adequate production.

His pledge to subsidize if necessary was designed to insure adequate planting now, Wickard explained, adding that such subsidies would probably take the form of buying wholesale vegetables at prices above the market level, and reselling to retailers at a loss to enable them to put the products before the ultimate consumer at prices within the March scale.

Hours Set for Gas Ration Registration; 3-Gallon Limit on Pleasure Driving

D. C. Autoists May Enroll At 28 Schools

will be available for motorists who need their cars to get to and from work, while there will be "unlimited" motor fuel for the essential vehicles of commerce and industry, such as trucks, buses, taxicabs and tractors, and the autos of physicians and ministers.

Henderson's announcement meant the end of pleasure driving here and throughout most of the Eastern States where tanker sinkings and limited transportation facilities have made necessary a 50 per cent reduction in supplies for all uses.

"More Than He's Entitled To"

Asked by members of the House committee what he expected pleasure motorists to be able to do with two or three gallons a week, the price chief declared:

"He will be getting a damned sight more than he is entitled to, in view of the gasoline supply situation."

Henderson told the committee that the rationing order would affect about 9,500,000 motorists in the Eastern district. He estimated that approximately one-third of these, or more than 3,160,000 automobiles, would come in the "nonessential" class. The price chief said the "interim" order would be in effect until July 1, when more stringent curbs would be invoked.

Motoring visitors anywhere in the area will be subject to the same restrictions as residents. If they come on pleasure, their gasoline allotment will be in the pleasure class. If they come on business, they will be entitled to enough fuel to enable them to accomplish their mission.

According to Need

Henderson told the committee that motorists would be catalogued according to their gasoline needs. Those who are able to reach their places of employment on public carriers and who drive for pleasure will be placed in Class A and limited to from two to three gallons a week.

The next—or B class—will embrace those motorists whose driving is essential. This class has been subdivided, Henderson stated, into three sub-classes to cover degrees of need.

In class B-1, for example, motorists will be allowed 22 gallons for the entire seven-week period. Class B-2 motorists will get 30 gallons for the same period, while the allotment to July 1 for B-3 will be 38 gallons.

The pleasure driver's minimum ration would enable him to drive in the neighborhood of 30 miles a week, Henderson calculated. He said the motorist would be permitted to use all of his allowance on the first day the order goes into effect, or he might save his weekly ration for a trip later in the seven-week period from May 15 to July 1.

Essential Vehicles in Class X

The most important class, said Henderson, will be known as Group X, and will cover vehicles essential to commerce, business and the vocations. It is for the benefit of this group that the entire rationing program is being directed, to the end that such vehicles may have unlimited supplies for necessary use. In this group, the price administrator added, are approximately one-third of the automobiles in the Eastern area, and the owners of these vehicles will get two-thirds of the available gasoline.

To take care of special "hardship" cases—motorists not in Group X, but whose gasoline needs obviously cannot be filled in any of the B classes—extra gas allotments will be permitted.

Local rationing boards—Henderson's "committees of neighbors"—will decide in which class each motorist belongs. The automobile owner will be on his honor to make proper estimate to the boards of his "essential" gasoline consumption. Henderson expressed great confidence in his committees. As indication of their conservation, he said, the boards rationed about 80 per cent of the tires they were entitled to ration.

No Distinction of Cars

During "interim" rationing, Henderson stated, no distinction will be made between motorists with large, "gas-eating" cars, and those with lighter, more economical models. These factors will be taken into consideration when the permanent plan is instituted, he added.

Cantrell, Washington's chief rationer, declared that the only exceptions to rationing registration

Cantrell requested Washingtonians to register in alphabetical order—those whose last names begin with the letters A through L on Tuesday, M through R on Wednesday and S through Z on Thursday.

"Owners are urged to appear in one of the registration buildings as soon after 3 p. m. as convenient," he said. "They should not expect to be registered after 8 p. m., as it requires teachers about two hours to complete their reports after the closing hour."

3 D. C. Boards Handle Draft Appeals Under New System

Three groups of five members each are now handling District selective service classification appeals, in place of the old 10-member Board of Appeal, it was announced yesterday by Col. John C. O'Laughlin, former chairman of the old board and now coordinator of the new groups.

The addition of six new members to the original ten was pictured by Colonel O'Laughlin as a precautionary move, in anticipation of a larger number of appeals from February 16 regulations, and in accordance with selective service regulations which stipulate that there should be one appeal group of at least five men for each 70,000 registrants. Currently, the District has approximately 180,000 men registered for military service.

The new members, named by President Roosevelt, are:

Leo C. May, 2208 Wyoming Avenue Northwest, harware company executive; Wilson B. Nairn, 4901 Glenbrook Road Northwest, printing company official; Herbert J. Rich, 1526 Buchanan Street Northwest, shoe store executive; Jesse H. Mitchell, Negro, 111 W Street Northwest, bank president; Richard J. Gray, 4126 Military Road Northwest, labor representative, and Albert E. Steinem, 3821 Kanawha Street Northwest, attorney.

The three groups, each of which has one Negro member as well as representatives of labor, medicine, business and the law, held their organizational meetings last week and elected chairmen and secretaries. Personnel of each group follows:

Group 1—Dr. W. Cabell Moore, chairman, representing medicine; Judge James A. Cobb, Negro, secretary, law; John C. Locher, labor; May and Nairn, both representing business.

Group 2—Walter M. Bastian, chairman, law; Dr. C. Herbert Marshall, Negro, secretary, medicine; Cecil Owen, labor; Earl Godwin, newspaperman, and Rich, business.

Group 3—Dr. James A. Gannon, chairman, medicine; Dr. George C. Havenner, secretary, medicine; Mitchell, business; Steinem, law, and Gray, labor.

Colonel O'Laughlin said the effect of the new appointments has been to lighten the work on the original 10 members who formerly sat as one board.

Any type of appeal may be handled by any of the groups, and no distinction is made in the assignment of cases.

Wouldn't Lower Exemptions

Committee's Expert Proposes To Modify Treasury Tax Plan

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

The House Ways and Means Committee yesterday debated sharp modifications in Treasury proposals for a $4,300,000,000 bite out of individual incomes.

Counter income tax schedules were laid before the committee by its own staff of tax experts. These schedules tap personal earnings much more lightly and lower individual exemptions not at all.

Colin F. Stam, the committee's tax adviser, recommended an increase in the normal tax from 4 to 6 per cent, graduation of surtaxes from 11 to 80 per cent, and retention of the earned income credit.

This would raise only $1,900,000,000 gross revenue, against estimated Treasury receipts of $3,200,000,000 from a 12 to 86 range of surtaxes, and elimination of the earned income credit. Thursday the Treasury asked lowering of individual exemptions and a slice in the credit for dependents to raise another $1,100,000,000.

The Treasury's surprise drive for a deep cut in exemptions was renewed immediately after Stam outlined his modified rates. Stam left the base where it is, $750 for single persons, $1500 for married and $400 for each dependent.

But as the committee adjourned, there were indications the Treasury wasn't merely "trading" when it marked down exemptions to $600 for single persons and $1,200 for married. All afternoon, Treasury economists pounded home their argument that only taxes, deep and steep, can cut away excess purchasing power that is pushing for inflation.

A compromise, either combining lower exemptions with Stam's modified individual rates, or stepping up the latter on the present tax base, was privately suggested by some members as a likely alternative to a showdown between the two plans.

A retail sales tax remained in the picture despite Administration efforts to head it off by the exemption cut. One member predicted that before final enactment the bill may provide both.

"We haven't taken a vote or decided a thing," Chairman Robert L. Doughton told reporters as he left the committee room. "By Monday, we should be ready to vote both on exemptions and individual rates. I don't think the question of a sales tax will come up until the very last thing. If the bill is short of revenue, the committee can decide whether it wants to make it up there.'"

Although Stam proposed a 2 per cent increase in the normal tax, his modified surtax schedules would fall much more lightly on the middle and lower brackets than Treasury's proposals to more than double the tax on these incomes.

For example Stam's starting rate of 11 per cent would spread over the first $2000 of surtax net income as does the existing first bracket 6 per cent surtax. Treasury rates would step the tax up every $500 in this bracket, with a 12 per cent rate on the first 500, 15 per cent on the second $500, 18 per cent on the next $500, and 20 per cent on the last $500.

A married couple with no dependents would buy about $287 on $3000 under the Stam plan, it was estimated. Under the Treasury program, with lowered exemptions, they would pay $357. The original Treasury proposal, retaining present exemptions, would have exacted $285. The tax on such a couple under present law is only $138.

No official schedules were made public on either the Stam plan or the revised Treasury plan, but members said the Stam taxes would fall about $1000 lighter on $10,000 incomes than the Morgenthau proposal.

Stam told the committee that the Treasury's estimate of $3,200,000,000 revenue from surtax increases did not allow for the effect of new corporate taxes in drying up dividends now reaching individual taxpayers. Allowance for these would bring Treasury revenue estimates down to about $2,300,000,000, he said.

Similarly, his gross estimate of $1,900,000,000 revenue from his own plan did not allow for the effect of corporate taxes on dividends. He estimated, "net" returns from his own plan at $1,300,000,000.

If the committee accepts the Stam rates and throws out the Treasury request for lowered exemptions, it would fall about $2,400,000,000 shy of what the Treasury now is seeking from individuals as such. Previously the committee drew up more than a half billion dollars short of what the Treasury was seeking from corporations. Thus the committee stands to come out with three billion less than the Administration wants from corporations and individuals unless it turns to stiffer schedules, or resorts in the end to a sales tax.

Gas Rationing Won't Worry U. S. Officials

Limousine-riding Government officials need have no fear that gasoline rationing will cramp their style.

Motor vehicles bearing license plates indicating they are used by Federal, State, local or foreign governments are exempt from rationing which goes into effect Friday in the East, the Office of Price Administration disclosed yesterday.

This means that those bureaucrats who are accustomed to stretching out their legs in the rear seats of Government-owned cars, piloted by chauffeurs, may continue to ride to and from work alone while other motorists double up with their neighbors, five and six to an automobile, to conserve gasoline and tires.

Young Plans to Walk

The red-white-and-blue U. S. license plates on Federal limousines will serve as blank-check ration cards.

But at least one Government official—District Commissioner John Russell Young—said yesterday that he didn't plan to take advantage of the privilege, which is expected to be extended to the District-owned Commissioners' limousines, although they do not bear the red-white-and-blue tags.

He said he would start walking to work, "immediately." He used to walk to the White House when he covered it as a reporter, Young said, adding that he thought it would be pleasurable to resume the practice between his home on Jefferson Place and the District Building.

Mason Shares His Car

Commissioner Guy Mason said he had been sharing his limousine almost daily with other residents of the Westchester Apartments. Yesterday Judge Joseph Jackson of the Court of Customs and Patents Appeals, and A. Leftwich Sinclair, auditor for the District Court, rode down with him, Mason said. Sometimes Mason picks up persons waiting for buses or street cars, he said.

A daily inspection tour of engineering work in the District prevents Commissioner Charles W. Kutz from sharing his limousine, he said. He begins the tour at 8 a. m., on leaving home.

Another District official who practices his preachments is Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer, who has been supervising the formation of 'share-your-car" systems among Government employes. Van Duzer takes turns with neighbors in bringing his privately-owned automobile downtown.

Jones Foresees Ample Supply Of Aluminum

By the Associated Press

Secretary of Commerce Jones asked Congress yesterday to give five billion dollars of additional borrowing authority to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation so that it might carry on a vast program of war plant expansion, purchase of vital materials and the financing of many other war activities.

Testifying before a Senate Banking Subcommittee, Jones said that among other things the new funds would be needed to finance an aluminum plant expansion program, which he said would result in an annual capacity of 2,100,000,000 pounds of the metal by early 1943.

"It looks like we are going to have ample aluminum," the lending chief asserted.

Production, he said, already has reached a rate of one billion pounds annually compared with 300 million pounds two years ago and 540 million pounds last year.

Jones told the committee that commitments by the RFC and its subsidiaries in the wartime lending and spending program now totaled $14,300,000,000, of which $576,000,000 had been canceled for various reasons and 585 million dollars repaid.

The total, he said, was divided between $1,500,000,000 in loans and the rest in purchases or investments. About 11 billion dollars of the total, he testified, had not yet been disbursed, although outlays had now reached 10 million dollars or 12 million dollars a day. Under present law the RFC may borrow $9,130,000,000, he said.

"We've done a lot of interesting things, all of which cost money," Jones remarked.

He said that commitments for aircraft plant production totaled $1,912,000,000; magnesium plants, 389 million dollars; synthetic rubber plants, 700 million dollars; steel plants, 734 million dollars; ordnance manufacture, 468 million dollars, and shipyards, 182 million dollars, out of total Defense Plants Corporation commitments of $6,391,000,000.

Magnesium production, Jones told the committee, would reach 600 million pounds annually under the program compared with 33 million pounds a year ago, while synthetic rubber production would be 800,000 tons per year, compared with 25,000 tons last year. The program includes an increase of 10 million tons in the annual capacity of steel plants.

Comdr. Burrow's Rites Set Today; Air Crash Victim

Comdr. John G. Burrow, U. S. N., of Arlington, Va., who was killed last Saturday when a sleeper transport plane crashed and burned at Salt Lake City, Utah, will be buried with military honors in Arlington Cemetery at 11 a. m. today.

The burial rites will be conducted by Comdr. William H. Rafferty, Chaplain Corps., U. S. N. Honorary pallbearers will be these Naval officers, Comdr. N. K. Dietrich, Capt. H. A. Badt, Capt. H. M. Briggs, Comdr. B. B. Biggs, Comdr. C. B. Lee and Comdr. Joseph Talbert, and Maj. R. Jordahl of the Marine Corps. There will be no chapel service.

Commander Burrow, who had been on duty with the Bureau of Navigation since September, was en route back to Washington after inspecting a naval training station site when the crash occurred. He resided at 1921 North Highland Street, Arlington, and is survived by his wife and two daughters, Betty Joanne, 19, and Laurel Jean, 13.

Defense Scores In Civil Service Records Case

Eight checks totaling $48, offered as proof that records allegedly stolen from the Civil Service Commission were sold either to or by defendents charged with the theft, were withdrawn as evidence by the Government yesterday when defense counsel showed that five of them bore dates preceding the time of the theft chargd. Consisting chiefly of lists of names of U. S. employes, the records are supposed to have been sold for use as mailing lists and for similar purposes.

The checks all were issued in 1940 and bore the dates April 24, May 1, May 14, May 25, July 28, Aug. 10, Sept. 21 and Oct. 5. Defense counsel asked that they be thrown out because the indictments charged thefts of records between August, 1940, and January, 1941.

The checks were offered as evidence by Assistant District Attorney Charles B. Murray, prosecutor, during examination of Eugene C. Sauer, an agent of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Records Started in July

Sauer testified that Miss Katherine Kay, a defendant, told him the checks were in payment for the records obtained by Harlan G. Crandall, also a defendant, who formerly was employed at the Civil Service Commission.

James A. O'Shea, counsel for Crandall, protested that the Civil Service Commission records which bore personnel information, did not come into being until July, 1940.

Justice James W. Morris, who is presiding at the trial being heard by a jury in District Court, adjourned proceedings at this point until Monday at 10 a. m.

John D. Morris, executive vice president of La Salle Extension University, Chicago, testified earlier that he had been offered a trial list of names which were represented to him as of Civil Service employes. He said the "salesman" was Walter A. C. Camp, president of the Vita-Health Food Co., a defendant.

Camp was quoted by Morris as saying that he had a general list for sale at 1½ cents a name and a special list of persons particularly suitable for correspondence courses at 2½ cents a name. Morris said Camp stated he had access to more than 200,000 names of Federal workers.

Transcription Charged

William Skakel, who described himself as a distributer of hearing aids, said he was approached about a list of names by Lawrence L. Haynes, another defendant, son of the late Lynford J. Haynes, proprietor of the Standard Business Service, where the records were allegedly transcribed for private purposes.

Skakel said Haynes showed him a sample list which included information concerning physical defects. The witness declared he agreed to purchase a trial list as he was interested in Federal workers with hearing difficulties.

Haynes said that the special Civil Service Commission records were obtained as "waste paper" after the Government had used the information for its own purposes, the witness testified.

Haynes was also quoted by Skakel as saying that "a great many" Washington business firms had purchased similar lists.

Capt. Francis I. McGarraghy of the Army Air Force, former FBI agent, told the court that 20,683 personnel record sheets were recovered at the outset of investigation in the case.

Also charged with stealing the records is Werner J. Orbach, vice president of the Vita-Health Food Co. The trial began Monday.

Cubans Donate Aluminum to U. S.

As a friendly gesture to the United States and in the interest of the united war effort of North and South American countries, the people of Cuba have presented four tons of scrap aluminum to this country, the War Department announced recently.

Lieut. Col. Felipe Munilla, military and naval attache, Cuban Embassy, informed the War Department that he had received a bill of lading announcing the arrival of aluminum at New York. Col. Jaime Marine, retired, president of the National Sports Commission of Cuba, arranged for the shipment of the aluminum after it has been collected by the people of Cuba.

The War Department has acknowledged receipt of the scrap aluminum, which is now in the hands of a commercial smelting and refining company for processing.

Senate Group Begins Probing Water Setup

The Senate-authorized probe into the District water supply system and rate structure was begun by a Senate District Subcommittee yesterday, with a five-point plan of investigation outlined by Chairman McCarran.

It was understood that the services of an investigator, expert in the water system field, had been secured, but announcement was withheld pending his formal acceptance.

Meanwhile McCarran expressed belief that the probe would show no necessity for a rise in the city's water rates. It was a proposal to increase rates that led to the investigation.

He said he felt that if the Federal Government paid for the almost 15 million gallons which it now uses daily for nothing, and if a few minor difficulties were disposed of, the local water system would be put on its feet financially and rates kept unchanged.

Among the smaller problems which would have to be met, he listed the control of leakage, the adjustment of special supplies such as those needed by the Navy Yard and Bolling Field, and provision of water to meet large demands by the Government in outlying areas—at spots like the new War Department Building.

"If all these things are taken care of," McCarran said, "I feel sure that the water fund surplus would be on the increase instead of the decrease."

The five lines of investigation which he outlined for the group included:

1. Inquiry into the Federal-District government relationship in the matter of distributing and selling water.

2. Chronological survey of the development and financing of the Washington aqueduct and water system.

3. Consideration of the assertion that all Federal money originally paid out for the water system has since been repaid in free water—which has led many to ask why the Federal authorities should continue to operate the water supply system, leaving only distribution to D. C. control.

4. Inquiry into the relationship between the District, the U. S. and Arlington County in the supplying of water to the latter area—water for which the Federal government is paid rather than the District.

5. A final inquiry into the necessity for any raise in the local water rates, as suggested by a recent House committee report on the District Appropriation Bill.

C.I.O. Leader Hits Telegraph Merger

The proposed merger of Western Union and Postal Telegraph would be less practicable than "a grant, loan or subsidy to Postal Telegraph for the duration of the war," Joseph P. Selly, presidet of the American Communications Association (C. I. O.), declared yesterday.

Selly told a Senate Interstate Commerce subcommittee that an investigation revealed that the communications systems of the United States, including telephone and telegraph, are nearing their peak loads, and that any lessening of existing communication facilities is not only unwise but may be disastrous.

Wickard Urges Grains Be Used For Rubber

By the Associated Press

Secretary Wickard yesterday threw his influence behind demands from farm-minded lawmakers that large quantities of surplus wheat, corn, and other agricultural commodities be converted into synthetic rubber.

The Agriculture Secretary told a Senate Agriculture Subcommittee that he now was convinced that "use of parts of our reserve stocks of corn and wheat . . . offers the best possibility of greatly increasing our production of synthetic rubber as early as next year."

Virtually all the synthetic rubber to be produced under Government programs already initiated would be manufactured from petroleum bases.

Wickard testified that this country's wheat supply now was the largest in history and that not less than 80,000,000 bushels of this should be converted into rubber for tires badly needed by farmers to maintain their automobiles, trucks and other machines for new wartime food and production demands.

The Cabinet officer's testimony obviously pleased Chairman Gillette (Democrat) of Iowa and Senators Norris (Independent) of Nebraska, Wheeler (Democrat) of Montana and McNary (Republican) of Oregon, of the committee, but Wheeler bluntly commented that the Agriculture Department and its scientists had been "asleep at the switch."

"Rubber Trust" Cited

Asserting that a world rubber trust had been holding up prices for 10 years, Wheeler told Wickard that if the Agriculture Department had "been on its toes" it would have perfected processes for converting farm products into alcohol, rubber and numerous other articles now needed for the war effort.

In reply, Wickard observed that the department could spend for experimentation only such funds as Congress gave it for that purpose.

Norris and Gillette asked Wickard what he was doing about production of rubber from grains.

The Secretary said he had held numerous informal conferences with Chairman Donald M. Nelson of the War Production Board and other officials who have been awarding Government contracts and funds for building of synthetic rubber plants.

While the Agriculture Subcommittee questioned Wickard, Secretary of Commerce Jesse Jones told the Senate Banking Committee today that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation already had pledged $700,000,000 to build synthetic rubber plants expected to have an annual capacity of some 800,000 tons.

Both Cabinet members told their respective audiences they had no knowledge that more than 1,000,000 tons of natural rubber was available from trees in the Western Hemisphere. An assertion that this quantity could be obtained from Central and South American rubber trees was made Thursday by Elliot E. Simpson, New York rubber dealer.

60,000 Tons From Brazil

Wickard said there was a large number of rubber trees in Brazil but transportation and other difficulties indicated not more than 50,000 or 60,000 tons of rubber annually could be obtained from there.

Norris said he had gained the impression that there was opposition to the construction of plants to process farm products into industrial alcohol, particularly from the distilling industry. Wickard replied that he was aware that there had been "resistance" but that he did not know whence it came.

Earlier, Wheeler had said that the people of the country were being confused.

"One day people are told that there is plenty of rubber, the next day that we'll have to take the tires off their cars."

New Zealand Won't Call Troops Home

By the Associated Press

Wellington, N. Z., May 8—Despite the imminent threat of Japanese invasion, New Zealand has decided not to recall its troops from distant parts of the world, because it would involve double use of available shipping to carry replacements to fronts now held by New Zealanders and to bring the New Zealanders here.

Every available man is being trained for active battle duty in defense of the islands. Every tenth New Zealander is now in uniform.

The Capital is enmeshed in "a vicious circle" in its effort to control venereal diseases, said Ray H. Everett, director of the District Social Hygiene Society and chairman of the subcommittee on social protection and venereal disease, civilian mobilization division.

From legal, medical and social standpoints the program is in need of drastic overhauling, he declared, citing light punishment of prostitutes, poor follow-up in medical treatment and inadequate social services in rehabilitation.

Everett recommended:

A study of arrest, prosecution and sentencing relating to prostitution "as a guide to sounder and more uniform justice."

One hundred new beds at Gallinger Hospital for infectious cases of syphilis and gonorrhea.

Social service workers for individual casework, including vocational guidance and occupational therapy.

Additional police and health department personnel.

Improvement of antivenereal disease services in penal institutions.

Union Offers Program to Increase Output Of Aviation Gas, Speed Oil Transportation

An eight-point program to increase aviation gas production and provide more efficient transportation of petroleum from oil fields and refineries to consuming centers was urged yesterday by the Oil Workers International Union, an affiliate of the Congress of Industrial Organizations.

O. A. Knight, president of the union, who made the plan public after submitting it to Donald Nelson, head of the War Production Board, requested immediate establishment of a joint labor-management-Government production committee to increase production for war needs.

The union's program calls for:

1. Greater training of skilled workers, retraining of experienced workers and up-grading of present employes.

2. Firefighting and first-aid training to cut losses from fires and explosions, and training of special crews to extinguish "oil field flares" during blackouts and air raids.

3. More efficient use of pipelines, construction of steel reinforced concrete barges to carry oil through inland waterway, and full-time operation of loading and unloading facilities.

4. Strict reservation of tetra-ethyl lead to insure adequate supplies of high octane aviation gas.

5. Conservation of steel through use of available equipment.

6. Pooling of small refineries to keep small, independent operators in production, and a survey of their resources for production of high octane gas, butadiene and tuolene.

7. Standardization of wages and hours "to keep available man power in the industry in order to meet expanding war production demands.

8. Transfer of available workers from nonessential plants to essential plants, giving the workers seniority protection and the right to return to their original jobs at the end of the war.

Repeal of 18-Hour Parking Limit Urged

Immediate repeal of the 18-hour parking limit was urged by the American Automobile Association in a letter delivered to the Commissioners yesterday.

The question of whether, in the overcrowded Capital with gasoline and tires at such premium, motorists should be required to move their cars every day was first brought to the Commissioners' attention several weeks ago. Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer has the matter under consideration.

In indorsing suspension of the parking limit, District A. A. A. Manager Washington I. Cleveland reminded the Commissioners of the cooperation they have received from the driving public in the Share-Your-Car movement.

"While the 18-hour limit may be perfectly reasonable and necessary in normal times, it is our belief that under present conditions no regulation should be enforced which causes motorists to use their cars unnecessarily," Cleveland said. "Therefore we strongly recommend that the Commissioners suspend this regulation for the duration of the emergency."

Currier Union Votes to Leave CIO for AFL

By the Associated Press

Detroit, May 8.—C. I. O. union employes of the Currier Lumber Co. have voted to affiliate with the American Federation of Labor, their union president announced today, renewing a controversy that flared into a national issue last fall.

Hurley Kistner, president of the Currier local of the C. I. O.'s United Construction Workers Organizing Committee, said that "general dissatisfaction with the service given by the international union" caused the change.

Ed Thal, secretary of the Detroit Building Trades Council (A. F. L.), said the action was taken at a meeting attended by 85 per cent of some 700 C. I. O. unionists employed by Currier. He said a new closed shop, check-off contract with the management would be sought. The U. C. W. O. C. union was reported to have held a five-year contract with the company, negotiated last year.

The Currier labor situation drew Congressional attention last fall when the Federal Works Agency denied the company a contract for a 300-dwelling defense housing project at Wayne, Mich., on which Currier was low bidder by $431,000. An A. F. L. spokesman told a Senate committee that award of the contract to the Currier company would cause "industrial strife beyond the power of A. F. of L. leaders to control."

A. F. of L. unionists had staged unsuccessful strikes at Currier lumber yards prior to the company's recognition of the C. I. O. union local. The construction workers' union is headed by A. D. Lewis, brother of former C. I. O. chief John L. Lewis.

Officers of the Currier local said it would be affiliated with the Building Trades Council rather than with A. F. L. craft unions.

In Washington, A. D. Lewis declined to say what view or action his organization would take in the face of the switch of affiliation.

"I know nothing whatsoever about it," said Lewis, "except that we have a contract with Currier. I have no comment." He confirmed that it is a 5-year contract negotiated last year.

U. S. Steel Bows to Union's Demands in Contract Row

arbiter of labor disputes within the law."

The announcement was regarded as significant as the first agreement on a membership maintenance shop by any subsidiary of the Steel Corporation, which maintains open shop contracts in tis steel plants.

From Washington, Chairman William H. Davis of the WLB, telegraphed his appreciation of the company's acceptance of the board's order.

Davis' message to Korndorff:

"I believe that this acceptance, which finally determines a long dispute, will have the happiest possible effect upon the war production in which we are all so deeply concerned.

"You understand, of course, that any provisions of the final written agreement beyond those specified in the directive order of the board are subject to mutual agreement of the parties to the dispute."

Its bearing on a controversy between the Steel Workers Organizing Committee and the principal independent steel producers was also pointed out. The "Little Steel" companies are now engaged in a WLB hearing in which the maintenance-of-membership provision is a principal union demand.

The WLB order to Federal ordered that members of the union who were in good standing at the time of signing should maintain their membership and that all who voluntarily joined the union after the signing of the contract should also maintain standing, or be discharged from employment.

Federal's announcement, signed by L. H. Korndorf, president, said:

"Any employe who wishes to escape the penalty of being so discharged may do so, under the terms of this directive, by requesting this company, in writing, to deduct from his pay each month and to pay to the union a sum equivalent to his union dues and any fines imposed by the union.

Entitled to Quit Union

"Before the present contract is signed, which will not be earlier than ten days from now, any present member of the union who does not wish to be bound by the maintenance-of-membership provision may withdraw from the union by giving notice to that effect to the union.

"In the opinion of counsel, this withdrawal from the union . . . prevents this determination of the National War Labor Board from being contrary to the provisions of the National Labor Relations Act.

"An employe who is now a member of the union is thus given the opportunity to decide for himself whether or not he is to be bound, for the duration of the contract, by this maintenance provision. Any employe who may voluntarily join the union in the future will have made his individual decision in the matter. . . ."

Jurisdictional Dispute Ties Up War Plant

The War Department said yesterday that a "strictly jurisdictional dispute between A. F. L. unions" was holding up expansion of a St. Louis plant manufacturing critical material for the department.

In an expansion of the Omar Machine Co.'s plant, officials said, members of the International Association of Machinists (A. F. L.) were given the job of installing several thousand dollars worth of Army-owned machinery.

Claiming that the installation should be made by the carpenters' union, the department said, the eight carpenters, electricians and plumbers employed on the job walked out Tuesday night.

"The St. Louis Building Trades Council has been unable to remedy the situation," an official said, "and we are gravely concerned about it. The construction job is small and only a few men are involved, but the material manufactured by the company is of urgent importance for war production."

Bomber Production Increased 4 Times in Year

By Felix Cotten

International News Service Staff Writer

Baltimore, May 8.—Four times more bombers than last year are inching their way off production lines of the Glenn L. Martin Co. and the peak is still to come, probably in August.

The output of bombing planes for Britain and America in this one plant is short many millions annually in dollar value deliveries, due principally to delays in obtaining necessary aluminum stocks, Glenn L. Martin, president, told correspondents on the National Association of Manufacturers "production for victory" tours of war industries.

Martin said, "the vital aircraft manufacturing industry still has a priority rating behind battleships, trucks and tanks.

"We need metal, we need instruments, we need steel alloys and other essential parts to turn out bombers but in spite of these deficiencies we have upped our production four times within a year and are on the way to peak production in August."

[WPB Chairman Donald Nelson on February 18 announced he had put all materials needed for military aircraft into the same top priority rating as those for tanks and naval vessels. He also said a plan would be established for direct allocation of materials needed for all armaments that have top priority ratings. Nelson said he had acted because of a "psychological barrier" in the minds of aircraft manufacturers because tanks and ships had higher priority ratings. He added that the change in ratings would not increase the materials available for aircraft but would provide a "psychological push" in that industry.—Editor's note.]

The correspondents on this tour saw long rows of finished bombers outside the gigantic hangars of the Martin plant, awaiting delivery. They saw dozens of additional planes moving slowly forward on assembly lines inside the plants. They saw tens of thousands of workers—the number has been more than doubled in the last six months—turning out parts for the three types of two-engined bombers which Martin produces.

These are the B-26, 13-ton medium bombers for the United States Army, the PBM-3, nicknamed the "Mariner," a heavy bombing flying boat for the United States Navy, and the 187, the "Baltimore," a medium bomber for the British which soon will be adapted for U. S. Army use.

The actual rate of production must remain a military secret but not a few of these speedy, well-armed and highly maneuverable bombers are leaving the plant for action each month, Martin said.

He explained that the production lag was due to inability to obtain sufficient metal, especially aluminum, under the priority rating of A-1-A, Group 1, which has been given to the airplane industry by the War Production Board.

He said his plants could "come up to schedule" if the priorities classification were raised.

Plane production has been standardized to such an extent that manufacture of hulls, gun turrets, wings, wheels and other parts has become automatic, he said. Sixty-five per cent of any bomber now in production is made under subcontracts, he added.

He said his company receives only about $150,000 for a bomber whose total cost is more than $250,000, with the remainder being paid to the sub-contractor.

Child Congress Closes Today

On the eve of its final session, the Pan American Child Congress yesterday adopted a "Declaration of Opportunity for Children," which will be formally signed at the closing conference this afternoon.

Miss Katharine F. Lenroot, president of the Congress and chief of the Children's Bureau, told the delegates Dr. Manuel Prado, President of Peru, may attend today's finale.

The "Declaration of Opportunity" covers seven fields: Opportunity for every child to have the care and discipline of family life; enjoy wholesome living; obtain an education; develop responsibility; participate in social and recreational activities; take his place as a citizen in community life, and enjoy the free choice of an occupation.

At the final session today in the Pan American Union Building, Dr. Pedro de Alba, assistant director of the Union, will make the opening address.

Judge Parts Boy and Dog

ANOTHER PET?—OH, NO!—Wendell Glaab, 8, takes a last sorrowful look at a dog that had been his pal for seven months. Judge Andrew T. Park yesterday in Pittsburgh ordered the pet, which the boy's father had found, returned to Mrs. Sydney M. Kelsea, its owner. In the judge's private chambers, Mrs. Kelsea holds Wendell's hand in a vain effort to comfort him. Judge Park's offer to buy the lad another dog didn't cheer him

Congress Will Get 36 Billion War Bill Soon

Representative Snyder (Democrat) of Pennsylvania, chairman of the War Subcommittee of the House Appropriations Committee, yesterday disclosed that estimates for the 36 billion dollar military appropriations bill will reach the Capitol about May 25, and will be sped to the House floor after about ten days of hearings.

Snyder said the War Department estimates are scaled "to a 5-year war, if we need to fight that long to win."

"The only way to win a war is to prepare for the worst, and this bill will be really 'all out.' In it will be funds to reach all of the President's 1943 military production goals and equipment toward a five million-man Army."

Last of the big war appropriation measures of the session, it will face a clear track in House and Senate, and in any event will be passed before the recess now being discussed by leaders to begin in late June or early July.

But leaders despaired of passing the new tax bill through both Houses in time for a summer recess. The Ways and Means Committee, still at loggerheads over conflicting Treasury and staff revenue plans, may not clear their bill through the House before the latter part of June. At least a month of Senate committee hearings and discussion were in prospect once the bill reaches the Senate. Chairman George of the Senate Finance Committee said he was disposed to press ahead with hearings, but these could be held during a Congressional recess.

Japs Reported Set To Invade India

off India's southwest tip, had been newly reinforced with troops from Northern Rhodesia, Kenya, Uganda, Tanganyika, Nyasaland and Zanibar. They represent all arms of the service and are veterans of the conquest of Ethiopia from the Italians. Their numbers were not disclosed.

On Madagascar, where the British took the naval base and port of Diego Suarez Thursday, there was no definite word on the extent of any remaining French resistance. Reports from Vichy said fighting still was in progress in the mountains a little distance to the south.

The Vichy radio said the total defense force on the big island was 7000 men and that only 1300 had been engaged in the Diego Suarez fight.

'Liberty' Ship Every 4½ Days New Schedule

By Roy P. Porter

Associated Press Staff Writer

Baltimore, Md., May 8.—The Bethlehem Steel Co.'s shipbuilding division is answering the German submarine menace by turning out 10,000-ton "Liberty" merchant ships at the rate of one every four and one-half days.

This was revealed today by A. B. Homer, vice president of the company, who said the rate would be stepped up to two a week this summer.

Bethlehem has erected 16 ways in the Baltimore area to build Liberty ships since it started mass production of these vessels a year ago. The liberty is a single-type ship designed for mass production particularly to meet the submarine threat.

Meanwhile, other Bethlehem yards in this area are repairing torpedoed tankers and sending them back to sea in periods ranging from a few weeks to two months, and are building new tankers and converting old ships to war uses.

A Ship in 90 Days

A torpedo usually leaves a hole in the tanker's steel side into which the average bungalow could be moved, but the sturdy ship, after losing part of its cargo, succeeds in limping into port unless the attacking submarine completely wrecks it. J. M. Willis, vice president and general manager of Bethlehem, said the company is completing Liberties now in a period of about 100 days from the time the keels are laid.

"But we are going to beat that time," he said. "We are getting it down to 90 days, and we are going to do better even than that."

Incidentally, the Liberty, a prefabricated ship, is something unheard of except in time of war, and while a streamlined job, it's no "ugly duckling."

The extraordinary speed which these ships are being built can be appreciated, Homer pointed out, when it is recalled that the maritime commission's original schedule called for completion of a libert in 200 days.

Million Tons of Shipping

Bethlehem, he said, will deliver "well over 100 merchant and naval vessels this year," of which about 65 will be Liberties. There will be one battleship in this list, and two cruisers, completed months ahead of schedule.

"We will deliver," Homer said, "about a million tons of merchant ships this year, which will be three times what we did last year, and equal to the total merchant ship production of all American shipyards last year."

Thus far, Bethlehem has laid keels for 40 Liberties, launched 24 and delivered 16. Five were delivered in April, and the May schedule calls for delivery of seven.

The steel framework is prefabricated at another Bethlehem plant and sent to the shipyard, where the parts are assembled in sequence and hauled into place by giant cranes.

Wallace Sees Axis In Desperate Blow

come in the critical summer months, he declared:

"We may be sure that Hitler and Japan will cooperate to do the unexpected—perhaps an attack by Japan against Alaska and our Northwest Coast at a time when German transport planes will be shuttled across from Dakar to furnish leadership and stiffening to a German uprising in Latin America."

Wallace apparently referred to reports that the Vichy government might openly permit use of French African territory by Axis forces.

Praising the "remarkable job" being done by business and labor in the war production effort, Wallace said he was confident the American people would "joyously deny ourselves" so there might be a 30 per cent improvement in transportation.

In this connection, he outlined four duties which he said must be carried out to win the four freedoms outlined by President Roosevelt. He listed these as:

"1. The duty to produce to the limit.

"2. The duty to transport as rapidly as possible to the field of battle.

"3. The duty to fight with all that is in us.

"4. The duty to build a peace—just, charitable and enduring."

LAST DAY!

Still Time to See and Hear and Thrill Over America's Greatest Carnival of Song and Dance

Tomorrow, the National Folk Festival moves on to New York for its big opening at Madison Square Garden. Today is your last chance to see this tuneful spectacle in its entirety on the stage of Constitution Hall. Don't miss it!

Ever see real Indians on the war path, beating a weird tom-tom rhythm for the dance before a battle? Painted Iroquois and Kiowa warriors "whoop it up" with zip and zest at the Folk Festival!

Ever see a square dance from the hills of North Carolina? Watch comely lads and lassies whirl to the shouts of a jolly caller.

See authentic folk dances—colorful, exciting—inherited from the French, Scotch, English—brilliantly interpreted to the tempo of lovely, lively folk tunes.

Hear music galore—sea chanteys, lumberjack songs, miners' songs, traditional British ballads, deep-South spirituals, French-Canadian songs, soldiers' chorus!

Color-rich costumes, gorgeous scenery, a cast of hundreds from 25 States make the National Folk Festival a spectacle that's too good to miss! See it—hear it—thrill over it—this afternoon or tonight.

Mother's Day Services Are Planned By Varied Church Groups Tomorrow

Six Sets of Twins To Attend Rites In Takoma Park

By Robert Tate Allan
The Post Church Editor

Silver-haired mothers of men who man the country's Flying Fortresses, and fresh-faced mothers of tots who toy with miniature planes in blissful ignorance of the portent of the world struggle will be honored at religious services tomorrow as part of the Nation-wide Mother's Day observance.

Mothers will receive floral and oral corsages at services, they will serve as ushers, and be honored in various other ways.

For Protestant churches, Mother's Day will mean the climax of Christian Family Week, a phase of the United Christian Education Advance being sponsored in major cities under the leadership of the International Council of Religious Education.

Six sets of twins are expected to attend the Mother's Day observance at Takoma Park Baptist Church, Piney Branch Road and Dahlia Street Northwest, at 11 a. m., when the Rev. William E. La Rue will preach on "The Family as an Institution." The senior choir will sing. Mothers will be guests of the young people at a tea at 5:30 p. m. The young people will conduct a Mother's Day program at 7:45 p. m.

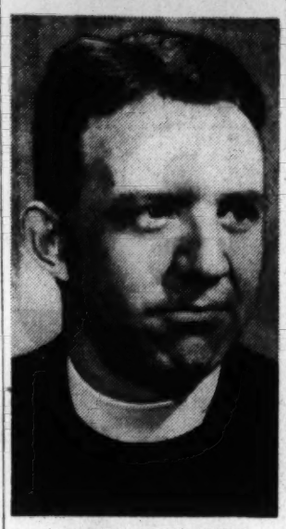
As Metropolitan Baptist Church marks the occasion, mothers of the congregation will serve as ushers and assist the Rev. Dr. John Compton Ball in the pulpit. The Rev. John M. Ballbach, assistant pastor, will speak at 7:45 p. m. on "A Modern Old-Fashioned Mother."

A sacred outdoor concert rendered by the Foundry Methodist choir will mark Mother's Day at the Little Church of Fort Lincoln, Bladensburg Road and the District Line, from 5 to 6 p. m. The Rev. Dr. Howard Stone Anderson, president of the Washington Ministerial Union, will preach.

Mother's Day will be emphasized in all services tomorrow at Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church. The Mount Vernon Players will present two plays at 8 p. m. They will be "Just As I Am Without One Plea," with Martha Sparks, John T. Hicks, Lloyd Keating, Mary Elizabeth Keating, Billy McMillan and Ruth Shirkey, and "My Country 'Tis of Thee," with Nelson Pierce, jr., Harry Brescia, Nadine Brescia.

The church school's young people and young adults will sponsor a Mother's Day tea at 5:30 p. m.

REV. WILLIAM E. LA RUE



FATHER MULLANEY

Outdoor Concert Slated by Foundry Methodist Choir

Montgomery County ministers have been requested by the Montgomery County Civilian Defense to adopt the theme of honoring mothers of service men in their services on Mothers' Day.

Emphasis of the religious aspects of the observance is believed important by defense officials, who feel that now, more than ever, it is spiritual strength that is needed both by the armed forces and those who remain at home.

Each clergyman has been requested to preach an inspirational sermon extolling the sacrifices of the mothers and indicating the pride of the community in the service of their sons. The ministers also have been requested to include mention of the services in their church bulletins for next week so that each mother might have a souvenir and send one to her son.

Each church has been requested to seat the mothers in honored places for the service and where possible to include the name of the mothers and their sons in the church bulletin.

The churches of the Seventh Day Adventists will hold their services on the Saturday before Mother's Day when their members will be attending religious services.

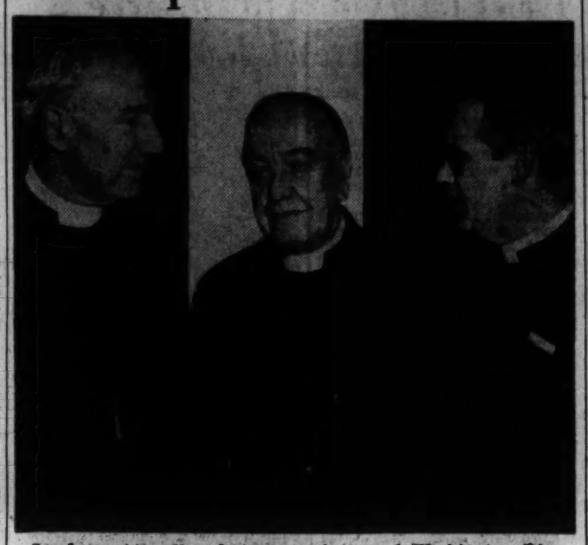
The Rev. William Mullaney, O. M. I., of Catholic University, will be retreat master at a Mother's Day retreat tomorrow at the Washington Retreat House, 4000 Harewood Road Northeast, sponsored by the Washington Retreat League.

The Holy Name Society of the Immaculate Conception Parish will observe Mother's Day with a Communion Mass and breakfast, the former beginning at 8:15 a. m. Dr. Walter J. O'Connor, registrar and professor of economics at Georgetown University, will be the main breakfast speaker.

The Intermediate-Senior Department of Congress Heights Methodist Church will have a Mother's Day program at 9:30 a. m.

Mothers will be guests at all services of the Italian Baptist Church of the Redeemer. The Rev. Olindo Marseglia, assistant pastor, will speak at 10:45 a. m. on "Maternal Watchfulness." Several candidates from the congregation will be baptized tomorrow at 5 p. m. at Metropolitan Baptist Church.

Bishop Attends Conclave



Leaders—Attending forty-seventh annual Washington Diocesan Convention this week at Epiphany Episcopal Church were (left to right) the Very Rev. ZeBarney T. Phillips, Dean of Washington Cathedral; the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, and Dr. Charles W. Sheerin, host pastor

Throngs of Worshipers Await St. John's Church Pilgrimage

Throngs of worshipers from several States and the District of Columbia tomorrow at 4 p. m. will make a pilgrimage to St. John's Church, Broad Creek, Md., to join in the celebration of the 250th birthday of King George's Parish, of which St. John's is a part. It will be the first of eight parishes that will mark their 250th anniversary this year.

The Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, will deliver the main address, and the Rev. Robert F. Henry, St. John's rector, will preside. The Washington Cathedral's junior choir will sing. R. Wayne Dirkson, assistant Cathedral organist, will be at the organ.

Church officials said yesterday the present parishes of the District of Columbia, Montgomery County and the upper part of Prince Georges County owe their origin to King George's parish. Rectors and lay members of several parishes will take part in tomorrow's service in tribute to the mother church.

It was on March 12, 1691, that their Majesties, William and Mary, sent an address to the colonists of Maryland in which they said: "We have thought fit to take our Province of Maryland under our immediate care and protection." In the same year the Royal Governor, Sir Lionel Copley, arrived in the colony having received instructions from the crown to "take especial care" that God "be devoutly and duly served," the Book of Common Prayer be read and "the Blessed Sacrament administered according to the rites of the Church of England," also that churches be built and a "competent maintenance" assigned to each minister. The Governor's Council and the Assembly on June 2, 1692, enacted the "Act for the service of Almighty God and the establishment of the Protestant religion within this Province."

Under the authority of this act the commissioners, justices and principal freeholders of each county divided and laid out their respective counties into parishes and described their metes and bounds. There are 30 of these "1692" parishes in the State of Maryland, 8 of them being in the Diocese of Washington and the remainder in the Dioceses of Maryland and Easton.

Adventist Mother's Day Rites Today

Seventh-Day Adventist churches in the Washington area will observe Mother's Day at services today—their Sabbath.

Special exercises will be held in the Capital Memorial Seventh-Day Adventist Church at Fifth and F Streets Northwest, of which Elder George S. Rapp is pastor. Special honor will be shown mothers of this congregation who have sons in the military forces of the Nation.

At the Sligo Seventh-Day Adventist Church, meeting in Columbia Hall of the Washington Missionary College at Takoma Park during the time that its new church building is under construction, Elder C. J. Coon, the pastor, is planning to give over the entire Sabbath morning service in honor of Mother's Day.

At the Sanitarium Seventh-Day Adventist Church, meeting in the gymnasium of the Washington Sanitarium and Hospital, of which Elder G. H. Emmerson is pastor, the young people's exercises on Friday night, May, 8, will be entirely devoted to Mother's Day exercises, and on Sabbath morning, May 9, the pastor expects to give special honor to mothers of men in the service.

At the Takoma Park Seventh-Day Adventist Church on Carroll Avenue, the pastor, Elder A. B. Russell, also expects to recognize and celebrate Mother's Day exercises in connection with his Sabbath morning service, May 9.

Mission Nurse To Describe Work Among Lepers

An American nurse who made milk out of peanuts for the malnourished babies of Africa will be one of the featured speakers at the spring meeting of the Washington Auxiliary of the American Mission to Lepers on May 15 at Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church, Ninth and Massachusetts Avenues. She is Dora Jane Armstrong, secretary of the Southeastern Area of the American Mission to Lepers, now stationed in Atlanta, Ga.

The Rev. Walter G. Borchers, jr., administrative assistant of the Federation of Churches, whose parents are both missionaries in Brazil, and Mrs. E. J. L. Phillips of New York, a former missionary in the Philippines, now married to a British vice consul, will also speak.

At the afternoon session there will be the annual gathering of funds for the leper work in 100 countries of the world where the American Mission to Lepers helps to maintain leper colonies, medical service, educational and religious work for a part of the world's leper population.

Choir Festival Set

The men and boys' choir of Christ Church, Kensington, directed by Douglas Birchby, organist-choirmaster, will hold its annual choir festival Tuesday at 8 p. m. Choir medals will be awarded for meritorious service of the past year. Canon W. Curtis Draper of the Washington Cathedral will speak.

Accent on Youth

Walther League Spring Rally Scheduled for Tomorrow

Walther Leaguers of the Potomac zone will sponsor a spring rally tomorrow at 3 p. m. at Trinity Lutheran Church, Thirtieth Street and Bunker Hill Road Northeast, with Chaplain E. E. Heuer as the opening speaker. Adam Wenchel, zone chairman, will preside. The Rev. William Schiebel, pastor of Mount Olivet Lutheran Church, Washington, will address the devotional service at 5 p. m. A fellowship supper is slated for 6 p. m., followed by a talent quiz.

The annual tri-union moonlight cruise is set for June 1 on the Wilson Line on the Potomac. It will be sponsored by the Methodist Youth Fellowship, East and West districts; the District Christian Endeavor Union, and the Columbia Federation of Baptist Young People's Unions.

Edwin Espey, executive secretary of the Student Volunteer Movement, will address the high school and college groups tomorrow at 7:30 p. m. at Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church.

The Westminster League of Central Presbyterian Church will have a Mothers' Day program tomorrow at 5 o'clock.

The Senior Christian Endeavor Society of Gunton-Temple Memorial Presbyterian Church will sponsor a tea and fellowship hour for mothers tomorrow at 6:45 p. m.

Annual Choir Festival Set Tomorrow

The District of Columbia Chapter of the American Guild of Organists in sponsoring its Third Annual Junior Choir Festival tomorrow at 4 p. m. at the National City Christian Church. Dr. W. H. Pinkerton will welcome over 600 children representing Protestant Churches all over the city, Virginia and Maryland. Roberta Bitgood, M. S. M., F. A. G. O., of the Westminster Presbyterian Church of Bloomfield, N. J., will conduct the festival. Nancy Poore Tufts, Mus. M. of the Georgetown Presbyterian Church, is the organist.

Churches participating are Church of the Reformation (Lutheran), Covenant-First Presbyterian Church; Emory Methodist Church; Epworth Methodist Church, Georgetown Lutheran Church, Georgetown Presbyterian Church; Grace Episcopal Church (Woodside, Md.), Grace Lutheran Church, Langley Methodist Church (McLean, Va.), Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church, Petworth Baptist Church, Petworth Methodist Church, St. Alban's Episcopal Church, St. David's Chapel, St. John's Episcopal Church (Lafayette Square), St. John's Episcopal Church (McLean, Va.), St. Andrew's Episcopal Church, Second Presbyterian Church (Alexandria, Va.), Sixth Presbyterian Church, Takoma Park Baptist Church, Wallace Memorial United Presbyterian Church, Wesley Methodist Church, Westminster Presbyterian Church.

Services to Mark Anniversary of Nurse Nightingale

Two Lutheran churches tomorrow will sponsor special services recognizing the 122d anniversary of the birth of Florence Nightingale, mother of modern nursing.

Col. Julia O. Flikke, superintendent of the Army Nursing Corps, and other nurses will attend services at 8 p. m. at Luther Place Memorial Church, Thomas Circle. Dr. Charles B. Foelsch, pastor, will preach, and Chaplain Charles Trexler will read lessons and prayers.

At the same hour, the Lutheran Church of the Reformation, 212 East Capitol Streets, will likewise honor the nursing profession. Dr. Oscar F. Blackwelder, Federation of Churches' president, will discuss "Lessons From the Life of Florence Nightingale."

New Temple Baptist Pastor Preaches May 31

The Rev. Luther Jenkins Holcomb, who has been called to be pastor of Temple Baptist Church, Tenth and N Streets Northwest, will preach his inaugural sermon there May 31. Mr. Holcomb, former pastor of First Baptist Church, Durant, Okla., is the son of Dr. and Mrs. T. L. Holcomb, the latter being executive secretary-treasurer of the Southern Baptist Convention's Sunday School Board. Upon the new pastor's arrival, the congregation will break ground for a new church at Sixteenth and Juniper Streets Northwest.

Legislators, Defense Official Laud Churches' Funds Drive

Two legislators and a civilian defense official yesterday lauded the service program of the Washington Federation of Churches and urged backing of its annual financial drive now in progress. This year's goal is $34,288.

Col. Lemuel Bolles, executive director of the Metropolitan area, Office of Civilian Defense, said: "The Federation of Churches affords opportunity for the spiritual leadership of a large and important element of our community to bring the inspiration of spiritual things to bear in a practical manner on the many and varied problems pressing on our people today.

"Not only is the right to adore God according to our own conscienc challenged, but every other freedom we hold dear is under vicious, ruthless, and treacherous attack by godless men who would make us spiritual as well as physical slaves. By the brazenness of their attack on religion—yours, mine, our fellow citizens'—our Nation's enemies have made clear to us how precious our freedom is to us.

None Can Stand Alone

"We are engaged in what has been called total war. Total war means that every church, every minister of the Federation of Churches, every member of every congregation is involved. None can stand by himself. All of us stand together. There is an active part each man, woman, boy and girl can play in active service or in our civilian defense work and the church is a natural place for the fostering of such working together."

Senator James J. Davis of Pennsylvania yesterday praised the federation for giving Protestantism a united front in the Nation's Capital.

"Just as the United Nations have joined forces against a military enemy, so must the churches link arms to wage war against community evils. The federation is helping churches to do things together that they cannot do alone."

Senator Davis, whose own interest in child welfare has been demonstrated by the development of Mooseheart home for children of Loyal Order of Moose members, pointed out that the federation was doing a commendable piece of work in its juvenile court program carried on by the Washington Council of Church Women.

"In unity," said the Senator, 'there is strength."

Mahon Praises Work

Representative George Mahon of Texas, who teaches a Sunday school class at Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church, said the federation was helping the Nation's Capital churches to set an example for other churches of the Nation in cooperative Christianity.

"In helping the churches to link arms in aiding the city's underprivileged and in performing other community services, the federation is doing a commendable piece of Christian work. Its campaign deserves the city's solid support," he said.

Rites in Honor Of Virgin Mary Set Tomorrow

The annual religious celebration in honor of the Blessed Virgin, under the title, Seat of Wisdom, participated in by students of Catholic colleges and universities of the District each year, will be held in the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception at Catholic University tomorrow afternoon. Preceded by a procession of students, led by the Catholic University Band, and accompanied by the members of the religious communities affiliated with the university, the public demonstration in honor of Blessed Mother will begin at 3:30 o'clock. The members of the faculty, in academic costume, will review the procession at the entrance of the shrine.

The services include the reading of the Act of Dedication to the Blessed Mother by Miss Margaret Drach of the Immaculate Junior College, followed by a sermon by the Rev. Dr. Edward F. Dowd, instructor in religious education of the university. Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament will be celebrated by the Most Rev. Joseph Corrigan, rector of the university. Bishop Corrigan will be assisted by the Rev. Paul J. Ehlinger and the Rev. Vincent M. Stokes, as deacon and subdeacon, respectively. The Rev. Walter J. Schmitz, S.S., will be master of ceremonies.

Dr. Leo Behrandt will direct the Catholic University choir, with Dr. Conrad Bernier at the organ. The general arrangements are in charge of the Rev. Dr. George B. Stratemeier, O. P., the university chaplain, assisted by Timothy J. Lynch, chairman, and other members of the Students Spiritual Council.

Dr. Anderson Heads Regional Church Board

The Rev. Dr. Howard Stone Anderson, pastor of First Congregational Church and president of the Washington Ministerial Association, was elected president of the directors' board of the Middle Atlantic Congregational Conference for the fifth term at this week's meeting at Nutley, N. J.

Other First Church members elected to conference positions were Mrs. Anderson, president of the women's board; E. Donald Preston, resolutions committee; Roy L. Roberts, Christian education committee, and the Rev. John Elmo Wallace, nominating committee.

Dr. Sheerin to Talk On Women's Program

The Rev. Dr. Charles W. Sheerin, rector of Epiphany Episcopal Church, will address a meeting Monday at 8 p. m. at Christ Episcopal Church, Thirty-first and O Streets Northwest, in the interest of the unified woman's program for the Episcopal Church. The Rev. Peyton R. Williams is rector.

Many parishes throughout the land are said to have effectively combined their women's activities. Dr. Sheerin has been rector of two churches that used such a program with marked success.

Bishop to Confirm St. Margaret's Class

The Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, will confirm a class of candidates tomorrow at 11 a. m. at St. Margaret's Episcopal Church, Connecticut Avenue and Bancroft Place Northwest. He also will preach. The Rev. Armand T. Eyler, rector, will present the class.

Union Services

Calvary Baptist, New York Avenue Presbyterian and First Baptist Congregations tomorrow at 8 p. m. will join in union services at the last-named church, Sixteenth and O Streets Northwest. The Rev. Dr. Peter Marshall, pastor of New York Avenue Church, will speak on "Prove It." Combined choirs will sing.

Rutgers Honors Envoy, Chaplain Today

His Excellency Carlos Martins Pereira y Sousa, the Ambassador of Brazil, and the Rev. S. Arthur Devan, Director of the General Commission on Army and Navy Chaplains are receiving honorary degrees from Rutgers University today.

The Rev. Mr. Devan is a graduate of Rutgers and of Oxford University.

Free French Follower Will Speak

A representative of the Free French movement, M. Jean Delattre Seguy, will address the Current Problems Class at All Souls Unitarian Church tomorrow at 10 a. m. on the subject, "Does France Still Stand for Liberte, Egalite, Fraternite?" At the same hour, Stanwood Cobb, founder of the Progressive Education Association, will speak before the Comparative Religion Class on "Life's Objectives."

The Rev. Ulysses G. B. Pierce, D. D., will take for his subject at the 11 o'clock service, "The Sacred Flame." In the afternoon at 5:30, the junior choir under the direction of Wilhelmina Spanhoofd Walter has arranged a program of music in the Court of the Founders, to be followed by tea. The monthly dinner meeting of the 25-35 Club is scheduled for Tuesday evening.

Salvation Army

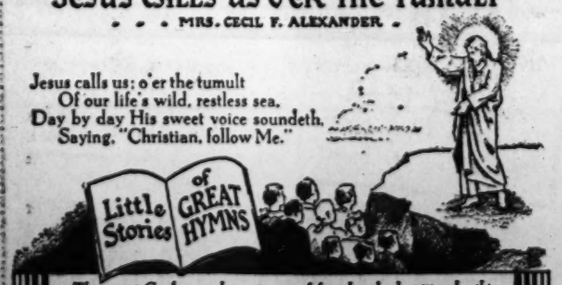
Young Salvation Army officers recently appointed to posts in the Nation's Capital will be formally welcomed tomorrow at 11 a. m. and 8 p. m. at Temple Corps, 606 E Street Northwest.

Missionary to Speak

Miss Mary E. Hiltabridle, former missionary in Japan and now secretary of the Lutheran Board of Education, will address the Georgetown Lutheran Sunday School tomorrow at 9:30 a. m.

"JESUS CALLS US O'ER THE TUMULT"
• • • MRS. CECIL F. ALEXANDER • • •

Jesus calls us; o'er the tumult
Of our life's wild, restless sea,
Day by day His sweet voice soundeth,
Saying, "Christian, follow Me."



This great Conference hymn is one of four hundred written by this well known woman hymn writer. It is an ever-stirring challenge to men and women everywhere, who would consecrate their lives to the service of God.

Dr. Hough Speaks Here Tomorrow

The next in the series of united services will be held tomorrow at 4 p. m. in Washington Cathedral, with the Rev. Dr. Lynn Harold Hough, dean and professor of homiletics of Drew Theological Seminary, Madison, N. J., as speaker. This series of services is being sponsored jointly by Washington Cathedral and the Washington Federation of Churches "on behalf of a united people in this time of national emergency" to bring to the Capital a group of noted speakers representing both clergy and lay fields.

Dean Hough, the fifth speaker in the series, is known both here and abroad as one of the greatest living exponents of humanism and has written brilliantly on the subject in many books, perhaps the most famous being his recent "Christian Criticism of Life."

He has held the pastorate in such prominent churches as the Central Methodist Church of Detroit and the American Presbyterian Church in Montreal. Since 1934 he has been dean of Drew Theological Seminary.

In addition to his books he is contributing editor to several religious publications and a lecturer in great demand, having appeared last year before the General Conference of the Methodist Church of Australasia in Brisbane, Australia. He is also a member of the executive committee of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America and vice chairman of the American section of the Universal Christian Council for Life and Work.

Also taking part in the service tomorrow afternoon will be members of the clergy of Washington Cathedral, and the following clergymen representing the Washington Federation of Churches: The Rev. Dr. Oscar F. Blackwelder, pastor of the Lutheran Church of the Reformation; Dr. Carroll C. Roberts, pastor of the Ninth Street Christian Church, and the Rev. Dr. James Shera Montgomery, chaplain of the House of Representatives.

Preaching at the 11 a. m. service in the Cathedral tomorrow will be the Rev. Merritt F. Williams, canon of the cathedral, now on active duty as chaplain at the naval operations station, Norfolk, Va. This service will mark Canon Williams' first sermon in the Cathedral pulpit since being called into service.

Churches Have Grown

Two Clergymen to Observe Anniversaries Mother's Day

REV. LESLIE L. BOWERS

DR. RALPH D. SMITH

Two prominent clergymen will mark their pastoral anniversaries tomorrow with special services, coinciding with the Mother's Day observance.

The Rev. Dr. Ralph Dela Smith will celebrate his twentieth year as pastor of Woodside Methodist Church, 8814 Georgia Avenue, Silver Spring.

The Rev. Leslie L. Bowers, sr., will observe the tenth anniversary of his second pastorate at Fifteenth Street Christian Church, Fifteenth Street and Kentucky Avenue Southeast.

Woodside Methodist Church has grown numerically and spiritually since that Mother's Day, May 8, 1922, when Mr. Smith assumed charge of the congregation while studying at American University.

The church membership then was 22. Now it is 1200. The church school then had 200 members, compared with more than 1000. The congregation then worshiped in a small frame chapel. Now they have a modern church school building and colonial style church, the latter having been dedicated March 19, 1939.

Dr. Smith's activities are not confined to his own church. He is past president of the Montgomery County Ministerial Union, and is a member of the board of trustees of American University and of the Methodist Union. He is a member of the Washington Federation of Churches board, and has been chaplain of Silver Spring Lodge, No. 215, A. F. and A. M., for 18 years.

He is a native of Hughesville, Pa., where he received his early education. He was graduated from Williamsport Dickinson Seminary in 1914, from Syracuse University in 1918, and from Drew Theological Seminary, Madison, N. J., in 1922. He was pastor of the Fleming (New York) Methodist Church from 1920 to 1922.

The Rev. Mr. Bowers' first pastorate at Fifteenth Street Church began in April, 1915, continuing five years. He returned for his second pastorate in 1932.

He will preach tomorrow at 11 a. m. on "God and the Stars," and Mother's Day tokens will be presented to all mothers attending.

A tenth anniversary fellowship dinner will be served Wednesday at 6:30 p. m., followed by a program of community singing, movies and other features. The Rev. Dr. William H. Pinkerton, interim pastor of National City Christian Church, will speak.

Hyattsville, Clarendon Churches Plan Anniversary Services

Two prominent suburban Methodist congregations will mark anniversaries tomorrow with special services.

Dr. Douglass

The sesquicentennial celebration of Memorial Methodist Church, Hyattsville, will continue at 11 a. m., when Dr. Paul F. Douglass, president of American University, will speak. The Rev. W. Clark Main will preside.

Clarendon (Va.) Methodist Church, will launch a celebration marking the first anniversary of the formal opening of its new structure at Sixth and Irving Streets N., Arlington.

DR. BEERY

Dr. E. C. Beery, former superintendent of the Alexandria, Va., and Washington East Methodist Districts, will preach at 8 a. m.; the Rev. Dr. A. P. Williams, present Alexandria superintendent, at 11 a. m., and Dr. N. Link of Westminster Theological Seminary, at 8 p. m. The Rev. G. G. Oliver is pastor.

Lutheran Women Meet Today in Luray

Luray, Va., May 8 (AP).—Lutheran women of the 35 churches comprising the New Market Conference in northern Virginia, will gather here tomorrow for their annual missionary society meeting. Speakers will include the Rev. R. H. Anderson of Lynchburg, superintendent of the Virginia Synod.

Kelly Bible Class to Hear Dr. Burroughs

In pursuance of the class' program with respect to obtaining views of religious leaders on various religions, the Clyde Kelly Bible Class of Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church will have as guest speaker tomorrow at 9:30 a. m. the Rev. Gordon Burroughs of the Church of Two Worlds, who will discuss "Spiritualism."

The Calvary Methodist Men's Bible Class will hold its annual banquet May 20 at 6:30 p. m. at Columbia Road near Fifteenth Street Northwest, with the principal speaker being the Rev. Clarence W. Cranford, pastor of Calvary Baptist Church. Election of officers and other features also are planned.

Miss Lola Sanders, soprano, will sing at a Mother's Day celebration tomorrow at 10 a. m. in the A. B. Pugh Class at Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church. Russel E. Mitchell, class teacher from 1925 to 1928, will speak.

George E. Harris, executive secretary of the D. C. Organized Bible Class Association and past president of the Vaughn Class of Calvary Baptist Church, will address that class' Mother's Day celebration tomorrow at 9:45 a. m. Dr. Nelson M. Blake, son of Mrs. William P. Blake, present class mother, will lead a prayer. Chester C. Hutchinson, son of the former class mother, Mrs. Hutchinson, will read the Scripture. Herbert V. Pate will sing. President Crawford J. Smith will preside.

The Young Adult Class of the St. Paul Methodist Church will hold its monthly business meeting and a wiener roast on Friday, May 15, at the home of their teacher, John Klein, 6714 Summit Avenue, Chevy Chase, Md.

The Men's Club of Takoma Lutheran Church will meet Friday, May 15, with the Men's Brotherhood of St. Matthew's Church as guests of honor. Chaplain Trexler of the Army Medical Center will speak.

The Rev. Dr. Howard Stone Anderson, pastor of First Congregational Church, will address a Mother's Day program tomorrow at 9:30 a. m. before the Burrall Class of Calvary Baptist Church.

Veterans to Be Guests At Douglas Memorial

Members of the United Spanish War Veterans of the District and the Ladies' Auxiliary will be special guests at Mother's Day services tomorrow at 8 p. m. at Douglas Memorial Methodist Church, Eleventh and H Streets Northeast. The Rev. W. F. Wright will preach on "Two Mothers." The Youth Fellowship will meet at 7 p. m.

First big social affair in the new church, it climaxed the Christian Family Week program. Left to right: Willis Mory, Leonard Crawford and George Zollars. The latter also was toastmaster

'Adam and Fallen Man' Christian Science Topic

"Adam and Fallen Man" is the subject of the lesson-sermon in all the Churches of Christ, Scientist, tomorrow at 11 a. m., and 8 p. m. Sunday school is at 11 a. m. All are cordially invited to attend the church services including the Wednesday evening meetings at 8 o'clock.

Among the citations which comprise the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible: "As is the earthy, such are they also that are earthy: and as is the heavenly, such are they also that are heavenly." (I Corinthinans 15:48.)

The lesson-sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "When Spirit made all, did it leave aught for matter to create? Ideas of Truth alone are reflected in the myriad manifestations of Life, and thus it is seen that man springs solely from Mind." (Page 543.)

Capt. Milliken to Speak

Capt. Rhoda Milliken of the Metropolitan Police Department will address the Wesley Class tomorrow at 9:45 a. m. in the Foundry Methodist Church School.

Rev. Burroughs Picks Sermon Subject

"The Light Ahead" will be the subject of the address by Rev. H. Gordon Burroughs, minister of the Church of Two Worlds, tomorrow evening at the Hotel Continental. Mrs. Lawrence King, soprano, will be the soloist. A meeting of the ways and means committee will be held at 7:15 p. m.

On Wednesday evening a short lecture by the minister will be followed by a message service.

Curtailing Travel

Word has gone forth that space in railway passenger cars and overland buses may be rationed before the summer vacation season opens. With troop movements, as well as gasoline and tire shortages putting multiple strains upon public transportation systems, such extraordinary measures may be unavoidable. Certainly travel for recreation in wartime is a luxury which nobody should be permitted to enjoy if it interferes seriously with the transportation of troops or essential travel by workers and businessmen. Wear and tear on equipment, difficult or impossible of replacement, is also a factor to be considered in determining whether or to what extent pleasure traveling shall be cut down.

With passenger cars laid up and various forms of entertainment curtailed, a good many people may be tempted to take train and bus trips for diversion. That was a popular form of entertainment indulged in by Europeans after the first World War. With little to eat or wear because stocks were cleaned out, they rode rather aimlessly from town to town, using depreciated money to pay railroad fares not adjusted to the new scale of monetary values. While American workers have little in common with the unhappy Europeans of that day, they do have more money to spend and a limited supply of things to buy with it. Probably a good deal of excess income is already being spent on unnecessary travel in public conveyances—a practice that helps to bring nearer the introduction of rationed travel.

TVA Revolving Fund

For five days the Senate debated an amendment to the House-passed independent offices appropriation bill the effect of which is to deny the TVA the right to dispose of its receipts from sales of power. During the current year those receipts are estimated to amount to about 21 million dollars. Considering the speed with which war appropriation bills calling for expenditures of billions of dollars are rushed through Congress, the public may well marvel at the time spent on a relatively minor item in a huge supply bill. However, a very important issue was raised by the proposal to abolish the TVA's revolving fund: namely, whether a Government agency engaged in business activities comparable to those of a private concern ought to be required to obtain Congressional authorization for every cent spent by it. The question is one that concerns not only the TVA but numerous other agencies set up by Congress for a variety of purposes.

Under the controversial amendment sponsored by Senator McKellar to strike out provisions for the revolving fund, all receipts of the TVA from whatever source derived have to be turned into the general fund of the Treasury—a procedure which would reverse the policy followed during the past seven years. It does not necessarily follow that Congress would withhold needed funds or allocate appropriations in such detail as to tie the hands of the TVA board of directors in the spending of funds. However, the chief argument in favor of permitting Government corporations to maintain revolving funds is the fact that possession of such funds gives Government agencies an opportunity to compete more effectively with private corporations. There is a flexibility of management that is not possible when such agencies are entirely dependent upon appropriations to cover operating expenses.

Senator Barkley stated the case very well indeed by saying that "If utilities set up by the public with their own money are to compete with private utilities . . . they must be able to operate and function all the time without interruption. They cannot rely upon the whims or the change of views or the political complexion of Congress in order to determine whether they are to be left in the position where they may compete in the region they serve with those who can operate day by day and all the time, without having to go to anybody but their own managers and their own board of directors." To be sure, arguments along this line presuppose that officials in control of Government agencies are efficient and honest. Otherwise freedom from dependence upon Congressional appropriations would simply be an invitation to waste and extravagance.

Evidently the controversy over TVA's revolving fund reflects a deepseated difference of opinion as to the extent of the supervision which Congress should exercise over the agencies which it has created. Private jealousies and political prejudices no doubt influenced the Senate vote, but it would be a mistake to assume that they were determinant of its outcome.

Fighting Strength

A most encouraging type of news is now coming out of the United States' armament factories. Airplanes are being turned out in ever increasing quantities. Vast numbers of tanks are beginning to roll off assembly lines. Guns and ammunition for a huge army are being amassed. The battle of production thus constantly renews our hope of victory in the greater battle in which all our national strength as well as that of our allies is pitted against the Axis war machines.

An enormous amount of human energy —of directing genius, skillful work and common toil—has gone into this battle of production. Millions of Americans now feel the pride of achievement in its expanding success. For that very reason, however, there is danger of forgetting that the manufacture of weapons is only a means to an end. We still face the task of fitting this enormous outpouring of war materials into the general scheme of globe-circling war.

Having given so much of our thought to conversion of our industrial machinery to war production, the lack of emphasis upon some other war essentials can be readily understood. Yet mass production of weapons alone counts for little. Fighter planes lined up on the West Coast or tanks coming off assembly lines in the East are of no value in smashing the Axis until they have been transported to the fronts where men are fighting. New factories that are being erected to turn out more guns and tanks will be of little value if no housing is provided for the workmen to be employed there.

Yesterday it was reported that thousands of new homes for warworkers in many parts of the country remain unoccupied because of the inability to get electric wiring. Officials are known to be deeply concerned also over the fact that the gigantic Ford plant at Willow Run, outside of Detroit, will be coming into production without housing for the many thousands of workers who will be employed there. In other words, new bottlenecks are looming up outside the sphere of industrial production. And these may impair our war strength just as seriously as a shortage of copper or aluminum, or a lack of machine tools for the construction of airplanes.

Much has been said about the lag in construction of ships to carry fighting implements to the fronts. Except in the case of bombers, which can be flown to the bases from which they are to operate, the usefulness of our war output will be measured largely by the capacity of our transportation facilities on sea and on land. Is our arms-building program being carefully surveyed from this viewpoint? The time has come to make certain that our war effort has balance as well as speed and efficiency in some of its phases.

The strength of a nation is not measured by adding up the factory space devoted to war production or even by the number of men it can put into the field. Along with these factors we must consider the availability of labor, without drawing too heavily upon our food producers on the farm. Nor can we forget the necessity of continuing to supply the essentials of civilian life. The public can and must give up frills and luxuries. But food and housing are as imperative in the city as at the front.

Now that the production of weapons has attained a formidable momentum, more thought and energy can be given to the other elements of a well-rounded wartime economy. For it is not a schedule that we have to beat. It is the powerful German and Japanese war machines. And, with a task of that magnitude, we cannot afford to let slip any single factor that contributes to our national strength.

Disease Incubators

"The Battle of Washington," Representative Paddock told the House on Thursday, "could be the worst defeat of the war." He was referring to the health menace which arises from Washington's rat-infested, filthy, disease-breeding slums. We hope that his candid warning will not be lost upon the Senate or upon his colleagues in the House when the final vote comes on the fund to be appropriated under the Lanhan Act for Washington.

Mr. Paddock has two useful suggestions to make. He thinks that the Health Department should be given ample authority to close up insanitary hovels that are not fit for human beings to live in and that slum racketeers who constantly violate the law should be given jail sentences. Both of those suggestions ought to stir the Board of Commissioners to action. If they need additional powers, Mr. Paddock has given them an excellent invitation to present their case.

Fortunately, the Commissioners are working on the slum problem. Tentative approval has been given new regulations to raise standards in boarding, lodging and rooming houses throughout the District. And test cases are being brought to determine whether the Board of Insanitary Building can use the old law now on the books to close up rotten shacks in which men, women and children live as cattle. These are encouraging developments, but the new tests should not be permitted to drag along until an epidemic is upon us. If the present law cannot be put to effective use at once, let us have a statute that can.

Of course, the whole problem is complicated, as Commissioner Mason points out, by the acute shortage of living quarters of any sort. If families are put out of insanitary shacks, they will probably move in with friends and thus overcrowd other slums. People living under such conditions without work might well be sent where they can be usefully employed. But many of them are directly connected with warwork here. That is where the Lanham Act funds come into the picture. Surely Congress ought not to trim down the 50 million dollars authorized for housing and utilities in Washington and vicinity on the assumption that warworkers now housed in disease incubators need be given no consideration.

Gas Rationing

Just how much rubber we have, how serious is the shortage of tankers, how great are the military needs of rubber, oil and existing automotive equipment—these items, of course, are military secrets. No patriotic American will seek to pry for that information. He will accept the new reports upon which are based the drastic rationing of gasoline and the possible requisitioning of private cars. There is only one purpose animating our people today. That is to insure swift and sure victory over our enemies. If our cars are necessary to that purpose, Americans will give them up with the same readiness with which they are now giving up so much of their incomes.

However, it is precisely because of this eagerness on the part of the American people to serve their country that we bespeak a trial of the voluntary method. Legislation is said to be in hand to give the Executive specific commandeering powers over private cars. But why does not the Government, as a starter, offer to buy any car that an American wishes to dispose of? There are probably many, many owners—and not all of them with old cars—who would sell their vehicles to the Government. Aside from any patriotic impulse to give up cars, the rubber rationing will soon make car ownership a luxury which the owner would rather forgo. In that way the Government could accumulate a tidy stockpile of rubber and automobile equipment. Moreover, the time has surely come to call for the dishoarding of spare tires.

As to the gasoline rationing, the aim should be to make it as impartial as possible. The Eastern seaboard should not have to suffer a special deprivation solely because there will be no more tankers available for shipping gasoline here for the duration of the war. Other parts of the country, as we have said before, should be asked to share the sacrifice. That is essential not only because the entire Nation ought to be kept in step in the war effort but also for military reasons. Secretary Ickes says that it is necessary now "to eliminate every nonessential use of petroleum products," and he obviously has in mind the country as a whole.

Second Front

Admiral Harold R. Stark, commander of the American naval forces in European waters, said much and revealed little when, in answer to a question whether he favored the opening of a second European front, replied: "I favor a second, third and even a fifth front as soon as we are able to launch them effectively. Reckless, uncalculated assaults are justifiable when everything is regulated and carefully planned."

In other words, Admiral Stark is in favor of a second front in principle, but is the soul of discretion when it comes to saying whether the time has arrived to open such a front. Since, obviously, that is precisely what Hitler would like to know, this discretion is entirely justified. The debate on the second front issue which has been raging in this country and Great Britain could not have done more to mystify the Axis if it had been deliberately staged to achieve that useful purpose.

At a time when Hitler is preparing to launch an offensive in the east, he finds it more and more difficult to ignore the possibility that his offensive may have as an accompaniment an Allied offensive in the west. In this respect the situation he faces is far different and far less satisfactory than it was a year ago.

BONE OF THEIR BONE

Here where the grass is flesh, and rock is bone,
The earth is very body, bathed in air . . .
Whereon this other body moves—alone,
Upright and strange in their unblinking stare.
This meadow, shining in a wild, new light,
Since now is spring, thrills upward through the feet,
Quickens the coursing blood and blurs the sight
With tears at thinking how the spring is sweet—
While all about me, here, the rock and grass,
Being body, surely, watch this other pass.

To Save Mileage

C. E. L. in The Post of today is to be congratulated for suggesting something more practical than the hackneyed idea about doubling up in automobiles, which so many have found unworkable.

There is more than one way of economizing on car mileage, and they all have their limited application. One is allowing the driver to pick up passengers for hire without subjecting himself to vexatious suits for damages. He would have to be given great freedom in his choice of passengers—the regulations therefor would have to be simple and characterized by uncommon common sense.

Another is allowing as many workers as possible to stay at home and do their work there as often as possible. You see workers carrying their work home at night. In many cases they could carry two or three days' work to their homes and avoid many trips to and from office. Unnecessary travel you know is about the most uselessly spent time there is, especially when it is through crowded city streets and consumes gasoline and tires.

Another is providing covered and guarded parking places at the streetcar terminals in the outskirts of the city. No one is going to abandon his car to thieves and hoodlums, rain, sleet, snow and blistering heat at the edge of the city in order to transfer to a streetcar, and this is especially true when he uses his car to transport food to his wife and children at home that no store will deliver. You don't park your jewels on the doorknob when you enter the house. If we knew our cars were sheltered and guarded at the streetcar terminals we could take many an automobile off the city streets.

Undue Criticism

This writer has lately been disturbed by certain undertone expressions of resentment against certain high officials of the Government.

The final forced surrender of Corregidor by our most valiant men, after all of their glorious sacrifices, should sober us a bit. A look across the whole theater of the war discloses that so far we are losing the war.

This war can't be won by fostering or stirring up ill feelings toward those in authority in our own Nation. Surely we're big enough in the impending danger to suppress personal and political prejudices. Any division among us now weakens our common cause and lends encouragement to Hitler and Tojo. These days are too crucial to permit of any division. We can't stop in the middle of a fight to debate whether we should have stayed out of the fight. We're in! The President of the United States is the Commander in Chief of all of us in a great struggle to prevent our enslavement for ages to come; and it's of no consequence whether we happen to be Republicans, Democrats or vegetarians. Soldier's Tribute

Do you want to get in on a secret? Well, sir, soldiers are the most sentimental lot around. I know. Give them a march and they sing. Give them a 10-minute break, and they start writing love letters. Build a fire, and they start to burn up the scales in romantic melodies. Give them half a chance, and they start telling you how Mom would call them, coax them, berate them for an hour before breakfast to get up in time for work and now a rooster's helper with a bugle can do the same thing in one blast. But always it's "Mom did this." "Mother did that."

There isn't a tent that doesn't house a box of homemade cookies that Mom baked. A bundle of cheering letters tied in love from mother, and there isn't a soldier that doesn't have in his wallet a picture of his favorite saint, his mother.

Yes, sir, in the Army we have Mother's Day every day. We don't have to wait for someone to shame us into buying carnations, or shame us into buying gifts. At the shrine of our troubled souls, in the vase of our own tears, on the altar of sacrifice, is the flower of democracy . . . "our mother" that Pop has picked from the Garden of Angels, and the old boy deserves some credit, too. Bless them both.

Revise Draft Rules

I should like to express my approval of the revised Selective Service regulations as proposed by Senator Taft. If representatives of the people in Congress could realize how much unrest there is out in "the sticks" over the present confused setup they would rush to support the Taft legislation. Family men of importance to their respective communities are afraid to plan any more beyond getting their daily bread because they don't know what the next 24 hours will bring forth as a ruling from Selective Service headquarters. Certainly, this is not an aid to morale.

The Taft proposal is logical, practical, and should have been approved in the beginning. The people have made no organized protest over any of the various Selective Service rulings, for they are willing to do anything necessary toward winning the war. But they would like some clarity somewhere, and here is a chance for the first ray of light to gleam. I write this after traveling through 11 States, listening to good Americans.

Enemy Aliens

On page 6 of today's edition of your paper I find the following passage under the headline "German-Born Man in Army Faces Probe" . . . "Eleven other enemy aliens, two Germans, one Austrian, eight Italians, were admitted as citizens in a group totaling 40 persons. . . "

May I remind you that on February 6 of this year the Attorney General, Mr. Biddle, decided that Austrians as well as Austro-Hungarians and Koreans are not to be regarded as enemy aliens. Considering Austria's history it can easily be seen for what reason this decision was taken. Austria, the first victim of Germany's aggression, resisted during a much longer period of time—four years in fact—than any of the later victims. And since 1938 when Germany eventually succeeded in breaking this resistance and invaded Austria, the Austrian nation is fighting an unrelenting fight against her oppressors. It appears, therefore, that it is playing Hitler's game to consider Austrians as his associates in crime.

Official War Publicity Campaigns

An Associated Press story published in newspapers of Sunday, May 2, tells of an address delivered by Senator Robert Taft of Ohio, in New York before the American Irish Historical Society in which he fired a broadside of caustic criticism against the Government's use of publicity as an aid to the winning of the war. He took the Administration to task for spending more than 30 million annually on public information agencies and would have us believe that this is money wasted on an unnecessary and useless service.

I do not hold any brief either for or against the existing Government agencies conducting war information programs. There has been much criticism of these agencies and some of it may be needed. Wholesome, constructive criticism is always a good thing. But when a United States Senator belittles the use of publicity in the war program I, who have conducted many campaigns of publicity for important enterprises, cannot refrain from endeavoring to show wherein he is radically wrong in his position.

Senator Taft said that Mr. Archibald MacLeish, head of the Office of Facts and Figures, was completely mistaken when the latter made the statement recently before the American Society of Newspaper Editors that "the real battleground of this war is in the field of American opinion." The Senator is the one who is completely mistaken in the matter, though I think I would have used the words "a real" instead of "the real battleground."

Every high school student understands the value of public opinion or sentiment. Our armed forces in World War I understood it. As they left our shores for the battlefields of France they sang with feeling and meaning, "Keep the Home Fires Burning." The Senator understood it when he was making his campaign for a seat in the Senate, for he used publicity to the limit to create public opinion in his favor. He did not hesitate to use that method when he delivered his address, knowing that newspapers of the country would carry stories of it.

But I am going to let a great and wise American answer the Senator. Abraham Lincoln said this: "Without public sentiment, nothing can succeed; with it, nothing can fail." Applying it to the war, it is of tremendous importance to have a Nation-wide, united, determined public opinion in support of every phase of the war effort. Without it, we would lose the war; with it, we will win.

And how can we have a sustained, alive, inflamed public sentiment to back the war to the limit and to support our armed forces if we do not use every available means—the newspapers, the radio, motion pictures and other media—to keep the Nation informed on the needs and progress of the war?

This is a total war and to win it we must have a total or all-out service of publicity—propaganda based on truth—to keep public sentiment, the spirit of America, at a white-hot heat. We are spending billions on armaments and munitions of war and no one questions the need for doing so. Then why quibble over the spending of 30 million annually, or 50 or 100 million, if needed, in a service of propaganda to inform and hearten the people of America and confound the enemy?

The field of American opinion is indeed a great and real battlefield in this war, and if we hope to win through to victory we cannot afford to neglect it.

The Post Impressionist

Mother Dear:

I am writing this before breakfast on my 267th day in this Nation's Capital. There's a fine spring sunshine—more suitable for the young to make love in than anything else, so if I find it difficult to catch for you all the things a British correspondent sees you must forgive me.

Let me see now . . . this is the day I go to the Capitol. When the street car grinds round the corner at the bottom of the Hill and you see sunshine glinting on the big dome, it's pretty exciting because this is where men shape the destinies of fishermen in Miami and automobile manufacturers in Detroit.

Yes, this is where they go to work governing America's millions. In the Senate, newspapermen sit perched in their gallery high over the head of the Vice President of the United States himself. Front of us, and facing, are the 96 Senators. Behind—in a long room with a clock working at unprecedented speed—are the telephone booths. Today Senators, clock and telephones will keep me pretty busy.

Sometimes a man can sit a couple of hours without much happening; before one of the 96 gets on his feet with the bland question: "Mr. President, will the Senator yield?"

Sounds easy, doesn't it? But if the Senator holding the floor and occupying the Senate's attention yields to his fellow then question can follow question with bewildering rapidity. Words flow thick and fast. We listen as we write, weaving and condensing so that British folk unfamiliar with this scene may understand. It's all thrilling but one cannot help feeling rather a big sense of responsibility. You finish your story, run through the swing doors, call the office and start dictating in the curious lingo of cablese. Halfway through writing it you may be afflicted with doubts as to whether shrunken British newspapers will have room for this particular portion of a world war.

That big man with the silvery hair, bow tie and drawl—third seat along in the second row—is Connally from Texas, influential chairman of the Senate Foreign Affairs Committee. On Wednesday afternoons the Senator has his press conference; leaning back and wisecracking sometimes; covering the world with his grave, Texan accent at others. Watching him sitting at the long baize-covered table, with men scribbling fast as they can, I am positive we have nothing so picturesque in politicians across the water.

Right in front is Senator Barkley, senatorial eyes and ears of the President. Across the way—the man who looks like a professor—is Taft of Ohio. Senator McNary, minority leader, sits in the front row on the same side. Mead, Hill, Reynolds, Bankhead . . . it is difficult to realize they are just names to you who are not here.

But my main purpose in writing was to give an idea of the way things are shaping here in Congress. As the battle of production is being fought along vast assembly lines, with millions of Americans sweating to weld the war machine for a United Nations offensive, the struggle to create this machine still quicker, is waged with equal fury up here on Capitol Hill. There is still a good deal of confusion, but it is being straightened out. Slowly but surely this daily torrent of words formulated and now controls the war energy of Americans. Looking back I can see how far their Nation has come. There is still much to be done, but the goal of the United Nations is visible along the horizon. The guns and the planes and the tanks are here.

This has not been accomplished without considerable internal conflict. America, having developed high standards of living, awoke slowly to the inevitability of change. In peace—with many battles—labor had gotten itself gains it was unwilling to relinquish until assured capital would make equal sacrifice. Many of the 132 million pulled this way; millions among the rest fought and swore to go another.

Then something happened—columnists call it public opinion, but it seems to me an inadequate term. A majority of Americans became convinced their Nation was approaching war. This did not immediately bring a truce—indeed for a brief, turbulent period it intensified the struggle—but it started a movement to close ranks in the face of something threatening all. Fan dancers, pensions for Congressmen, waste, extravagance—furores over all of them marked the solidifying of a Nation.

Your American does not "join the Army"—he becomes "a soldier boy." When the boys started marching after Pearl Harbor the will of the people became active in Government. Today the overture in this national drama is over and the entire scene has changed.

How will it all work out? I do not know. One thing of which I am certain is that the war is being decided here in Washington: in Congress, the White House, in the great building housing the War Production Board and the sprawling headquarters of the Army and Navy. If Britain prevented an Axis overwhelming of Europe then the foundations of an even more decisive victory have been laid here.

And now, after all that serious talk, I will tell a story and imagine your dear eyes laughing. An abstemious Senator from a State where they pride themselves on knowing their wines, found himself in charge of legislation needing a comprehensive knowledge of the whole subject. Teetotaler that he was, he sat up all night until he had the wine business weighed to the last stopper. Proud of his industry, when the bill came up in the Senate, he sat his daughter in the public gallery to hear him.

He was almost through his say when a man sitting next to his only child, leaned over and nudged her. Said he: "My g—, the old devil likes his bottles . . ." If it doesn't sound funny written down, it was when he told me.

My love to you all.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Reappearance Of Vanishing American

LIPPMANN

IT IS often said that we have to reduce our standard of living. Yet the real problem is, I suggest, clearer if we say that we have to change our ways of living. Mr. Henderson has, for example, told us that "it is probable that in the next 12 to 15 months we shall get a civilian standard of living equivalent to 1932, which was the low of all lows during the depression." In a crude statistical sense this is no doubt true: it is reasonably certain that the aggregate money value of goods produced for civilian use will be no greater than in 1932 when factories were shut down or operating at very low speed.

But to describe the prospect this way may hide the real situation and may even give a false impression. It would certainly be a very false impression if, on the one hand, we were led to think that millions upon millions of workers and farmers will be destitute as they were in 1932, or on the other hand that those who have money can go on in the ordinary way, though on a reduced scale. The prospect in 1942 is radically different in kind from that in 1932. For there will be no question this time that the resources and the Government powers exist to insure the necessaries of life to the whole mass of the people. Yet there is no question also that in 1942 almost every one will have to change his habits and rearrange his personal life far more radically than most people did in 1932.

THEN WE DID without or did with less,—temporarily. Now we not only have to do with less and do without but we have to do very differently,—for how long no one can possibly guess. So we would be deceiving ourselves if we thought we could sit out this storm as we sat out the depression of 1932. For while the gross statistics may show that we shall have the same quantity of goods, the fact is that the goods we cannot have now compel us not merely to tighten our belts but what is much more difficult and important, to reorganize our lives.

The alteration of our ways of living would not have to be so drastic or so sudden if we had to deal only with the fact that Mr. Nelson is converting factories and cutting off civilian supplies. We own an enormous quantity of durable and semi-durable goods—automobiles, houses, refrigerators, and also clothes—which even if they could not be replaced would last us a good long time. The great change is forced upon us by a world crisis in transportation—of which the rubber shortage in the country and the oil shortage on the East Coast are the dramatic but by no means the only aspects.

WE REALIZE now, though we did not realize it before December 7, how interrelated are the means of transportation by sea and land and air, by pipeline, barge, railroad, trolley, bus, truck, and passenger car, on horse, by bicycle, and afoot. The American automobile is losing its efficiency because ships cannot go to fetch rubber from the Far East at all, or carry oil safely in the Caribbean and along the Atlantic Coast. Not even the automobile, which seemed to us the most American of American products, is self-sufficient. Moreover, as the automobile can no longer carry its load, the load backs up upon the railroads and the buses and the trolleys. And as they cannot carry the extra weight, the load backs up upon every family and every neighborhood. There at last the load that normal transportation can no longer carry has to be absorbed by men and women changing their habits of life.

It is then no longer a question of economizing but of doing differently, and indeed of thinking differently about how we carry on our lives. For in the face of the acute practical problems which every household will have to solve we shall have to attain a degree of self-reliance along with neighborly and communal cooperation which was rapidly disappearing from the American way of life.

THE INDIVIDUAL'S own automobile has probably been the most revolutionary invention in the whole modern history of man. For it made the individual feel highly independent of his neighborhood and even of his community, and in making him a self-sufficient nomad it has done much to dissolve the ancient ties between men and the place where they belong, between men and the other men among whom they were born. The capacity and, therefore, the impulse to be always on the move, have also profoundly affected men's willingness to make the best of what they have, to make much out of little. The automobile is a great and indispensable facility. But the rapidity with which it has been introduced into American life has been a mixed blessing.

Now that we are compelled to depend so much less on the automobile, we should not look upon the inconvenience as an unmitigated evil. The personal adjustments we have to make will be, many of them, in the nature of a blessing in disguise. For they will compel us to revive and restore many habits and many virtues which, if they disappeared altogether, would leave far greater evils than mere inconvenience.

NOT BEING able to move about so easily for our pleasure and our profit, we shall have to learn again to rely upon ourselves, and our own resources, and our near neighbors and friends. It was this combination of self-reliance with neighborliness which was the characteristic virtue of the earlier American way of life, and in the more settled parts of the country it still flourishes.

This is the combination which has struck all sensitive visitors to America—how individualist are the persons in America and yet how easily and eagerly they come together. In fact the comic figure of the go-getter and the joiner is only a caricature of the obvious defects of very substantial qualities. He is a reflection of the self-reliant man who is also a good neighbor, of the man who contrives and manages for himself—whether to get about or to amuse himself—and yet shares and joins with his neighbors so that they can all get about and also amuse themselves. This very American American is due to reappear, and he will be applauded rather than laughed at, in the days which are upon us.

Canadian Draft

By Janet R. Keith

For Total War

CANADIAN VOTERS have gone to the polls and told the government in no uncertain terms that they want to get on with fighting the war. Record numbers of citizens turned out on plebiscite day to say, "Yes, we are in favor of releasing the government from any past commitments restricting methods of raising men for military service." Returns tabulated so far show a 64 per cent "yes" vote from the whole dominion, with "yes" voters enjoying a substantial majority in every province except French Canadian Quebec, which voted 72 per cent "no." Incidentally, the Gallup poll covered itself with glory by forecasting the actual percentage majorities in each province within an average of less than 5 per cent.

Now Canadians are asking, naturally enough, "what did this strange plebiscite mean? How are the results going to affect our conduct of the war, our government setup, our national unity?" Probably no official statement will be made in Parliament until the last of the returns are in. But puzzling questions are already beginning to raise their heads.

WHAT of anti-conscriptionist French Quebec, whose emphatic "no" vote was in some communities as high as 95 per cent? Will there be uprisings and bloodshed in French Canada if the government introduces compulsory service for overseas? Some observers, remembering disturbances and rioting during the plebiscite campaign, fear that there will be real trouble. And what of national unity? Will this divergence on the plebiscite issue only serve to widen the gulf between French-speaking and English-speaking Canadians?

The general hope is that Quebec will act democratically. Since there is no principle in a democracy under which a minority can veto the will of a majority, Quebec is obligated as a part of the Canadian Confederation to accept loyally the majority verdict. It is too soon yet to tell what her reaction will be.

The affirmative result on the plebiscite was definitely not a vote of confidence in the government. There was some confusion on this point when the prime minister, broadcasting three days before the plebiscite, said that he would not wish to remain in office one hour if he did not believe he continued to enjoy the confidence of the people. Leaders of other parties immediately challenged him to explain exactly what he meant. Apparently they were satisfied by his emphatic response that an affirmative reply to the question asked in the plebiscite would not be considered in any way a vote of confidence in the present administration.

CANADIAN CITIZENS who voted in the affirmative did not mean "Yes, we are satisfied with the government." What most of them meant was "Yes, we want total war." And under the heading of total war, they are demanding broad changes in government policy.

There is a demand in some quarters for nonparty government. It is felt strongly that there is no place for party politics in a democracy at war. Winston Churchill held no office in the Conservative Party when he was made prime minister; Sir Stafford Cripps represented no party when he was made government leader in the Commons. Mr. Mackenzie King, it is argued, should reconstruct his cabinet to include the very best brains in the nation, and should set up within the cabinet a small war committee of about five men.

The liberal party, which has an overwhelming majority in the House of Commons, has never intimated that it intended to form a coalition government. It is extremely doubtful if Canada will see any form of nonparty government. Many capable men have been given responsible position in the war program, not through admission to the cabinet but through appointment to high government posts. At the same time Canadians can complain with justification that there is still too much of politics and too little of statesmanship in their government. The plebiscite, for example, wasn't held because the government's hands were tied on the man power issue by law or constitution. It was held because the government's powers were restricted by party electioneering politics in 1940.

THERE IS a demand, notably from the C. C. F. Socialist Party, for conscription of wealth and industry as an integral part of the war effort. Said the C. C. F. leader in a recent radio address to the nation, "We shall accept an overwhelming 'yes' vote on the plebiscite as another indication that the people of Canada are anxious for a war policy which places all of the nation's resources at the service of the nation's cause—without profits, without special privilege and without the evils of monopoly control."

While there is no evidence that the country is swinging over to a socialist economy, Canada, like England and the United States, will inevitably continue to encroach upon free enterprise as the needs of economic warfare demand control of raw materials, control of prices, limitation of services, curtailment of profits, taxation of high incomes. How far she will go along this road is anybody's guess.

Most important of all, there is a demand for compulsory military service overseas. Canada is already conscripting men of 21 to 30 for military service at home, and she has overseas in Britain an active army consisting of a corps of three infantry divisions, one armored division, an army tank brigade, and army and corps units. Government leaders have stated repeatedly that so far conscription for overseas has been unnecessary; voluntary enlistment has filled all the quotas. Be that as it may, Canadians want to feel that their armies can be sent anywhere they are needed. That is basically why Canadians voted "yes" on the plebiscite. They want Canada to take her place proudly among the United Nations, pledged to fight to the end on land, on sea, and in the air.

Commenting editorially on the results of the plebiscite the London Times said: "On this side of the Atlantic Canada's enormous productive effort and the great achievement of the empire air training scheme are recognized as constituting, with the presence here of a great Canadian army, valid claim that Canada has not been unresponsive to the obligations of total war." For this recognition of her past efforts, Canada is grateful. In the future she will let nothing stand in the way of her path to total war.

Unwilling Servitude

By Andre Visson

French Workers Aid The Axis

THE REINSTATEMENT of Laval in Vichy has posed before the United Nations, in its full measure, the tragic problem of French cooperation with the Axis.

Some of us are trying to find out whether Laval will now hand over to Der Fuhrer, to whom he apparently owes his reinstatement, the French navy and the French bases in North Africa or whether he will try to maintain himself in Hitler's favor by some minor concessions.

Others say that the problem of Laval's cooperation with his Nazi masters must be put differently. The real problem is, they say, not if Laval will do such or such thing, but when and how he will have to satisfy the demands forwarded to him from Berlin.

WE APPEAR, however, to forget that the French contribution to the Axis is not a problem of the future, but an already existing problem. The record of this contribution, part of which is imposed and part of which is voluntarily realized by a group of traitors, constitutes one of the most tragic and disheartening chapters in the history of this war.

We appear to forget that if Japan, abetted by Vichy's complacency, had not secured Indo-China, the Japanese aggressors would have found it much more difficult to realize their conquest plans in the Southern Pacific.

We appear to ignore the fact that the Vichy authorities in Indo-China have preferred to hand over the French ships, which were in Indo-China's waters to the Japanese, instead of letting them join the De Gaulle bases in New Caledonia.

We appear to ignore the fact that the Gestapo commissions are working in practically every important center of so-called Unoccupied France.

And we appear to ignore the fact that French war industry is obliged to do its bit for the Axis war effort.

THIS CONTRIBUTION of the French war industry, which is compulsory as far as the French workers are concerned, but which, most unfortunately, was accepted by a minority of French industrialists, is too important to be ignored or underrated.

It began as early as the spring of 1941. The Nazis, having realized by this time that the war would last longer than they expected, returned to France much of the machinery they seized in 1940, after France's collapse.

They decided to make the best possible use of the French aircraft industry and they not only compelled the French factories to produce for them French types of aircraft, but they began preparations for the introduction of German types in the French production.

The factories at Courbevoie and Issy-les-Moulineaux, in the Paris district, are now constructing parts of the French Bloch 174 for Bordeaux factories, where 2500 full time workers have to deliver 40 planes a month. But on the other hand half a dozen of principal airframe constructors in Occupied France, controlling 14 factories, have been busy since July 1, 1941, with the execution of 2000 planes of German type of (Heinkel III), the deliveries working out at an average of 107 monthly.

While the Nazis have introduced German type of aircraft in France, they have been satisfied with domestic types of artillery. The well known Schneider plant at Le Creusot is executing very important German orders for rough machine gun barrels, jackets, breech blocks and screens of French type. The former Hotchkiss plant at Lavallois, just outside Paris, continues to produce, under Nazi control and for Nazi account, its excellent 25-millimeter dual purpose (antiaircraft and antitank) gun. And a plant at Le Courneuve, near Paris, turns out large orders for 47-millimeter antitank guns, while factories at Chatellerault and elsewhere in occupied France are producing machine guns.

Very substantial orders for 25-millimeter explosive shells, for 37 and 47-millimeter antitank shells, and for 75-millimeter antiaircraft shells have been parceled out among factories in the Paris area or near Belfort and Vierzon.

OTHER factories at St. Denis, near Paris, and at Homecourt, are delivering to the Germans special artillery components, such as recoil cylinders, "Alpine" gun turrets and armour plates.

The Germans generally seem to confine their orders to items of relative urgency and to specialized types of apparatus, for which skilled labor is lacking in Germany.

This is especially apparent in the explosive industry. Before the armistice the French state-owned plants at St. Medard and Sevran Livry were mainly engaged in the production of nitrocellulose. As this explosive is produced, however, in ample quantities in Germany, French industry was compelled to specialize in nitroglycerin. The plant at Angouleme, brought into operation around the middle of 1941, is now producing some 1000 tons a year, which are further processed in the St. Medard and Sevran Livry plants.

Many other French factories have been submitted to this German policy of transforming French war industry into a subsidiary industry, completing the great German war effort.

French firms in the Paris area, specialized in precision work, are now called upon to produce military optical instruments which cannot be delivered in sufficient quantities by Carl Zeiss' plants at Jena, Germany. The Paris plants received also a large German order for radio receivers and another order for 500 portable transmitter-receivers for the German army.

THE GERMANS put to special use the two leading Paris motor-car plants (Renault and Citroen). Renault is engaged in the production and repairs of tanks, while Citroen is producing artillery tractors. Both plants are now, moreover, constructing motor boats and ferro-concrete "invasion" barges (suitable for tank carrying). Several of these craft are reported to have had satisfactory trial runs in the Seine.

Another motor car plant in Paris is reported to have received as early as June of last year an order for 200 trailers for transporting tanks of 22 tons. And the state arsenal at Paris Puteaux, taken over by Krupp, is used as a repair depot for artillery and motor transport.

The plants in the Paris area are, consequently, playing the preponderant part in a French contribution to the Nazi war effort imposed by the conquerors on enslaved French war industry. This fact accounts for the repeated bombings of Paris industrial area by R. A. F.

But if the Paris area plays the preponderant part in the French war industry's contribution, factories in other French provinces are also compelled to do their bit for the Nazi conquerors.

Aircraft factories at Bordeaux and Bayonne deliver to German high command the Bloch 174, while the Nant and Bougeonnais plants produce the German type (Heinkel III), with the subsidiary companies at La Rochelle and at Le Mans are constructing fuselages and central parts of aircraft wings. The St. Nazaire plant assembles German seaplanes at the rate of 30 a month. And the shipyards both at St. Nazaire and Nantes, build aircraft supply vessels, torpedo boats and patrol vessels of various kinds for the Nazis.

NOTHING, probably, illustrates, better all the tragedy of the French situation, than this forced contribution of enslaved French war industry to the Nazi war effort.

The French workers are compelled to produce deadly weapons used by their masters against France's yesterday's—and probably tomorrow's — Allies. And these Allies, in an act of self-defense, see themselves obliged to bomb the plants where these deadly weapons are forged and involuntarily destroy the lives of those whom they want to save and who expect them as liberators.

A Letter

'Nonviolent Resistance'

PERMIT me to congratulate you upon your sober and balanced attempt to evaluate the meaning of the resolution on "nonviolent resistance" against Axis aggression passed by the working committee of the all-India National Congress on the 2d of May. The reverberations of that historic resolution are echoing through the press of this country. Of the hundreds of editorials and radio commentaries, your editorial on "Non-Cooperation" of the 5th of this month is the most sincere attempt to understand the meaning of India's stand. And that is in the high tradition of your paper.

Let us first set forth the points of agreement between India and America. To begin with, India's record of opposition to Axis aggression and philosophy is consistent and clear. India, through the All-India National Congress, instituted a boycott of Japanese goods in 1931 after Japan's aggression against China in Manchuria, at the time when Britain and America were cooperating with the warlords of Japan. India denounced Italy's invasion of Ethiopia in 1935 and Germany's attack upon Czecho-Slovakia in 1938. At that time Mahatma Gandhi offered to the Czech people the weapon of nonviolent resistance in their fight against Germany's encroachment.

DETERMINED to free herself from the yoke of foreign rule, from the incubus of the British Empire, India is anxious to see and work for a smashing defeat of all forces that strive for the establishment of empire rule upon other peoples. In the movement of nonviolent resistance against the continuance of British overlordship, Gandhi has defined certain principles which the world may take to heart. For instance, he has explicitly called upon his people to be nonviolent, yes loving, toward the British people, while they must spare no effort in destroying the British system of administration in India. Toward the people, in whose name an evil system may be operated, as well as toward the very people who administer such an evil system, we must be nonviolent in thought, word and deed. But "we may not bend the knee" before the system of evil, as the recent Congress resolution phrases it.

That principle is now to be carried forward in India's international dealings. To the Axis powers India has unequivocally stated her stand, namely, that she is in no mood to welcome "liberators"; that foreign intruders, under whatever guise they wish to come, are unwelcome; that if, in spite of our desire to have no traffic with aggressors, any of the Axis powers should step within the boundaries of our country, they would be met with the weapons of nonviolent resistance, with nonviolent noncooperation.

I can understand the impatience of the American press; most of the comments breathe bitterness and impatience, betraying a feeling that India had "let them down." I say I can understand this attitude, but I also believe it springs from a misunderstanding of the issues involved.

India's argument is simple, so simple that even a child should understand it. India's goal is the same as that of America, namely, the establishment of the four freedoms everywhere in the world and the organization of world peace on the basis of justice, equity and fair play. But the ways to attain this objective are many. America has chosen to attain this laudable objective by joining issue with the Axis powers on the field of battle, on the plane of brute force; India feels she can attain the self-same objective by offering battle on the plane of soul force.

LET US be charitable in our outlook and be patient with one another. Let us cherish high regard for the lofty motives which inspire and have inspired every one of the 26 United Nations in their resolve to shed the precious blood of their young people for the identical goal. Before this war is over we shall all have to be imbued with the same spirit of "malice toward none, good will for all," that animated the great Lincoln. Please be patient with India; she will not let you down. In God's own good time she will deliver the goods, and by the right of her sacrificial blood offered in the cause of all humanity, embracing so-called enemies and so-called friends, she will sit at the peace table as an equal among equals working for the abolition of war from human society.

It is highly desirable that the American press approach India without bias and prepositions. The orientation of the British press with regard to India is deplorable. We are proud and happy to contemplate that it was an eminent son of Great Britain, Mr. Allen Octavian Hume, who gave the lead to the people of India in the organization of the Congress in 1885. And many notable Britishers have made common cause with us in our struggle to end British rule in India. But the British press, by and large, suffering from the limitations of the empire system, has been loath to admit the true role of the Congress in the making of modern India. Every difficulty would melt away if you once grasped that the Congress is all-India in scope and national in character. It has no sectional ax to grind. It is devoted to the national freedom of the whole of India.

It is not correct to suggest that India's cooperation in the war effort—enlistments in the armed forces and production of the implements of war—is the result of popular nonsupport of the Congress. On the contrary, whatever the British authorities have been able to do in the field of war effort is the direct result of the Congress policy of "nonembarrassment of Britain's war effort," to quote Gandhi's words. And the recent Congress resolution reiterates this stand of Mahatma Gandhi's when it advocates "not putting obstacles in the way of British forces."

Whether nonviolence is an invitation to death or a sure method of promoting life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness remains to be seen. But in the meantime, I hope no one will indulge in willfully impugning the motives of the people of India, as embodied in the program of nonviolent resistance against foreign aggression.

Willkie And The 'Free Browderites'

THESE DISPATCHES have been guilty of an error recently, affecting Wendell Willkie, and today's essay will try to set the record straight.

PEGLER

Some weeks ago, when the Communists were trying to promote a political pardon for Earl Browder, their criminal leader and erstwhile chief of the pro-Axis forces in this country, they quoted Mr. Willkie in display advertisement in support of this campaign.

Discussing this move and sharply recalling that until Hitler attacked Stalin, Browder and his party were savagely anti-American and pro-Axis, I was deceived by the form of the advertisement, as no doubt it was intended to deceive all readers of the same, into a belief that Willkie had given a statement for this specific purpose.

THE FACT is, Mr. Willkie has since informed me, that he made no statement for the pardon campaign, but that in March, 1940, in a general discussion of equal treatment of all under law, he leaned to the belief that Browder had been punished for his political beliefs.

Mr. Willkie tells me that the Communists did not misquote him or represent that the statement was made currently, but agrees that some, seeing this quotation, came to the conclusion that Mr. Willkie had joined the "Free Browder" campaign.

The fact is, he states, that Willkie has made no public statement with reference to the "Free Browder" movement. What it gets down to is that by their quotation of the Willkie statement of two years ago, the "Free Browderites" have practically committed themselves to the immediate institution of a "Free Fritz Kuhn" movement. A logical suggestion would be that under the circumstances those lovers of liberty, free trial and civil liberties effect a merger and dub their movement, "Free Browder and Kuhn."

Kuhn, it may be recalled, was the leader of the anti-American German Bund in New York, who was sentenced to Sing Sing for spending $500 of the bund's money on a woman. Declaring that he hated Kuhn's doctrines, Willkie said he "couldn't see convicting him of stealing the money which bund leaders testified Kuhn had a right to spend any way he liked."

MISLED by the tenor of the Communist advertisement, I thought Willkie had actually joined the campaign to get Browder a political pardon and wrote that his suggestion that "Browder was sentenced in part for his political affiliation was "a sly misstatement and quite expectable from a man who could say, as Willkie did, that one of his utterances against participation in the war was deliberately insincere and only campaign oratory."

I would like to withdraw the assertion that Willkie's remarks on Browder were a sly misstatement. I think he was mistaken and that Browder was sentenced under law for an act which was the more offensive to the Nation whose laws he constantly invokes because it was committed in contemptuous hostility to this Nation, in the interest of another. But I concede to Willkie the right to his opinion that this was a political prosecution.

As to his remark about "campaign oratory," I went too far in saying that he admitted that the utterance in question was "deliberately insincere." I, myself, still think there was an implied admission of insincerity in the phrase, "it was a bit of campaign oratory." But Willkie did not say so and I should not have said he did.

The occasion was his testimony before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee in February, 1941, following his return from England. Senator Gerald Nye reminded Willkie that, during his campaign, he had said: "On the basis of his (President Roosevelt's) past performances with pledges to the people, we may expect to be at war by April, 1941, if he is elected."

NYE ASKED, "Do you still agree that might be the case?" And Willkie replied, "It might be. It was a bit of campaign oratory."

Some have said that Willkie showed sincerity rather than insincerity in this remark. That is an attractive argument, but it seems to me that if the remark, itself, was insincere, then the "bit of campaign oratory" couldn't have been.

However, I believe both candidates in that campaign realized that sincerity would have destroyed at once the election chance of him who had been rash enough to confront the people with a fact which they understood with cold dread in their hearts, but would not admit to anyone. Our people knew then that Hitler was bringing the war to us and the candidates both knew it and all their pretenses to any hope of escaping war were "campaign oratory."

Well, Anyway it Tastes Like Coffee

St. Louis, May 8 (AP).—A new wartime beverage, made of equal portions of sweet potato and coffee, was tried today by Dr. Francis M. Grogan, city hospital commissioner, who said the brew tasted like coffee and was palatable.

The recipe: Boil a sweet potato, slice it into "shoestrings" and roast them. Put equal weights of the shoestrings and coffee into a coffee pot and brew the mixture.

Scrugham to Seek Senatorial Post In Nevada

By the Associated Press

James G. Scrugham, former Nevada Governor now completing his tenth year in the House of Representatives, announced yesterday that he would seek the Democratic Senatorial nomination in the Nevada primary next September.

Senator Berkeley L. Bunker (Democrat), Neveda, youngest of the 96 Senators, already has announced his candidacy. Both have consistently supported Administration measures.

The successful candidate in November will serve the remaining four years of the term of the late Senator Key Pittman (Democrat), Nevada.

Senator George W. Norris, veteran Nebraska Independent, may be an unwilling candidate for another term.

"I want to quit at the end of this term but when they say that would be cowardly and you can't quit in the middle of a battle, what can you do?" the white-haired dean of Congress asked his interviewer.

The Gallup Poll

Democrats Would Gain Seats in Midwest If Congressional Vote Were Conducted Today

Princeton, N. J., May 8.—If the 1942 Congressional election were held at this time, the Democrats would make sharp gains in the Middle West especially in the East Central section comprising Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and Michigan.

That is the indication from the Institute's "preview poll" of the 1942 elections, a poll consisting of interviews with many thousands of men and women among all age and income groups throughout every section.

The results for the East Central States indicate a net gain in the area for the Democrats of 18 seats in the House of Representatives if the election were today. This would give the Democrats control of a majority of seats from the area for the first time since 1938.

Farther west, in the eight States of the West Central section, the poll indicates a gain of seven seats for the Democrats if the voting were held at this time.

Results already published for New England and the Middle Atlantic States likewise show a slight Democratic gain.

Totals for all remaining sections and for the country as a whole will be reported tomorrow (Monday for afternoon papers).

The picture in the East Central and West Central States is as follows:

EAST CENTRAL
(Ohio, Ill., Ind., Mich.)

	Dem.	Rep.
Seats Won in 1940	33	47
Est. Division of Seats if Election Were Today	51	26

WEST CENTRAL
(Wis., Minn., Ia., Mo., Kan., Neb., N. D., S. D.)

	Dem.	Rep.	Other
Seats Won in 1940	16	37	4
Est. Division of Seats if Election Were Today	23	27	4

Because of reapportionment on the basis of the new population census, the East Central area will lose three seats in the House, and the West Central three, as compared to the 1940 election.

The sharp Democratic gain in the East Central section is explained mainly by the fact that no less than 20 seats won by Republicans in 1940 were won by a narrow margin of only 54 per cent or less of the majority party vote.

This means that only a very slight shift of sentiment is necessary to swing those seats into the Democratic fold. All but two of those seats would be gained by the Democrats if the election were today.

Although it does not take a very large shift to aid the Democrats in the East Central area, it is interesting to note that the Republicans have lost ground in an area which was more isolationist than any other in the period prior to Pearl Harbor.

. . ." he has started. By the time he has finished his course on this machine he is familiar with the shock of a chute opening and has been convinced that when it does open he has been brought up by the risers well within three seconds.

Men of the Eighty-eighth Infantry, the airborne regiment in training here, went through the course on this machine. It was no part of their course in loading and unloading their equipment from airplanes. They did it because they wanted to see what it was like.

After he has finished with this tower, which also includes a parachute drop in harness, guided by cables, the student goes over to the next tower. There he is hauled to the end of one of its four arms and is dropped in a parachute which floats free and lands him exactly as he will land from a plane.

This done, he goes to a wind machine and is placed in front of it, lying on the ground, with a parachute held open to the blast. When he is turned loose, the chute blows along the ground and he rolls over and straightens himself out and gets to his feet and runs 'round the chute to spill its air. No matter how he lands, in what sort of wind, he has learned to get himself on his feet and free of his parachute.

Fully trained on these machines, the student makes his five jumps from a plane and is qualified as a jumper and goes on to a parachute battalion where his training continues with daily jumps. The difference here is that every jump he makes from now on has meaning; it is part of some maneuver which has form and purpose and which duplicates as nearly as possible what he will do in battle.

He jumps from now on with his full equipment, with pistol and rifle and submachine gun. When he lands, he gets out of his chute as quickly as possible and moves on to perform some task which is a very important part of the mission his battalion has been ordered to accomplish. He may be taking an enemy airport or landing behind an enemy front to disrupt communications or capture his general or flank his line of resistance. From now on he is all business.

Suppose you go along with the 503d Parachute Battalion on such a mission. As a matter of fact, you learn, the battalion is testing some new equipment. But they have made a tactical maneuver out of the test and they pile their equipment aboard the plane and climb on after it and you get in with them. The plane takes off and turns southward.

If you show some interest in what the battalion is about to do, the operations officer will unroll a great sheaf of maps and spread them on the cabin floor and explain, while interested paratroopers hold down the corners to keep the maps from blowing away in the gale coming through the open door. You understand that the battalion has been ordered to take an air field and will land on scattered fields far to the south until an appointed time and then fly back over swamps inaccessible to antiaircraft guns, rendezvous some distance from the field and come over the field in formation, dropping their men on a balloon hangar. This, the operations officer explains, gives them training in precision landing and teaches them to take care of themselves in difficult spots, one of which he concedes the top of a balloon hangar to be.

The air is routh, so rough that the men inside the plane are tossed and shaken and thrown from one side of the cabin to the other, no matter how grimly they hold on to things. The plane's violent contortions are magnified by the nearness to the ground; you are flying under 200 feet to escape detection by the enemy, hiding behind barns, leaping over haystacks, skimming above the low pine trees and the watery swamps.

Four of the enlisted men are lying on their bellies with their heads at the door, their long bodies spread fanwise into the cabin. They are vastly interested in what is passing below and now and then a scrap of their conversation floats up to you through the roaring of the wind.

A small farm rushes by and a wisp of conversation reaches you from the men at the door.

"Mac," says one of them, "don't that make you homesick?"

The plane roars on and after a while you are over the field where you were to wait before flying back to meet the others. The pilot flies over it a few times and decides the field is too muddy for his big ship so it stays up, waiting until time to start back. It is very rough.

After a while you notice the others in the cabin are looking with furtive grins at a man whose face is the greenish hue of one inwardly disturbed. The conversation turns to casual remarks about airsickness and the plane's erratic behavior and the man with the greenish face gets up and gropes his way aft. It is very funny and everybody laughs and kids him a lot when he comes back looking no happier and then all of a sudden another man jumps up and makes a break for the rear.

Before 45 minutes have passed most of them have made the trip aft and nobody is kidding anybody any more and they all look as if they'd be glad for the trip to end. Finally the end comes.

The officer in command speaks quietly; it is hardly an order, and officers and men get up, squirm into their complicated harness with men helping officers and officers helping men, attach their rip straps to the cable overhead and stand waiting. A red light burns over the door and when the pilot switches it to green, the first man shouts "let's go" and steps off.

The plane is flying at 800 feet and has been throttled down to less than 100 miles an hour, just above its stalling speed. They go out so rapidly the plane is cleared in a matter of seconds and an officer who has remained behind pulls the dangling rip straps back into the cabin. There has been no excitement, no tenseness; the jump has been made as casually as you might step from your automobile at the corner drugstore.

One thing outstanding about the paratroops is that their officers always take all the chances first. If a new piece of equipment is to be tested, the officers jump with it first; if a battalion is to make its initial jump at night, the officers go out first. And everybody in a parachute outfit jumps, the chaplain, the doctors, the adjutant and the cooks and the K. P.'s and the clerks.

When the paratroops have landed (they call it "riding down") and have taken an airport, they are followed by airborne infantry whose big planes land on the captured airport with heavy machine guns, small cannon and other heavy weapons. From that point on the battle is developed like any other and sooner or later the paratroops and the airborne infantry are joined by the slow foot troops for whom they have prepared the way and the communiques read "an assault led by air-borne forces gained important objectives."

However glamorous paratroops may seem to the layman, the men who have become veterans in the business look upon the ordinary doughboy as an unfortunate chap with many burdens to bear.

"A lot of fellows come in this outfit," said one of them at Benning, "because it's the life of Riley. We go out and capture some place the generals want and then we go back and take it easy way behind the lines until they want us again."

Yes, it's a soft life.

Folk Festival: Audience Surrenders to the Marines

By Scott Hart
Post Staff Writer

The National Folk Festival swung into its full stride yesterday and last night and got hot as a fiddler who's stolen the barn dance jug.

Crowds, matinee and night performances which filled every seat in the D. A. R.'s auditorium surrendered to the Marines who supplied the finales with three songs, "Marching Along Together," "Song of the Marines" and "The Marine Corps Hymn" and who joined the audience in "The Star-Spangled Banner." In the afternoon, an estimated 3500 children rose and deafeningly screamed when the Marines marched in. Their elders poked fingers into their own ears for relief. The fighting men gave hundreds of autographs to the children and a big finish to a breezy afternoon and night of folk entertainment.

Another group of Indians came to join the Oklahoma Kiowas. These, the New York Onandagas, branch of the Iroquois, brought along some Indian girls who spoke with finishing school inflection off the stage and danced primitively to long applause.

The children beseiged them, too, for autographs. A boy scampered back to his seat from an excursion backstage exulting: "I've got the autograph of every Indian in this show!"

A haunting, beautiful joining of rhythm and voice was brought yesterday by a half dozen Negro girls from the Mather School at Beaufort, S. C. Singing in the Gullah dialect their voices took the moods of organ pipes and they weaved strange dreams with their hands. They were sent to the Festival by Beaufort citizens and the Woman's American Baptist Home Missionary Society.

Estefania Aldaba, the Filipino aspirant for a doctorate at Michigan University, performed matinee and evening in her "Rice Planting Dance." New comers included the "Wagon Wheel Dancers" from Swarthmore, Pa., presenting cowboy square dances, and two men in overalls, Merce Ridgeway and Walt Britton, from the New Jersey pine barrens. This pair jigged and fiddled some steps and tunes that were old when George Washington was soldiering and which were clung to, somehow in the barrens.

LORD HALIFAX

From the British Embassy, concerned as it was over the Coral sea naval engagement last night, came a sentimental message to the Festival Association. Lord Halifax, the Ambassador, asked to be advised within a half hour of the time the old English folk dances would appear.

Notified, he slipped quietly into the auditorium and sat through the dances by a group of boys from the School of Organic Education, Fairhope, Ala. Then he joined in the long applause they received and returned to the Embassy.

At the night performance Charles A. Thomson, chief, Division of Cultural Relations, State Department, and Mrs. Thomson, entertained a group of Peruvians, as follows: Dr. Enrique Laroza, director, National School of Engineering, Lima University; Senora de Laroza; Senorita Cora Laroza; Senor Enrique Laroza, jr., the Peruvian Consul at San Francisco; Dr. Manuel B. Llosa, Member of the Lima Congress, and Dr. Wilfredo Tfluecker, representative of the Ministry of Public Health, Labor and Social Security, Lima.

The matinee today will begin at 2 p. m., and the night performance, the final one, will start at 8:15 p. m.

The first of two conferences on folklore, held in relation to the festival, opened at 10 a. m. yesterday at American University with Lucille Barrows Turner, authority on the subject, describing an ancient tune called "Song of Lamentation," which she recently discovered.

The song, she said, was given her by a Negress, more than 100 years old and now residing in Louisiana. A similar song, Mrs. Turner asserted, was recently brought to her attention by friends who had heard it sung by Arab boys in Egypt.

The second conference will be held at the University at 10 a. m. today with many folk authorities from the festival attending.

FASHION FORUM

By Jane Driscoll

Miss Driscoll will be glad to help you with your personal clothes problems. Write her in care of this paper.

Bridegroom's Ensemble

QUERY—I am to be married this month at a formal church wedding at 7 o'clock on a Saturday night. My fiance does not have a cutaway and wants to wear a navy blue business suit. Is this correct?

Jane Driscoll

ANSWER—The cutaway is never correct for a formal evening wedding. It is only right for wear in the morning or for afternoon weddings before 6 o'clock. After 6—at 8 o'clock in your case—full dress is the only correct attire for a formal church wedding.

Full evening attire dress consists of a tail coat, stiff white bosomed shirt, "bat wing" collar, white pique bow tie, white vest, trousers with satin stripe the same material as the coat, evening shoes, black silk socks, white kid or doeskin gloves and a top hat.

If allowances are to be made, or all the requirements of the full evening attire cannot be supplied, then a business suit should be worn. Requirements are a dark suit, preferably blue, white shirt, starched collar, regular four-in-hand tie of appropriate coloring, black oxfords, black socks, boutonniere and no spats or gloves. At no time is a tuxedo correct for any type of wedding any time of day.

Calling Card Enigma

Query—I would like the question of calling cards for my young daughter 18 years of age settled. A close relative of the family believes that her daughter who is younger but has a brother, is the rightful one privileged to carry the "Miss" in front of her name. Even though my daughter is the "senior," is it incorrect for her to carry the "Miss" because she has no brother?

ANSWER—Presumably neither argument is correct. According to Emily Post, any young girl, after she is 16, is privileged to carry "Miss" in front of her name, regardless of the number of brothers she might have. Both daughters, if they have passed the age of 16, should carry the "Miss."

Cotton Slips

QUERY—Since we are seeing so many more cotton clothes this summer, would it be patriotic to go into cotton slips, rather than silk and rayon? How do prices of cotton slips compare with those of silk?

ANSWER—Cotton slips will probably be worn more this summer than last year, but not especially because it is patriotic. All types of fabrics are being converted into war materials, and cotton is not the least of these. Cotton slips are liked, however, because they are cool and feminine looking. They wash like a hankie and are easily ironed. (Some women even wore them last summer in emergencies without their being ironed.)

Whether or not you think cotton slips are expensive depends on the price you have been accustomed to paying for other types of slips. Silk slips are virtually out of the picture—with the exception of a few very expensive ones. Rayon types have increased a small amount in price, but are still within reason. Cotton ones, on the other hand are just as expensive as many of the rayons. They generally are priced from $1.35 to $1.65.

Two-Jacket Suit Smart, Economical

Hollywood, Calif. — Orry-Kelly has a knockout idea for smartness and economy in a stunning suit he has designed for Joan Leslie to wear in Warners' "The Hard Way." Of rich black broadcloth, a pencil-slim skirt is matched with two jackets.

A finger-tip-length fitted jacket is zipper-closed from the bottom to a small stand-up collar. Edgings at the slit pockets, cuffs, collar and front closing are of white, black and gold metal thread braid.

The other jacket is a long-sleeved bolero trimmed with silver hoops the size of dimes. They are strung on fine silk cords.

Both jackets are worn over a white satin skirt with pearl studs.

Summer Frocks Take to Black Early

Summer black is ultra smart for sophisticates this season. It is right for wear now, later on or all year around. Above, this sheer black crepe designed by the widely known milliner, Florence Reichman, features the new front apron drape and frilly lace decolletage neckline. Mrs. Reichman shows here her versatility for design by turning for the first time to creating women's clothes. Next week she will be in the city at a local store to show her youthfully "right" summer frocks for women of all ages

Furniture Factories Aid in War Effort

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

THOUGH the furniture industry won't be needed in the war effort in such a wholesale scale as the refrigerator, radio, appliance and automotive industries, the home-furnishings manufacturers are playing an important part in supplying the Nation with war goods. The furniture people are supplying wooden office furniture and equipment, dormitory chairs, cots, lockers, hospital furnishings, stretchers, litters, ammunition boxes, ammuniton carriers, gun-stocks, wooden lifeboats and wooden life rafts.

For aviation the furniture industry is supplying laminated wood panels for planes and gliders, airplane propellers, plastic parts. For forts and cantonments and front-line bases they're making such things as stoves, ranges and bake ovens; gas masks, gun parts; duck, canvas, blankets and black-out materials; fire and camouflage equipment.

Bombers Supplant Toasters

Other home-furnishing industries even more completely converted to war production are the small appliance industries that used to make electric toasters, mixers, and such like. They are busy making switch gear, turbo-superchargers for bombers, turbines, aeronautical instruments, searchlights, ordnance control, radio transmitters and receivers, gun mounts and howitzers, electrical suits, motors, generators, wire and cable.

The furniture industry could not convert its resources completely to war production, even if that were practical, because it must supply furnishings for the defense housing projects. Over a million and a quarter new houses will be built within the next 18 months. For them the need is for compact, practical furniture at low cost, and the furniture industry is bending all efforts to comply with the Government's requests for such furniture.

Wax Finishes

It is thought that more light waxed finishes will be most used here and that many new developments in bentwood and in plywood construction will result in forthright new types of furnishings for budget homes. To achieve good furniture within the average defense worker's budget of $500 for all the furnishings of a two-bedroom house will take a bit of doing.

The main problem is that the taste of the average person moving into these homes is for the conventional type of furniture. This conventional furniture is too large and, if properly constructed, is too expensive for these budgets. The far-seeing planners would like to evolve a simpler and better constructed type of furniture that is really suited to this need in place of giving defense workers poorly constructed, showy furniture that tries to look like more expensive stuff and doesn't make the best use of the small spaces available for furniture. Undoubtedly built-in furniture will play an increasingly important role in solving this problem.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Attractive Woman, 33, Ponders Her Misfortune In Meeting Only Men 'On the Make,' in Washington; Is Honorable Companionship Too Much to Expect?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a young woman of 33, fairly attractive, fairly well educated, dress well, own a small car, and have a good position and sociable disposition. But I haven't been able to find the kind of companionship I would like. And I am wondering if I am seeking the impossible. The men I have met since coming to Washington have all seemed to have one motive in common, namely—to get a girl off in a dark corner and see "how far they can go."

I am looking for the kind of man who likes to ride horseback, play golf, go fishing, boating and hiking; discuss good books, see good plays, hear good music and participate generally in a clean brand of companionship. If, perchance, such a companionship should develop into marriage, that would be all right, too. But I detest the man who declares his love for a girl on their first date, and from that premise, suggests trying out certain phases of marriage, "to see if we are suited."

I do not mean to imply that I am in any sense emotionally "frigid." In fact, I believe I am thoroughly human. But I have some ideals and I try to live up to them. Is it reasonable to expect to find men in Washington, between the ages of 35 and 45, who correspond to my specifications for a good companion? Or am I reaching for the moon?

WISHFUL.

Men Arrive Here With Mistaken Ideas

DEAR WISHFUL: The kind of companionship program you consider ideal would hardly appeal to the average man unless he were already in love—or falling in love—with the girl. And if you find all newly arrived men "on the make" in Washington now, it is probably because they are as naively confused concerning what to expect of the opposite sex, as you in your innocence are.

To illustrate what I mean: A young lawyer recently recruited to the support of the war effort in Washington, said in droll self-deprecation on a recent evening: "Before coming here, I was told there were at least 10 unattached women to every man in Washington. Think of it—10 women available for every lone man. Well, I have been here three months now, looking around. And I haven't been able to find my 10 houris to save my neck. Not even one woman has given me a rush. Is the trouble with me? Or did somebody quote the statistics wrong?"

There, I think, is exemplified the tongue-in-cheek approach to sentimental dalliance, of most men on-the-loos in Washington in these disjointed times. That is the attitude you are encountering, to your dismay; although if you were somewhat sophisticated, socially, you probably could set these amiably predatory fellows straight after the first false move, with no loss of personal poise and mutually friendly feeling;—and so clear ground for the development of an agreeably straightforward and conventional companionship, if the potentials of psychic and mental compatibility were there.

The men one meets in Washington are basically no different—in ethics and ideals no worse—than the men one might meet anywhere. Indeed, they come from everywhere—just as the women here do. If, in the preliminary stages of acquaintanceship, they make-believe to be Casanovas, it is purely in the tentative hope that the role is expected of them. They have heard tell—as the lawyer relates—that battalions of frantically lovelorn ladies await them here; and so they make ready to proceed without pause in rationing their favors.

The joke,—a rather sorry one,—is on them, I am afraid. Because, on the one hand, it is problematic whether women do excessively outnumber the transient male population of Washington at present; and, on the other hand, a woman of sufficient resourcefulness to stand on her own is no beggar of alms,—whether of love or other necessities of life.

Moreover, the tens of thousands of young women who have descended upon Washington "for the duration" come with high hopes of expanding their horizons to include "worthwhile men"—which to them certainly does not mean cheap sexual adventurers. Love they may want; marriage they may aspire to, and soul satisfying companionship they may frankly seek—even as you do—but it is the very sweeping idealism of their expectations which puts greenhorn Casanovas out of the running.

However, to consider your question of whether you, personally, can get off to the right footing with nice men in Washington,—I must say that, in view of your mature age, something of personal charm or assured social technique must be lacking, if you cannot. If you were 10 years younger, one might infer that you were either associating, by happenstance, with second-rate men; or meeting men under disadvantageous auspices. After all, a young girl is rather more dependent upon sponsorship and "background" to establish her rating in the social scale than is a grown woman,—whose philosophy and aplomb should speak for what she is.

In conclusion, I can only reassure you that the town is swarming with men of your age-level, who are essentially as companionable and honorably disposed as a woman could wish for—and a reasonable number of them must be free to marry. If you cannot corral them, it must be for want of magnetism and social mobility.

M. H.

Muscular Girdle Is Attained At No Expense by Stretching

By Ida Jean Kain

IF YOUR weight looms large at the midriff, it's stretching exercises for you. You can—and most likely you need to—take several inches off your waistline and tone, firm and flatten your abdominal girdle.

You can feel the effect of stretching within a week. This doesn't mean you have to be drastic about your program. Some of the showy, difficult exercises like lying on your back on the floor and slowly raising and lowering both legs are not worth the doing. On the other hand, exercises which involve a simple stretch or contractile movement not only are easy to do but are highly efficient when it comes to streamlining the midsection.

Waistline Terms

Any woman who will do this set of stretching exercises every day can bring her waistline to terms and acquire a firm muscular girdle:

1. POSITION: Lying on your back on the floor with legs straight down and arms on floor overhead.

MOVEMENT: Stretch your right leg across the left and touch toes to floor on the far side. Hold for a second and give an extra stretch to the midriff muscles. Relax, then stretch left leg across the right and touch toes to floor beyond. Repeat six times, relaxing between times.

2. Same, stretched on floor to full extension.

MOVEMENT: Flex right knee and bring thigh up toward chest. As you do this, dig the small of the back into the floor. Hold for a second, then slowly force kneecap over to the left side and touch it to floor. Return to chest, relax and repeat with left knee flexed.

3. POSITION: Lying on back on floor, legs straight down and arms stretched up on floor.

MOVEMENT: Inch around until your body forms an arc, with knees and elbows fairly straight, and hands and feet as close together as you can get them. Hold it for a moment and then work your way back in the opposite direction. Try to keep your back and hips on the floor throughout.

4. POSITION: Still on your back on the floor, but with arms straight out at sides on floor, shoulder level.

MOVEMENT: Keeping legs together, move them as a unit. Flex toward chest, then turn hips sideward and straighten with a rolling motion. Have legs straight down, then swing up to other side and flex again toward chest. This exercise does two things. It stretches your waistline and massages the back of the hips into a smooth line. Repeat 20 times.

If it is fat that pads your waist, a few pounds off will slim you down by inches. Follow this protective reducing menu:

Peru's President Continues Crowded Social Schedule

Dinner at Home of Sumner Welles Climaxes Round of Appointments on Second Day

By Patricia Grady

It takes the stamina of a Superman to live through the rigors of a full-fledged official visit, but slender Peruvian President, Manuel Prado, seems to be thriving on his split-second schedule of official events.

Yesterday was moving day for the Peruvian President as his luggage went across the street from the White House to Blair House, which will be his official residence for the duration of his stay. Accompanied by the Peruvian Ambassador, Manuel de Freyre y Santander and a number of members of the Embassy staff, the visitor went to Annapolis for a tour of the Naval Academy. After reviewing a full dress parade of the midshipmen, he was feted at a luncheon, after which he was rushed back to Blair House where he received the chiefs of mission at 5:30.

With barely time to don a dinner jacket—Rule 1 of the protocal regulations governing the Peruvian head's visit: No white-tie fetes—Dr. Prado hurried to Oxon Hill Manor, Oxon Hill, Md., where the Undersecretary of State and Mrs. Sumner Welles were his hosts at dinner.

Mrs. Wilson Among Dinner Guests

The Peruvian Ambassador, Manuel de Freyre y Santander, was among the guests as were the Peruvian minister of finance, David Dasso, who has been in the Capital for some time negotiating a recently signed trade pact, and Gen. Fernando Melgar, the President's military aide in aviation. Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, the widow of another United States President who devoted his life to international understanding, was in the gathering at the Welles' beautiful Maryland estate, and the Secretary of Commerce, Jesse Jones, accompanied by Mrs. Jones, dined with Dr. Prado for the second night in a row. He was among the guests at the White House dinner in honor of the visiting statesman the night before.

Other guests were Justice and Mrs. Stanley Reed, Senator Tom Connally, Senator Theodore Green, Senator and Mrs. Warren Austin, Mr. and Mrs. Dwight Davis, the United States Ambassador to Peru, R. Henry Norweb, who accompanied President Prado to this country, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Sulzberger, Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins, Mrs. Loring Christie, Mme. van Kaathoven and Mrs. Frank Griswold.

Today will be an equally busy day for the son of the Peruvian President, Mariano Prado, who after saving the country from a Spanish invasion force in 1866 became Peru's national hero and subsequently its President. This morning President Prado will visit the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier at Arlington National Cemetery at 10 o'clock and in the afternoon he will pay an official call to the Pan American Union. At 5:30, he will receive the members of the press at Blair House and tonight the Peruvian Ambassador will entertain at a dinner at the Embassy in his honor.

Covers for 26 At Dinner Tonight

A small dinner—covers will be laid for 26—it will be followed at 10 o'clock by a reception. Guests at the reception will be limited to Capital officials, chiefs of missions, and a few members of residential society.

Among the guests at the Peruvian Ambassador's dinner will be the Secretary of State and Mrs. Cordell Hull, Justice and Mrs. Owen J. Roberts, Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, the Undersecretary of State and Mrs. Sumner Welles, Dr. Francisco Tudela, Gonzalo Aramburu and Mrs. Alice Roosevelt Longworth.

Sunday, a day of rest for most people, will also be a fairly relaxing day for the Peruvian chief of state. He will be guest of honor at a luncheon to be given by the Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Adolf A. Berle, jr. That night, the Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs and Mrs. Nelson Rockfeller will entertain at a dinner in his honor at which the Vice President and Mrs. Henry A. Wallace will be among the guests. Motion pictures will be shown after dinner. Then on Monday, after a visit to the Capitol in the morning, he will entrain during the late afternoon for Detroit.

Anyone who has been watching the hectic flow of events during the President's stay here, can only say, "What a man!"

Dinner Takes Place At Norway Legation; Royalty There

Crown Prince Olav and Crown Princess Martha, and the Norwegian Prime Minister, Johann Nygaardsvold, were the guests of honor at a dinner last night at which the Norwegian Minister and Mme. Munthe de Morgenstierne were hosts.

The Prime Minister, who is here from London for conferences with United Nations officials, has been in the Capital about a week. Before returning to his government-in-exile in London, the Premier plans a trip to the West Coast.

The Crown Prince and Princess Martha have recently returned from a speaking tour through the Middle West. They were accompanied by the Norwegian Minister.

Mrs. Holman Is Hostess

Gathering in a number of her friends on the spur of the moment, so to speak, Mrs. James Holman was hostess yesterday afternoon at a small and informal cocktail party at her home.

To name a few of the guests invited, there were Mr. and Mrs. Morris Cafritz, Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Watson, Miss Page Huidekoper, Baron and Baroness Stackelberg, George Abell, Lieut. Peter Otway-Smithers, Miss Dinah Brand, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Clephane, Lieut. Henry Munson, Group Capt. and Mrs. A. F. Lang and a number of others.

Mrs. A. G. Dabbs, Jr. To Make Home Here 'For the Duration'

Mrs. A. George Dabbs, jr., has returned to Washington "for the duration," while her soldier-husband resumes his duties at Fort Meade, Md.

The former Miss Lucille M. Thomas, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. Thomas of Washington, and Sergeant Dabbs were married at St. Teresa's Church the morning of April 6. The Rev. J. J. Clarke officiated for the ceremony, and the bride's father gave her in marriage.

The bride had her sister, Miss Helen Thomas, as her maid of honor, and Sergt. Dabbs, who is the son of Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Dabbs of Chevy Chase, was attended by his brother, Edward Dabbs, as best man. Ushering were Sergt. William Winship and Corpl. John Burke.

MISS DOROTHY ELAINE BONDE

Mr. and Mrs. Robert C. Bonde announce the engagement of their daughter, Dorothy Elaine, to Capt. William H. H. Nullin, U. S. A., of Texarkana, Tex. Miss Bonde attended George Washington University, where she was a member of Alpha Delta Pi Social Sorority. She is also a member of Lambda Chi, National Professional Sorority. Capt. Nullin was graduated from Vanderbilt University, where he was a member of Sigma Alpha Epsilon Fraternity. He was also graduated from the United States Military Academy at West Point, N. Y., with the class of 1940. The wedding will take place early in June.

Notes of Society

Official and Residential

The Vice President, Henry A. Wallace, left yesterday for New York where he will address the Free World Association.

The Turkish Ambassador and Mme. Ertegun entertained at a dinner last night at the Embassy.

• • • •

Mme. Martins, wife of the Brazilian Ambassador, left Thursday for New York to make final plans for her exhibit of sculpture there next week.

Mrs. Ernest Gruening, wife of the Governor of Alaska, will entertain at a large tea on Monday in her new home on West Beach Street. The party will be another in the chain of Save the Children fetes.

Mr. and Mrs. George O. Mejlaender have postponed until Wednesday the 5:30 to 8 o'clock party they had previously planned for Tuesday. The fete will be held in their home, 2800 Thirty-fifth Street. Mr. Mejleander is Washington representative of the Norwegian Shipping and Trade Mission.

Mrs. J. Bruce Kremer has returned from Rochester, Minn., and is now at her home on Quebec Street. Next week she will have as her house guests, Mr. and Mrs. Erle V. Laveler of New York, who will arrive on Monday for a few days' stay.

Morgan–Wilcox Betrothal Told

Capt. Vance Duncan Chapline, U. S. N., and Mrs. Chapline announce the engagement of her daughter, Miss Cynthia Billings Morgan, to Ensign William Crocker Wilcox, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph DeWitt Wilcox of Minneapolis, Minn.

Miss Morgan attended French school in Warrenton. She is the daughter of the late Christopher Lyston Morgan of Chicago, Ill. Her fiance was graduated from Yale University in 1939 and is now stationed in Washington.

A wedding in the summer is planned.

Lieut. McManus and Bride Now 'at Home'

Lieut. William Joseph McManus, U. S. A., and Mrs. McManus, who were married last week at the Fort Shelby Chapel in Mississippi will make their home in Hattiesburg near Fort Shelby where the bridegroom is stationed.

The bride is the former Miss Frances Brand Qualls, daughter of Mrs. Guy Logan Qualls and the late Col. Qualls of Washington.

Mrs. J. J. Lenehan, Recently Married, To Make Home Here

The wedding trip was postponed, because the bridegroom is in the Army and has already left Washington — destination unrevealed. Mrs. James J. Lenehan, as she has been since May 2, is the former Miss Emily Terrella Payne, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. DeWitt Payne of Washington. She is known to her friends as "Terry," and plans to stay in Washington.

The couple were married quietly at Holy Trinity Rectory by the Rev. James McCarl. Only the immediate family and a few friends were present for the ceremony at 8 o'clock.

Mr. Lenehan is a private in the Engineering Corps of the Army. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. George Lenehan of New York and Washington.

Lieut. R. E. Green And Bride Living In San Francisco

Lieut. Roy Edwin Green, jr., U.S.N., and the former Miss Ann Austin Gayle are making their home in San Francisco following their marriage in Yuma, Ariz., on April 25. The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Charles Maxon Tozer of Coronado, Calif., and Lieutenant Green is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Green of Whiting, Ill.

Witnessing the ceremony in Yuma were Miss Anne Chilton Bass, daughter of Dr. James A. Bass, U.S.N., and Mrs. Bass, Ensign William C. Richardson and Mrs. E. Maynard Day, wife of Lieutenant Commander Day, U.S.N.

Lieutenant Green was graduated from the U. S. Naval Academy in 1938.

Danish Envoy in New York

The Danish Minister, Henrik de Kauffmann and Mme. de Kauffmann are spending several days in New York at the Waldorf-Astoria.

Miss Cromelin Honored Twice In One Day

Bringing to a close the series of prenuptial events in honor of Miss Jean Cromelin and her fiance, Capt. Robert Alan Meyers, U. S. A., was the buffet supper given last night by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Paul B. Cromelin at their home on Gramercy Street.

Around 50 guests were invited to the supper which followed the wedding rehearsal at the Metropolitan Memorial Methodist Church. The ceremony is scheduled to take place tonight at 8 o'clock and will be followed by a reception at the Mayflower.

Miss Janet Meyers, sister of the prospective bridegroom, entertained members of the wedding party yesterday at a 2 o'clock luncheon at the Shoreham.

Guests included Mrs. Cromelin, Mrs. George H. Meyers of Akron, mother of Capt. Meyers, Mrs. Harry T. Sniffin of St. Louis, Miss Barbara Meyers, Miss Carol Cromelin, Miss Ann Cunneen, Miss Lois Grenolds, Miss Helen Garrity, Miss Mary Markwick Moore and Miss Betty Piccirilli.

Egon Petri Concert Set for May 26 At Dutch Embassy

A number of prominent Washington women are on the committee sponsoring the concert to be given on Tuesday, May 26, by Egon Petri at the Netherlands Embassy.

Given under the auspices of the Washington Chapter of The Queen Wilhelmina Fund, Inc., the event will be first function of any importance to take place at the Netherlands Embassy since its status was raised. Proceeds will aid wives and children who have escaped from the Netherlands Indies and are now destitute.

On the concert committee are Mrs. Truxtun Beale, Mrs. Walter Bruce Howe, Mrs. George A. Garrett, Mrs. George Pettengill, Mrs. Stanley Reed, Mme. Van Kaathoven, Mme. Van Swinderen, Mrs. Edwin Watson, Mrs. Stanley Woodward and Mrs. Nathan Wyeth.

Miss Bonney Is Honored at Afternoon Fete

Honoring Miss Terese Bonney, outstanding woman photographer of the war, the Counselor of the Finnish Legation and Mme. Toivola were hosts yesterday afternoon to about two score guests who gathered at their home on Woodley Place.

Miss Bonney returned only about a month ago from Europe, where she photographed Spain during the winter and later France and England. This expedition might be termed her second series of war pictures, for she was in Finland when hostilities began there and spent the next months on the scenes of action as the spectacle of the world going to war passed before her discerning lens.

These pictures were exhibited here last year at the Library of Congress. Miss Bonney at present has an exhibit at the Bignou Galleries in New York, where Mme. Toivola saw her work on a recent visit there. She has been a house guest of the Counselor and Mme. Toivola and expects to return to New York probably Monday. However, she plans an early return visit to Washington.

Among those from the Finnish Legation who were invited were the Minister and Mme. Procope, the Counselor and Mme. Solanko, the Military Attache, Col. Per Zilliacus, and the Secretary and Mme. Mikkola. Also on the list from diplomatic circles were the Counselor of the Swedish Legation and Mme. Wistrand, the Military Attache and Mme. Wessel and others from the same legation.

Richard Arlen, a good friend of Miss Bonney, was invited, as were also Mr. and Mrs. James Wright, Mrs. Robert Low Bacon, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Elliston, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Edson, Mr. and Mrs. Blair Bolles and a number of people from the press.

Miss Lois Smart will entertain about 30 guests this evening at a buffet supper on her lawn.

Among those invited are Miss Marie Madigan and Miss Patricia Madigan, daughters of Col. and Mrs. John J. Madigan, Miss Agnes Dougherty, niece of Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney of Wyoming, Lieut. and Mrs. J. M. Wortsman, Ensin J. Penne, Mr. and Mrs. J. Frailick, Lieut. Harold Penne, U. S. M. C., of Annapolis, and others.

Birthday Dinner Given

Mr. and Mrs. Claude R. Breneman entertained 16 guests Tuesday night at their I Street home in honor of Mr. Breneman's father, Samuel B. Breneman, in observance of his seventy-eighth birthday. The elder Mr. Breneman is a native of Lancaster, Pa., but has lived in Washington for the past 45 years.

Miss Shaffer, Ensign Malcolm Exchange Vows

Before an improvised altar in the Army and Navy Town Club last night Miss Marian Mercier Shaffer, daughter of Commander Howard M. Shaffer, U. S. N., and Mrs. Shaffer of Honolulu became the bride of Ensign Everett Allen Malcolm, U. S. N., son of Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Malcolm of Raton, N. Mex.

Lieut. (J. G.) Robert G. Metters officiated at the 8 o'clock ceremony which was followed immediately by a reception for 60 guests.

In the absence of her father, Commander Murray L. Royer gave the bride in marriage. She wore a suit of defense blue with white accessories and carried a bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley. Her only attendant was Commander Royer's daughter, Miss Mabs Royer, who was costumed in a pastel wool suit with yellow accessories, and carried yellow roses.

Ensign Frank Welch, jr., was best man and ushers included Ensign Frank Campbell, Ensign Robert Hart, and Ensign R. A. Sequin.

The bride attended Rosemary Hall in Greenwich, Conn., and Smith College. Ensign Malcolm was graduated from New Mexico Military Institute and from the United States Naval Academy in 1941.

Lieut. J. J. Toomey Married in Texas In Military Rites

In a military ceremony recently at Fort Hulen, Tex., Miss Betty Louise Steinhauer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Earl Steinhauer, became the bride of Lieut. John Joseph Toomey, U. S. A., son of Mr. and Mrs. Vincent L. Toomey of Washington.

Capt. Herbert J. Melies, U. S. A., Catholic chaplain of the post, read the marriage vows. Witnessing the ceremony were the bridegroom's parents, his aunt, Miss Helen J. Toomey, and his brothers, Murray and Robert Toomey.

Lieut. Toomey, prior to his entrance in the armed forces was assistant director of publicity at Catholic University.

Women Don't Realize Equal Rights Value Maria Sten Declares

By Genevieve Reynolds

DYNAMIC Maria Stem—actress, author and ardent feminist leader of Copenhagen, Denmark, objects to the slogan on the Equal Rights magazine, which is the organ of the National Woman's Party.

Maria Sten

"It limits the women in other countries," she said, as she pointed to the slogan on the magazine yesterday in an interview. The motto on the magazine reads as follows: "Men and Women Shall Have Equal Rights Throughout the United States and Every Place Subject to Its Jurisdiction."

"Women in all countries," she remarked, "must fight for equal rights. Hitler banished in one day all the privileges that Danish women had achieved in many years when the heavens over Denmark were darkened by Nazi bombers." She paused and added, "Those flying sharks." That was on April 9.

Maria Sten recalls that day very vividly. It was then her last book, "They Owe Us Love," rolled off the press. Also, her role in the play that was in progress at the Royal Theater was stopped. Commenting on that day, Maria Sten said: "The fate of Copenhagen changed in four hours. I don't know how long it takes to disturb a human being's face when it's attacked by smallpox but I do know it took only four hours to destroy and smash the entire face of my city."

But back to the equal rights question. Maria Sten came to Washington yesterday from California to speak before a meeting of the World Woman's Party Congress being held this afternoon at the Alva Belmont House.

"To help win this war means for us women to help control our rights," explained the Danish author, "and to go ahead in getting real quality, real control not only in the realm of education, art and health where the men want to hold us, but in politics, too."

She emphasized the fact that women now throughout the world must fight for equal rights. "We have to fight for equal rights in politics and government to prevent future wars," she declared.

Urging women to use all their might to defeat Hitler and all forms of Nazism, Maria Sten pointed out that women lost all rights wherever the brown shirts appeared. She is concerned with the women's equal rights apathy in this country. "They were indifferent in Denmark," she said, "until they lost their rights."

Congressional Wives Hear Mrs. Roosevelt

CONGRESSIONAL wives and their friends turned out approximately 200 strong yesterday at the Congressional Club's benefit luncheon at the Army and Navy Country Club. Mrs. Roosevelt was the guest of honor and speaker of the day.

Profits from the luncheon will be used to finance the club's biweekly tea dances for young officers in the Army, Navy and Marine Corps. Invitations are limited to first and second lieutenants.

Mrs. John Taber, president of the club, introduced Mrs. Roosevelt, who pointed out the necessity for service and civilian recreation in all communities. Especially did she stress the importance of families opening up their homes to the soldiers in nearby camps. The First Lady emphasized simple entertaining in the home rather than large benefit affairs.

Out-of-town guests at the luncheon included Mrs. Gene Autrey, Mrs. Douglas Pratt of London, England; Mrs. Elizabeth Douty of Los Angeles, Mrs. A. F. Mengel of St. Louis, Mrs. James I. McMahon and Mrs. Charles Tye of Los Angeles.

Campfire Girls Gather Goods for Needy

MORE THAN 400 Campfire Girls in the Potomac area are busy going through their houses from attic to basement this week, gathering together all the shoes, clothing, books and toys for which they have no further use. The Campfire Girls have undertaken to fill 50 large sacks with articles as their contribution to the Save the Children Federation's "Bundle Days."

Mrs. Martin Jansen, chairman of the Guardians Association, announced today that the Campfire Girls will spend Saturday of this week sorting, packing and shipping the clothing which is to go to underprivileged American children in the Southern Appalachian area. The packing party will meet at the home of Mrs. Irene Caldwell, president of the Washington Campfire Girls. A buffet luncheon will be served the workers out-of-doors.

By cooperating in "Bundle Days," the Washington Campfire Girls are making it possible for several hundred underprivileged children to remain in school.

War Note at Meeting

A MAJORITY of Latin-American women delegates (men, too) to the eighth Pan-American Child Congress arrived with prepared papers on various aspects of social welfare in their respective countries. For the most part mention of war problems were omitted. But the Latin-American delegates who have lived in the United States soon injected the war note and the tempo of the meeting changed.

Senora Maria Currea de Aya

Senorita Julia McLean Vinas, Peru's delegate to the congress, yesterday introduced a resolution calling for committees to be set up in her country as well as throughout the other Latin-American countries to start war work immediately. Throughout the congress she has steadily impressed the delegates with the seriousness of the war situation.

Senorita Vinas has lived in Washington for some years. She came here as Peru's representative to the Inter-American Commission of Women. Now she is secretary to the assistant director of the Pan American Union. So she is fully conscious of the dangers threatening South American countries. Minute by minute she is driving home these war dangers to less war-conscious delegates. Also, she presented a motion to the congress to include more women in future conferences.

Before coming to Washington, Senorita Vinas was active in social welfare work in her own country. Referring to some of the improvements, she said: "Peru was the first country in South America to employ dietitians and feed the poor a balanced diet in popular restaurants. There were inaugurated the popular restaurants that have been adopted by other countries."

Social security is greatly advanced in Peru, she said. She asserted that Lima has the only hospital exclusively for the working class in the hemisphere. No amount of insurance or money admits others for treatment.

Senora Carmen B. de Lozada is Bolivia's official delegate to the Child Congress. She is the secretary and delegate to the Inter-American Commission of Women. With her appointment as delegate to the congress here one of the greatest aspirations of the commission was fulfilled. Nutrition is her speciality. She considers the provision of adequate food the most urgent problem to be solved in the Americas.

Although Senora Currea de Aya of Colombia isn't an official delegate to the Pan-American Child's Congress she, too, is wielding an influence on the future pattern of the congress. While she spends much of her time in New York, she is bending every effort to organize civilian defense in her native country. She is one of her country's representatives to the Inter-American Commission of Women.

"Colombian women aren't sufficiently war-conscious," she said. "They think it is too far away, but I am going to show them how near the war really touches their lives. I am going to see that the women are prepared to cope with actual war conditions."

The Dominican Republic's official delegate to the Congress is Senorita Minerva Bernardino, who is widely known in Washington for her work with the Inter-American Commission of Women. She is doing her utmost to encourage equal rights for all the women of the Americas. Also, she is urging all the women delegates to speed up wartime programs in their individual countries.

Business Women's Council to Hear College Dean

Miss Lucile Smith, dean of women of Brevard College, Brevard, N. C., will be the principal speaker at the twenty-third annual home missionary dinner of the Business Women's Council at 7 p. m. Tuesday, May 12, at the Covenant-First Presbyterian Church.

Miss Smith, a charter member of the Business Women's Council, has been a member of the faculty at Brevard College since 1939, when she gave up a position with the Treasury Department to go there as a missionary teacher.

Miss Elizabeth R. Groves, chairman of the home missionary committee, is in charge of pledge cards for a continuation of the financial support given the college since 1939, and for scholarships for mountaineer boys and girls.

The program for the evening will include a short talk on the council's motto, "Others," by the Rev. Clarence E. Wise of Wesley Methodist Church. Dr. Albert J. McCartney of the Covenant-First Presbyterian Church will deliver the invocation.

Miss Julia Travis, a graduate of Brevard College, now in training at the Homeopathic Hospital, will speak of her college life at Brevard.

In addition to supporting Brevard College, the Business Women's Council recently contributed $250 to furnish a room in the new wing of the Central Union Mission.

The varied activities of the council include sewing for the Red Cross and conducting religious services at the Home of Detention, Glenn Dale Sanatorium and other institutions.

Pen Women Will Be Guests Of Mrs. Provensen Tonight

Mrs. Hester Beall Provensen will be hostess at a buffet supper tonight at 7 at her home, 3831 Thirteenth Street Northwest, to the members of the Chevy Chase Branch, National League of American Pen Women, their husbands and guests.

A short program has been arranged by Mrs. Provensen, retiring president of the Chevy Chase Branch, National League of American Pen Women, which will be followed by installation of officers for the ensuing year.

Miss Mary Downey, who will take office as the new president of the branch, is an outstanding librarian, mentioned in "Who's Who in America" for her versatile experience in the library profession.

Although serving as librarian at the Alva Belmont Library, 144 B Street Northwest, she manages to find time to lobby for the equal rights amendment to the Constitution and to lecture before clubs and organizations on "Women in the Present Crisis," placing particular emphasis on their status after the war.

Other officers to be installed with Miss Downey include Miss Dorothy Nicholson, first vice president; Mrs. Carol Calhoun, second vice president; Mrs. Lida C. Lueck, third vice president Mrs. Charles L. Curtiss, jr., secretary; Miss Viola Offutt, treasurer; Mrs. Daisy B. Calhoun, auditor, and Mrs. Emma W. P. Slack, historian.

Members of standing committees for the coming year are: Ways and means, Mrs. Hester Beall Provensen; membership, Mrs. Mollie Davis Nicholson, and publicity, Mrs. Frances Troy Northcross.

This will be the last meeting of the branch until fall.

Yella Pessel Concert Set

Under the special projects committee of United China Relief, whose chairman is Mrs. Paul V. McNutt, there is being arranged a concert by Yella Pessel, world famous harpsichordist who has given concerts in Europe and has been the soloist in America with Philharmonic Symphony Orchestras under Toscanini and Ormandy.

The concert is to be given at Dumbarton Oaks on May 25 and there will be limited accommodations for only about 200.

Patronesses include Mrs. Roosevelt, Mrs. Morgenthau, Mrs. T. V. Sung, Mrs. Paul V. McNutt, Mrs. Stanley Hornbeck, Mrs. Corin Strong, Mrs. Walter Bruce Howe, Mrs. Archibald MacLeish.

Committee for arrangements—Chairman, Mrs. Lauchlin Curry; Mrs. A. Manuel Fox, Mrs. Alger Hiss; Mrs. Rudolph Stanley Brown, Mrs. J. P. Summerscale, Mrs. H. J. Wollner (Gertrude Price), Mrs. W. S. Youngman, Mrs. K. W. Yu.

Film to Be Shown At Czech Group's Party in D. C. Cafe

A new sound-movie, "The Czechoslovaks in Great Britain," will be presented tonight at 9 at May's Restaurant, 2317 Calvert Street Northwest.

The Czechoslovak-American National Alliance is holding its regular meeting that evening. Mr. Matejka, president, along with the membership committee, Miss Blanche Milcinsky and Miss Anne Zeman, warmly welcome the attendance of their Czechoslovak-American friends and especially prospective members who may find this fast-growing group of Czechoslovak-Americans the particular group they've been wanting to join since their arrival in Washington.

Homemade delicacies and refreshments with the appropriate beverages are always on the menu, along with the singing of Czechoslovak folk songs that enliven their gatherings.

Senator Capper Explains

Publicity, Another Defeatist Weekly, Is Barred From Mails

Harris & Ewing

SHE DOESN'T LIKE PUBLICITY—Mrs. Anne Bethune, the mystery woman who was sought in vain for two weeks, then reappeared when a Nation-wide search was begun, is pictured in Judiciary Square. She appeared yesterday before the special grand jury on Axis agents

By Dillard Stokes
Post Staff Writer

Postmaster General Walker last night struck his fourth blow in a month at the defeatist press—conditionally closing the mail to the weekly newspaper, Publicity, of Wichita, Kans.

The paper's proprietors—Elmer J. Garner, 78, and his son, James F. Garner, 47—were indicted last Saturday for criminal conspiracy and ten counts of sedition.

Formally advised by Attorney General Biddle that Publicity published seditious matter, the Postmaster General ordered the Wichita postoffice to accept no future issue, until it had been scrutinized and approved by the solicitor of the department, Vincent M. Miles.

A hearing on revocation of Publicity's right to use the second class mailing privilege was set for 2 p. m., May 21.

The Post disclosed the nature and policy of the newspaper, Publicity, on April 9, in one of a series of articles about the vermin press, which noisily invokes the Bill of Rights to cloak the propaganda of racial and religious hatred and sniping criticism of the war effort.

The crackdown on Publicity followed the pattern of the Postmaster General's disposal of Charles E. Coughlin's Social Justice, Court Asher's The X-Ray and the Philadelphia Herold. Social Justice has been barred from the mails and has suspended publication. The others await hearing on final orders.

Elmer J. Garner was summoned here a month ago by the special grand jury on Axis agents, shortly after the Attorney General ordered his Nation-wide investigation of treasonable and seditious activities.

Special Prosecutors William Power Maloney, Lieut. Edward J. Hickey, jr., U. S. N. (j. g.) and John T. M. Reddan kept the Kansas editor here several weeks, while they questioned him and editors whose policies are similar.

Visited Senator Capper

Garner's first call when he got Washington was at the office of Senator Arthur Capper (Republican) of Kansas, and he called there several times during his stay.

When invited last night to comment on the Garner indictment and the Postoffice Department order, Senator Capper said:

"I have not followed the developments closely. I have known Mr. Garner for many years.

"Seems to Be Indiscreet"

"We have been newspaper friends for 25 or 30 years. Mr. Garner is getting along in years. He seems to be indiscreet in some of his opinions, too radical in his views. I don't want to criticize the Postoffice Department. Maybe he has violated some of their rules."

While Garner and his colleagues were before the grand jury one of the witnesses called several times was Representative Clare E. Hoffman (Republcian) of Michigan. He had 145,000 copies of his "Roosevelt is a Judas" speech reprinted at the Government Printing Office.

Thousands of them were sent to widely scattered people and groups who mailed them out.

David Baxter mailed the speech out with a special bulletin of the "Socis" and Charles B. Hudson, also before the Axis grand jury, mailed it out with a seditious card.

The postal ban on publicity interrupted that paper's serial publication of the address in which Hoffman called the grand jury investigation a "smear" and explained that he did not call the President a "Judas" in his "Roosevelt is a Judas speech."

Mrs. Bethune Testifies

The special grand jury continued its investigation of Social Justice yesterday—pausing only to hear Mrs. Ann Bethune, the mystery woman who was sought in vain for two weeks, then reappeared when a Nation-wide search was begun.

The prosecutors previously had said they believed Mrs. Bethune could give valuable information about the financing and control of the vermin press and its associated organizations. She refused to expand this statement yesterday and declared her distinct aversion to publicity.

Observing a photographer, Mrs. Bethune settled herself in the witness room after she had testified, professing her determination to wait until he was gone.

But the photographer had brought his lunch.

Nazis Slay Five French and Seize 50 as Hostages

Vichy, May 8 (AP).—The German authorities in Paris executed five hostages and tentatively condemned 50 others today for an attack on a German soldier May 2, and published an order forbidding the use of bicycles after dark in almost half of Occupied France.

The announcement said the 50 others would be shot and 500 more sent to work camps in eastern Germany if the attackers were not discovered.

The ban on bicycles was designed to stem the wave of attacks. The order noted that persons who have attacked Nazi soldiers or committed acts of sabotage usually had bicycles at hand for quick escape.

Attorney Files New Document In Ewing Case

A supplementary memorandum citing a legal parallel with a recent Court of Appeals decision concerning the inadmissibility of "collateral evidence" was filed in District Court yesterday in behalf of a new trial for Orman W. Ewing, former Democratic national committeeman from Utah, convicted of raping a 19-year-old Government girl.

Motion for new trial is now under advisement by Justice James W. Morris of the District Court. James J. Laughlin, Ewing's attorney, charged in his memorandum that the Government went "beyond its scope" in questioning witnesses. He cited the Court of Appeals' reversal Monday of a conviction against Policeman Henry J. Martin on a charge of beating up a Negro citizen.

The appellate court ruled that the Government's cross-examination and rebuttal did not contradict the appellant's direct testimony, but dragged in further events of a prejudicial nature.

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

'The Invaders,' at Earle, Is 'Must' Entertainment

The Messrs. Olivier, Massey and Howard Head Ace Cast in a Vivid Adventure Story; Romo Vincent Tops Brief Stage Revue of Merit

"THE INVADERS." Columbia picturization of a story by Emeric Pressburger, adapted to the screen by the author and Rodney Ackerland, starring Raymond Massey, Leslie Howard and Laurence Olivier, with Anton Walbrook, Richard George, Eric Portman, Raymond Lovell, Niall MacGinnis, Peter Moore, John Chandos, Basil Appleby, Finlay Currie, Leyon, Glynis Johns, Charles Victor, David Paper, Tarvera Moana, Eric Clavering and Charles Rolfe. Directed by Michael Powell. At the Earle Theater.

"THE INVADERS," presented by Columbia Pictures as chief feature of the current week's bill at the Earle Theater, is the most intelligent, most interesting and most convincingly dramatic document that has come to the screen to date to blast the myth of Hitler's crusade for world "liberation" with successive object lessons in the unconquerable spirit of free men.

Through the medium of tense and exciting entertainment it provides within a limited sphere and without ostentatious flag-waving, a gripping and believable exposition of what Naziism has a wellgrounded right to expect on a world-wide scale. By pitting six survivors of a German submarine, sunk in the northern waters of Hudson Bay, against a cross-section of North American democracy at work, it expresses in terms of sane melodrama through small groups of self-respecting people the fundamentals of the ideology for which the United Nations are fighting.

At base, "The Invaders" is a "chase" story. Its argument on the side of human freedom, as against regimented slavery, while perhaps not incidental, never overshadows the thrilling drama of a series of grippingly realistic adventures. The six Nazi U-boatmen, under command of a lieutenant, land at an Eskimo trading post in the bleak northern wilds, murder their way to escape and lose only one man at the hands of a native sharpshooter when the stolen plane refuses to take off with its heavy overload of passengers.

Crashing in the northern wilderness, four of them reach a settlement of Hutterites, where another deserts and is shot by his commander. The three then reach Banff, where another is erased at the Indian festival and Lieutenant Hirth and his one remaining underling, Chandos, make their way to the mountain camp of a seemingly easy-going idealist, who reduces their number to one to prove to himself that nonbelligerents are not necessarily afraid in the face of danger. Hirth, finally, is nicely disposed of when he tries to enter the United States locked in a freight car with a Canadian soldier, A. W. O. L.

Thus do quiet, peace-loving men of a "decadent race" account for the "supermen" of the "supreme Aryans." It is all very plausible, mightily intense and exceedingly heartening as factual fiction rather than wishful thinking.

In each of the various episodes into which the narrative naturally divides itself, is unobtrusively expounded the philosophy of a distinct stratum of democratic society, ranging from the untutored French-Canadian trapper through the isolated little religious sect and the enlisted fighting man to the erudite and polished book-lover and art connoisseur. In none of these social brackets can the single-track Nazi mind cope with the soaring spirit of men who are free, except through the force of superior numbers and armed might. The "New Order" is reduced from terms of a nation deluded into the madness of its leaders to the mental processes and brutal acts of its individual members. Only in the character of Vogel, the Hutterite convert, is the presence of a sympathetic quality in the Germans reflected—and he is shot by his comrades!

A Cast of Stellar Caliber

The picture is as sound in its playing as in its content. Laurence Olivier, as the French-Canadian woodsman, first of the Nazi victims, and Raymond Massey, the Andy Brock, who eventually settles the score with Hirth with his bare hands, appear in only the first and last episodes of the story, respectively, but—aside from Mr. Olivier's slightly faulty "Canuck" dialect—bring the full force of their rich talents to their parts. Leslie Howard is perfectly cast in the incident of the camp in the high mountains and Anton Walbrook, leader of the Hutterites, is a dignified figure of quiet power. In the least appealing role in the play, Eric Portman makes Lieutenant Hirth the symbol of all that is sinister in the Nazi doctrine, without too completely clouding the suggestion that freed from the hypnosis of Hitlerism he might have been a man among men. The one feminine role of importance is played with youthful charm and fine spirit by Glynis Johns, the little Hutterite, orphaned by the Nazi tyranny. The supporting parts are uniformly well done, with especial emphasis on the excellence of Niall MacGinnis, as Vogel, and John Chandos, in the role of Hirth's faithful dupe. The natural settings and the skill with which they have been photographed are among the film's additional assets. While the action is wholly in Canada, no boundary line divides the spirit of that Dominion from our own on this side of the border.

∽

The stage bill at the Earle this week is brief but of high merit. With Romo Vincent in the dual capacity of master of ceremonies and headliner, it introduces Harold Barnes, a wizard of equilibrium on the tight wire; Sunny Rice, who preludes her accomplished tap dancing with a concert interval at the piano, and Mr. Vincent, whose song-stories are delivered in rather better voice than usual on this visit. The rotund comedian is a quipper of parts, too. The Roxyettes are as scrumptious as usual. A Merrie Melodie cartoon, "The Wacky Wabbit," in color, and the newsreel are the remaining auxiliaries of a feature that is an all-capital "MUST" these days, if ever there was one.

Youthful Charm in 'The Invaders'

who adds an ingenuous touch to the widely discussed film play of "The Invaders," screen story of rousing adventure in Canada, currently on view at the Earle Theater, with Raymond Massey, Laurence Olivier, Leslie Howard and Anton Walbrook heading the male cast. The drama concerns the survivors of a Nazi submarine crew sunk in the northern waters of Hudson Bay

'Adventures of Martin Eden,' Jack London Story, at Met.

By Richard L. Coe

"THE ADVENTURES OF MARTIN EDEN." Columbia picturization of the novel by Jack London, adapted to the screen by W. L. River, with Glenn Ford, Claire Trevor, Evelyn Keyes, Stuart Erwin, Dickie Moore, Ian MacDonald, Frank Conroy, Rafaela Ottiano, Pierre Watkin, Regina Wallace and Robert J. McDonald. Directed by Sidney Salkow. Reviewed Friday afternoon. At the Metropolitan Theater.

Jack London often wrote his novels in autobiographical vein. One of the most personal of these, "The Adventures of Martin Eden," published in 1909, now appears on the Metropolitan screen, a substantial and vigorous film.

Boysh Glenn Ford has the title role and does a surprisingly forceful job as the two-fisted idealist whose greatest strength was unvarnished truth. Despite his apparent youth, he holds up his end well in a handful of fights with huskier Ian MacDonald.

In "Martin Eden," Jack London told a story he was fond of telling, one very close to his own personal life. He wrote of a young man who learns of the cruelty and sadism found in the ships and their masters as he himself had seen them when a seaman. His hero determines to tell the world about these wrongs via the printed word. When no one believes him, he vows that someday they shall. Like Jack London himself, Martin Eden finally made it.

Columbia has carefully avoided dating their film version. Rather than specifically set the time of London's story, they have avoided the exact period. But so well, so thoroughly did idealist Jack London plead the cause of the seamen he knew so intimately that there is a musty atmosphere about the entire story. It isn't that seamen may not have the same troubles with their masters and captains today—they may have. But if they do, they are far less clearcut, far more cloudily defined, thanks to such stories as Jack London wrote and influenced others to write. In its way, this criticism of the film's effect in 1942 is the highest tribute possible to the vitality and strength of its author's work.

Able Supporting Cast

For all that, there is an angry righteousness in the picture. It seems natural enough that starry-eyed Martin should be tempted by the aloof debutante who helps him along, even if she ultimately has to choose between him and her father. Claire Trevor's playing of the inelegant sister of a seaman Martin has vowed to help has a vitality that makes the romantic facets interesting rather than stereotyped. Martin's discovery that an author he has idolized since his boyhood has stolen a story from him remains a compelling reaction of human nature—he refuses to believe that a man he has trusted could do such a wrong. His final repudiation of an untidy compromise has dignity, even though a completely unreal fadeout—in the form of a courtroom cliche—mars its final effect.

Director Sidney Salkow has been fortunate in an able, workmanlike cast; everything that his players do has the certainty that adds up to convincing effect. Besides Ford and Miss Trevor, the principals include Evelyn Keyes, as the lass of leisure; Stuart Erwin, sincere and serious as the seaman Eden must help, and Frank Conroy as the writer he admired.

"Shoot Yourself Some Golf," wherein Ronald Reagan and his wife, Jane Wyman, watch some powerful driving by champ Jimmy Thomson and some slick trick shots by Jack Redmond, shares the short subject program with an inane Leon Errol comedy, "Wedded Blitz." The Universal and Paramount Newsreels complete the bill.

Loose-Leaf Notebook

New York, May 8.

A plan for the evacuation of all enemy-aliens from the East Coast—similar to the recent West Coast exodus—soon will be announced. The plan now is being formulated by the Army . . . When Harry Hopkins and General Marshall flew to England, each carried a case of vegetables from Bermuda. Hopkins presented his to Mrs. Winston Churchill, and General Marshall gave his to the British Chief of Staff . . . Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt gorged himself on bananas and water on the day he was to be examined by the United States Navy. But despite this added poundage, Vanderbilt has been rejected, temporarily, until he can gain more weight . . . The President now has a new cook at the White House—the cook who worked for his mother.

Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess" probably will be brought to the screen by Gabriel Pascal, the man who made George Bernard Shaw's movies . . . The Polish scientist who escaped from Warsaw and brought his synthetic-rubber process to Washington last week, was discovered by Dr. I. Lubin, of the President's staff. Lubin helped him get the necessary funds for his experiments . . . "Rockie's Special," the hot swing-tune which was introduced at the Savoy Ballroom by Bandleader Lionel Hampton, was written by the 20-year-old socialite Galen Stone Hoyt. He's a Juilliard student, brother of Eleanor Hoyt Du Pont . . . Felix Salten, author of "Bambi," now is in Switzerland. His friends are trying to arrange transportation, to bring the venerable writer to America.

Monday night the Institute for Education by Radio conducted a series of round-table conferences. Arch Oboler, who won a prize for having written one of the best morale radio-plays, listened to a series of attacks against some of the Government's current morale programs . . . "Right now, after listening to this," said Oboler, "my personal morale is low" . . . "Young man," said Dr. Carl J. Friedrich of Harvard University, "I don't know who you are, but" . . . "You don't know who I am?" sighed Oboler, as he sat down. "My personal morale now is lower."

Representative Tinkham of Massachusetts, the bearded veteran of Congress who announced that he was retiring because of his advanced age and because his constituency had changed, made his announcement after a careful survey. Tinkham, a member of the isolationist bloc, had flown to Boston and learned that Christian Herter of Harvard's Board of Overseers would beat him . . . Henny Youngman will work at the Yacht Club in Pittsburgh—the city where he expects a whiteout . . . On one of the glass panels behind the bench of the United States Supreme Court could be seen the outlines of a Tic-Tac-Toe game . . . Former Warden Lewis E. Lawes still hasn't definitely abandoned his plan to oppose the candidacy of Representative Ham Fish.

Robert Capa, the photographer who recently went to London for Collier's, was fortunate in being able to take some good cameras with him. When Capa last was in France, he arrived at a seashore resort without any money and without a camera. He went to the beach, and there saw one of the finest cameras extant. It was hanging, unguarded, on a picket fence . . . "I will let fate decide," he mused. "I'll swim out to the raft, and wait there until I've counted up to 500. Then I'll swim back here. And if, by that time, the camera isn't claimed, I'll consider it rightfully mine" . . . He placed his trousers next to the camera, as a marker, then plunged into the surf. He swam out to the raft, counted 500, and swam back. He walked to the fence. The camera was gone . . . And so were his trousers.

Mayor LaGuardia addressed the $25-a-plate guests at his campaign deficit dinner, and told them that he was grateful to the ticket-holders who were absent from the dinner. "In that way," Fiorello explained, "it leaves more money for us, and reduces our deficit" . . . James True, the hate-publisher whose activities have been dormant of late, will hear some bad news shortly . . . Cyrus Sulzberger, the correspondent who won a portable typewriter as a prize from the Overseas Press Club, collected it yesterday. He confessed that he had disposed of his own portable to the British Secret Service, in Cairo, for £10 . . . Hoyt of Oregon is the newest entry in the sweepstakes for the job of heading the combined Government information bureaus.

Pidgeon Finds Cowboy LifeHectic

Walter Pidgeon adds another accomplishment to his long list of talents. He has learned to be a cow puncher—the dangerous way.

Pidgeon is visiting a friend on an Arizona ranch. The other day he decided to take cattle punching lessons. He was getting along swell until a plane flying overhead stampeded the herd and only Pidgeon's talent for running fast saved him from being mowed down.

—HEDDA HOPPER—

So, Better Throttle Your Surprise!

Hollywood, Calif., May 8.—Don't be too surprised if Marlene Dietrich makes a settlement with her husband while she's in New York, and paves the way for her marriage to Jean Gabin. Sure —' one of the reasons she went East was to attend the premiere of "Moontide" with Jean. She's taking no chances on those society matrons back there, and for that I don't blame her. While she's East, she'll go to four Army camps.

MARLENE DIETRICH

Except for the fact that Ronnie Colman didn't have amnesia, he might be playing himself in "Random Harvest." Did you know Ronnie was a member of Lord Kitchener's "Contemptibles" — the first 100,000 to be sent over to France in the last World War? Ronnie has the Mons medal with the 1914 bar on it.

In that same picture, Mervyn LeRoy's gives Greer Garson a chance to sing. She'll warble "She's My Daisy" and give an imitation of Harry Lauder. Most of Hollywood has forgotten she used to be a musical comedy star in London before she ever came here.

On that set, I discovered Charles Waldron. He tells me his son, who started as a "super" with my son Bill, in Kit Cornell's "Romeo and Juliet," has now got his wings.

∽

Found Jeanette MacDonald and Bob Young lollygagging in "Cairo"—Jeanette as a motion picture star pretending to be somebody else; Bob, a small town newspaperman as a waiter. Each suspects theother of being a spy, and each for the moment—at least, when I was there—practicing relaxation, which they'd better make the most of 'cause from now on that's going to be a word no motion picture star will understand the meaning of. With so many demands upon their spare time, they'll be working 16 hours a day.

∽

Attention High Sierra game wardens: Abbott and Costello are headed that way to snag some trout. Other day, Lou stayed in the water for a "Pardon My Sarong" scene so long his feet shrunk one size—"And," said Bud, "I guess his head swelled four—to balance him?"

∽

When Ilka Chase hit the "Now, Voyager" set loaded with paper and typewriter to carry on writing between scenes, she said, "With what I've got to do, I ought to be two people. "You are," said Bette Davis. "You're a lickety-split personality if I ever saw one." But that isn't what Hollywood's saying about her, nor will my paper let me print it!

∽

Ilona Massey is up for the feminine lead in "The Life of Valentino." In real life, Valentino never had a girl as beautiful as that.

∽

Sorry to hear my friend, and Louis B. Mayer's assistant, Ida Koverman, has been ill. She's befriended so many. Even during her illness, she's worried about Judy Garland, thinks she's dieting too much. Ida had to miss the great triumph of her protegee, 8-year-old Jackie Horner, when she played with our symphony orchestra and got ten curtain calls.

∽

Friends of Producer Edgar Selwyn, who are legion, are mighty glad to know that he's well on the mend.

Jean Ames got her screen test at Warners through a letter to the studio Heads, in which she wrote, "I'm a healthy Ida Lupino."

∽

∽

Producer Harry Rapf is definitely out of the Dore Schary unit, but because he's been with the company 18 years, a place is being made for Harry.

U.S. Cargo Ship Shells U-Boat Then Is Sunk

By the Associated Press

San Juan, Puerto Rico, May 8.—Fifty survivors of an American merchantship have arrived here and reported their gunners probably disabled one of three submarines which sank their vessel after an eight-hour battle.

One member of the ship's gun crew said 12 shells were fired at two of the submarines. He said he believed two hits were scored. One gunner was slightly bruised in the torpedo explosion, but there were no other casualties.

Among those rescued were two English passengers and an airedale dog, "Mickey," which had been at sea 30 months with the ship's master, Captain E. V. Farrora.

Key West, Fla., May 8 (AP).—Fourteen survivors, landed here after two medium-sized United States merchantmen were attacked and sunk in the Caribbean, reported angrily that two German submarines machine-gunned members of one crew who sought temporary safety in the forecastle of their burning ship.

The two attacks were made public today by the Navy, which said 28 men from one ship and 27 from another apparently lost their lives. Four men were saved from one merchantman from a crew of 32 and were brought here by a passing Norwegian ship that risked destruction to make the rescue. Ten of 37 on the other vessel were saved by a Navy plane which kept vigil above them throughout the night and picked them up at daylight.

Preston Carpenter, 26, fireman from Beaumont, Texas, said he could see one large German submarine plainly, a large black swastika painted on her conning tower, after the merchant ship was hit.

Wants Crack at Germans

"There was no rust on her," he said. "She was freshly painted. She looked as if she was just out of drydock."

Angrily declaring he wanted to go back to sea, Carpenter added: "I want to sail on a merchant ship that is armed so when these babies begin shooting, we can give them some of their own medicine."

Aboard the other United States merchant ship members of the crew saw the explosions and the blaze, and for three hours zigzagged, knowing that eventually the submarines would get them.

Kenneth Morgan, 19, of Princeton, N. Y., just two weeks out of a Maritime Commission school for radio operators, remained at the wireless key in a smoke-filled shack sending word of the attack until he was carried, almost unconscious, to safety in the arms of Capt. Walter Reed, of Oaklawn, N. Y.

Four of the survivors said they would try to join the Navy. First Mate J. L. Eskridge, of Houston, Tex., said:

"You can't plug those babies from merchant vessels. I am going to try to join the Navy and I would like to get on a subchaser or a PT boat."

Oklahoma Society Frolics Tonight

The annual homecoming of the Oklahoma State Society at the Shoreham Hotel tonight will be featured by unveiling of a portrait of former Senator Robert L. Owen, one of the State's first Senators, and the appearance of Gene Autry, fellow Oklahoman.

Paul A. Walker of the Federal Communications Commission, president of the society, said the painting was sponsored jointly by the Washington group and the Oklahoma State Historical Society and will hang in the State Capitol beside a self portrait of the Senator's mother. Senator Owen's daughter, Mrs. Burgoyne Hamilton of New York City, will unveil the portrait.

Both former Senators Owen and T. P. Gore will attend the reception. A dance will follow dinner.

Funeral Rites Set Today for Naval Officer

Funeral services for Lieut. Comdr. Stephen Ray Bedford, 38, who died Tuesday at the Naval Hospital at Bethesda, Md., will be held at 2:30 p. m. today at Fort Myer Chapel, with burial in Arlington Cemetery.

Commander Bedford, on duty at the Navy Bureau of Ships since January 1, lived at 3512 North Third Street, Arlington, Va., with his wife, Mrs. Isabel Culver Bedford, and two children, Tony, 4 and Suzanne, 6 months.

Other survivors are his mother, Mrs. Catherine Bedford of Chowchilla, Calif., and eight brothers and sisters, Mrs. H. M. Drake of Arlington, Mrs. G. E. Riggins of Chowchilla, Miss Josephine Bedford of Madera, Calif., Horace Bedford of Los Angeles, R. L. Bedford of Long Beach, Calif., Edmund Bedford of West Los Angeles, Thomas Bedford of Chowchilla, and Joseph Bedford of Fresno, Calif.

A native of Las Vegas, N. Mex., Commander Bedford was graduated from the Naval Academy in 1924 and saw his first duty aboard the battleship Oklahoma, which was sunk December 7 at Pearl Harbor.

For action in the Yangtze campaign in China, where he served from 1926 to 1929, he was awarded the service bar. In 1931 he received a master's degree in mechanical engineering from Columbia University and subsequently saw duty on the destroyer Barry, the auxiliary Dobbin, at the Bremerton (Wash.) Navy Yard, on the destroyer Cushing as chief engineer, at the New York Navy Yard and on the battleship West Virginia.

He was commander of the destroyer Perkins for several weeks before coming to Washington.

Services Today For Dr. Battle

Funeral services for Dr. William Delmar Battle, former pastor of Galbraith, A. M. E. Zion Church, 1114 Sixth Street Northwest, will be held there today at 10 a. m. The body will lie in state at the church from 8 to 10 a. m. Burial will be in Lincoln Cemetery.

The Rev. James L. White, present Galbraith pastor, will officiate.

Dr. Battle died last Tuesday in Pittsburgh, Pa., where he was pastor of Wesley Center A. M. E. Zion Church. Services for him were held there yesterday.

Vermont Alumni to Dine

Dr. John S. Millis, president of the University of Vermont, will speak at a dinner rally of alumni tonight at 7:30 in the Hay-Adams House. The meeting is being held in the interest of the university's security fund.

Court Asked To Break Tie In Libel Case

By the Associated Press

Attorneys for 26 newspapers asked the Supreme Court yesterday to reconsider its recent 4 to 4 ruling sustaining a circuit court decision which was interpreted by opposing litigants as holding that under New York law it is "libelous per se" to publish a false charge that a public official holds anti-semitic views.

The Supreme Court action, on April 13, taken without a written opinion because of the tie vote, directed a trial before the Northern New York Federal District Court to determine whether Representative Sweeney (Democrat), Ohio, had been libeled by statements published in 1938 in the Schenectady (N. Y.) Union Star that he was opposing the appointment of a Jew as Federal district judge at Cleveland.

Morris L. Ernst, New York attorney for the Schenectady Union Publishing Co., contended in the petition for rehearing that a failure to decide the controversy by a written opinion "will encourage further multiplicity of suits and the continued emergence of a crazy-quilt of conflicting rulings in the field of Federal constitutional law, and the common law properly applicable to charges made against national legislators."

66 Suits Brought

Ernst said the suit against the Schenectady paper was but one of "no less than 66" brought by Sweeney against newspapers which published the comment of the Representative contained in a syndicated column called "The Washington Daily Merry-Go-Round." The attorneys joining with Ernst in the petition represented 25 of these papers.

Referring to the disqualification of Justice Jackson, a New Yorker and former Attorney General, from participating in the April 13 action and the Supreme Court practice, in the event of a tie vote, of affirming the decision of the lower court appealed from, Ernst said:

"It is respectfully urged that where a tie vote results from a voluntary disqualification, the wise administration of justice requires that before confessing itself unable to decide a case rightfully before it, especially one voluntarily taken on for decision by reason of its great importance, this court request the self-disqualifying justice to sit.

"The making of such a request by the court will dispel all doubt in the public mind and in acceding to it, the justice will not be subject to personal criticism on the ground of taste."

Texas Law Questioned

The Supreme Court was asked yesterday to pass on the constitutionality of Texas legislation making unlawful "the use of force or violence" in an attempt "to prevent any person from engaging in any lawful vocation."

The appeal was filed by Ted Sanford of Harris County, charged with preventing Allen Guidry, by the use of force and violence, from engaging in his vocation as waiter at a cafe.

After his arrest, Sanford asked Judge Langston G. King of the Harris County Criminal District Court to release him on a writ of habeas corpus.

Judge King held the statute to be constitutional and this decision was upheld by the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals. Sanford's petition contended that the 1941 statue was unconstitutional because it denied him equal protection of the laws and deprived him of liberty without due process of law.

Joseph H. Moskowitz, New York representative of Movie-Magnate Joseph M. Schenck, appealed to the Supreme Court from Schenck's conviction on a charge of attempting to evade Fedaral income taxes claimed to have been due from Schenck in 1946.

Hero of Fisrt World War Leads Fleet Fighting Japs

Adm. Leary Holds Medal for Training Crews in Gunnery

By International News Service

A 57-year-old veteran and hero of the first World War is today directing the American naval forces in the running sea battle against the Jap forces in the Pacific.

He is Vice Admiral Herbert Fairfax Leary, a native of Washington. He is a holder of the Navy Cross for "zeal and devotion to duty in the direction of training armed guard crews and general gunnery in 24 battleships of the force."

In 1926 he was placed on the staff of the commander of destroyer squadrons and later supervised naval proving grounds in Dahlgren, Va., and a naval powder factory in Indianhead, Md. He was ordered to sea in January, 1941, and recently was named commander of the Southwest Pacific forces.

VICE ADM. LEARY

Beaten Jap Fleet Fleeing After Great 5-Day Battle

Japanese scattered and fled to the north, leaving thousands of their men to die in the sea.

It was, the dispatches said, "largely an American show." And it was the worst defeat ever inflicted upon the Japanese navy.

The American dive-bombers performed "very brilliantly." They smashed bombs directly onto the first aircraft carrier and it heeled over "and sank almost immediately." They struck at the second with bombs and torpedoes. It too, sank, flaming from stem to stern.

More Allied aerial units pursued the remnants of the Japanese fleet as it fled north toward the Bismarck Archipelago.

The Navy Department's information, based upon news received up until 6 o'clock last night, was neither so conclusive nor so enthusiastic. Nevertheless, an expectation of victory could be discerned in its carefully worded phrases.

No details of how most of the Japanese ships were sunk, whether by gunfire or bombs were contained in the official Navy report, but most authorities here conceived of the action as a furious melee of ships and planes, maneuvering constantly through the smoke of cannon and smoke screens of their own contriving, pressing home every advantage in a veritable battle to the death.

The start of the action Monday was announced by the Navy Thursday in a communique beginning "Very excellent news has been received" and reporting the sinking of an enemy light cruiser, two destroyers, four gunboats and one supply vessel, destruction of six planes and the damaging of a 9000-ton seaplane tender, a light cruiser, a cargo vessel and a transport.

Summary of Five Days of Heavy Blows

Last night's communique added to this list, for a cumulative total of blows dealt the enemy in five days of fighting, one aircraft carrier, a heavy cruiser and one transport or cargo vessel sunk, plus one aircraft carrier and one heavy cruiser damaged. The communique follows:

The toll, said the United Press, brought to 243 the number of Japanese warships and auxiliary craft sunk, probably sunk or damaged since Pearl Harbor, as against 37 American naval craft, excluding any lost in the Coral Sea struggle.

The naval communique issued here said:

"Southwest Pacific:

"1. A naval engagement between our forces and those of the Japanese has been in continuous progress in the general area southward of Bismarck Archipelago in the Coral Sea since Monday, and there is no indication yet of a cessation.

"Japanese losses are believed to be:

"Sunk—One aircraft carrier, one heavy cruiser, one light cruiser, two destroyers, four gunboats, two transports or cargo vessels.

"Damaged—One aircraft carrier, one heavy cruiser, one light cruiser, one seaplane tender, two transports or cargo vessels.

"2. Details of losses and damage to our forces are not fully known at present, but no credence should be given to claims that have been or may be put out by Tokyo.

"3. There is nothing to report from other areas."

From Allied Headquarters in Australia, the Associated Press reported that Japanese destroyers tried desperately but vainly to save the carriers, blasted into torn blazing hulks by planes which pressed home their attack in a hell of antiaircraft fire amid challenging hordes of Japanese Zero fighters.

"We might have been blasted out of our beds last night if this hadn't happened," commented one naval spokesman.

"But we got in there and did the job," he asserted.

A communique of the imperial Japanese command broadcast by the Tokyo radio claimed that a United States battleship of the California type and two United States aircraft carriers of the Saratoga and Yorktown types had been sunk and that an Australian cruiser of the Canberra type and a British battleship of the Warspite type had been heavily damaged.

There was no immediate comment here upon these claims but the British Admiralty in London at once announced flatly:

". . . There is no truth whatever in the Japanese suggestion that H. M. S. Warspite or any other British battleship had been sunk or damaged in the action which now is reported to be proceeding in the Coral Sea."

"Our own losses are not reported."

The great action, so far as could be judged, was spread over a great expanse south of the Solomon Islands and into the Coral Sea off Northeastern Australia.

Enemy's Objective Not Clear

Whether the enemy's main intention had been to cut the Allied supply line to Australia by knocking out the Allied fleet, or whether he was trying to mount an invasion of Port Moresby, New Guinea, the Allied outpost above the mainland, remained to be seen.

From London, there was reported general agreement among naval and military men that the great engagement—the biggest since Jutland—opened the battle for Australia itself.

It was assumed in unofficial quarters there that few if any major British fleet units were involved, thus indicating that the warships of the United States were carrying the main responsibility on the Allied side.

Paul Robeson Sings Here Tomorrow

Paul Robeson, famous Negro baritone, will be heard in a song recital tomorrow at 8:30 p. m. at the Riverside Stadium in a program for the benefit of the Highlander Folk School, Monteagle, Tenn., a unique educational institution founded 10 years ago to perpetuate the customs, arts and crafts of the South.

Mrs. Roosevelt heads a notable group of sponsors for the recital.

The Highlander school, located atop Cumberland Mountain, is attended by some 500 resident students, who take courses in creative writing, economics, history, and labor and social legislation as it concerns the development of the South. Prominent educators and authors volunteer their services and not only teach, but also help with the daily chores such as washing dishes and hoeing corn.

In addition to the resident students, day students from nearby sections attend classes in folk-singing, pottery making, wood-carving and other handicrafts native to the mountain regions of Tennessee.

Myles Horton, director of the school, and his wife are in Washington for the recital. Mrs. Horton, who collects the age-old folk-songs of the Tennessee mountains, took part in the first two performances of the Washington Post Folk Festival at Constitution Hall, scoring a hit with her rendition of "The Farmer's Curst Wife," originally an English ballad.

Throw Out Hitler or Else—Eden Warns

By the United Press

Edinburgh, May 8.—Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden tonight appealed to the German people to overthrow the Hitler regime and warned that the longer they support it "the heavier grows their own direct responsibility for the damage they are doing to the world."

"If any section of the German people really wants to see a return to a German state based on respect for law and for the rights of the individual, they must understand that no one will believe them until they have taken active steps to rid themselves of the present regime," he said in a war speech here.

Eden also enunciated the following other points:

1. Britain never again will neglect its armaments so that "we frighten our friends and delight our enemies."

2. The United Nations together must possess a sufficient postwar force to provide police to "prevent highway robbery and success of gangster methods."

3. R. A. F. attacks on Germany, from which Hitler in his recent speech was unable to promise protection and "could only threaten reprisals," will grow heavier as the months pass.

4. There can be no peace with Hitler "who still seems to be under the delusion that there are people in this country who would be prepared to make peace with him."

5. Madagascar was occupied because the United Nations could not take the risk of leaving it open to the Japanese, and, "in particular, we have been agreed with the policy of the United States Government to maintain contact with the Vichy government."

6. Hitler's recent speech before the Reichstag "sounded the death knell of his much-vaunted new order."

Cardinal Protests Nazi Deeds; Vatican Seriously Concerned

By the Associated Press

New York, May 8.—The New York Times says in a dispatch from Bern, Switzerland, that Michael Cardinal von Faulhaber, leader of the religious opposition in the Reich, has sent an 11-point indictment of the church situation in Germany to the Vatican.

A serious view of the situation is being taken by the Vatican secretariat of state, the Times says.

Cardinal von Faulhaber's 11 points as listed by the Times are:

1. A "veritable war against Christianity" is being waged in Germany contributing to "spiritual unrest which has caused manifestations against the regime" that are described by authorities as "machinations of foreign judeo-communistic elements."

2—The church continues to be treated with mistrust by the regime.

3—Moral "blackmail" is being applied to faithful Catholics with reminders that "less faithful attendance at church means keeping your job."

4—Intensified propaganda efforts are being developed among lower-paid workers to get them to disavow the church.

5—Party functionaries accuse the church of being a "super-national organization" and ask loyal Germans how they can reconcile their duties to the state with those to the church.

6—Violence is often employed in the "catechism" of a "doubtful" German who must "develop a conscience of his nationality" or "suffer the consequences."

7—Religious instruction is being prevented in primary and secondary schools.

8. Church publications and religious textbooks are banned under the pretext of lack of paper while pamphlets and publications attacking the church increase.

9. Young persons are forbidden to attend church festivals on the grounds that they last too long and deprive attendants of sleep, although party affairs last until after midnight with attendance obligatory.

10. Church organizations have been prevented from acquiring land on which to build religious structures even in places where no religious facilities exist.

11. Church property, such as bronze bells and even ritual vessels, have been sequestered without warning and without indemnification "for the good of the country and the prosecution of the war."

Soldier Wields Bayonet in Sleep, Now Tied in Bed

Fort Devens, Mass., May 8 (AP).—Private Roy L. Meyers is tied in bed every night now, and everybody's happy, including Meyers.

The decision to tie Meyers in his bunk—with his consent—was reached after he ended a series of sleep-walking episodes by executing a bayonet drill while his barrack buddies sat or lay speechless, fearful of being punctured.

Abraham Lincoln Outdone

Comptroller Alexander K. Hancock of Montgomery County, Md., yesterday received a check for two cents from the telephone company, a refund on a discontinued county telephone. It cost the company a three-cent stamp to forward it. "Now we can balance the budget," Hancock grinned at reporters. He recalled that Abraham Lincoln once walked a mile to repay a cent debt.

Why Am I Doing This?

Tonawanda, N. Y. (A.P.)—A woman walked into a school where blood was being donated, joined a line, was asked some questions and a doctor and nurse withdrew a pint of blood. Lifting herself from the cot, she asked: "Why am I doing this?" "For the soldiers and sailors," the nurse replied. "All I wanted was a sugar rationing book," the bewildered woman explained.

Community War Fund Wins Friends

250 Civic Business Leaders Indorse Plan to Pool All Funds-Seeking Units

More than 250 citizen and business leaders, embodying what Commissioner John Russell Young termed a "good cross-section representation" of the District, last night enthusiastically indorsed proposals that Washington organize a Community War Fund for 1943 in which all legitimate agencies basing their appeal for funds on the war emergency would join in one concentrated, united campaign.

Meeting in the auditorium of the United States Chamber of Commerce Building at the invitation of the Washington Board of Trade and Commissioner Young, the group almost unanimously instructed Young to name a "general committee to perfect a permanent organization for the establishment of the Community War Fund."

Deems Task "Considerable"

The Commissioner, who presided, said his task was "a considerable one" and not to be undertaken last night, but added that he would try to name the committee either today or early next week.

The idea back of the war funds or war chests is to pool all agencies which solicit funds from the public, because of needs occasioned by the war emergency, into one cash-gathering organization.

Last night's speakers included L. P. McLachlen, president of the Board of Trade, who pointed out the desirability of a concerted fund-gathering effort because of the numerous financial campaigns which have been conducted here; Herbert L. Willett, jr., director of the Community Chest, who stressed he was speaking as an individual and not in his official capacity.

Bishop Freeman Speaks

It remained for the Rt. Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, to portray, eloquently and dramatically, the appeal of the Community War Fund.

"For me," he declared, "the appeal of such a campaign springs from its economy, its wisdom, its statesmanship and its bigness."

He saw in it a chance to relieve the public of daily appeals for financial assistance; an opportunity to meet the vast needs of the community, "because when you make an appeal today, it's got to be a challenging one—it cannot be in small terms," and an opportunity to "merge, for Protestant, Jew and Catholic, for whites and Negroes" to experience the comradeship of a united effort and thus catch something of the vision which he said motivated their Nation when it burst over the bounds of isolationism.

Chevy Chase 'Death Spot' Gets Study

Guard Is Needed At Bus Terminal, Scene of Fatality, Authorities Agree

D. C. traffic deaths this year..43
Deaths this date last year....29
District total last year.....95

District traffic authorities last night agreed that "a guard of some kind" should be stationed to protect pedestrians at the Chevy Chase bus terminal, where 7-year-old Francis Immer was killed Wednesday.

Also last night, Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald announced that he will preside this morning at inquests into the death of the boy and into that of Mrs. Jennie N. Crossfield, 59, of 1151 New Jersey Avenue Northwest, who was fatally injured Thursday night.

Both Inspector Arthur E. Miller, police traffic supervisor, and William A. Van Duzer, director of traffic, said someone should be stationed at the terminal to direct pedestrians.

Traffic Lights Not Practical

Van Duzer advocated that either a policeman or a streetcar company inspector be on duty during the daylight hours and Inspector Miller said the transit firm should appoint a special policeman for the job.

Traffic lights at the intersection are not thought to be practical by the traffic director, who pointed out that had lights been in operation Wednesday, both the bus and the Immer boy would have been proceeding on the same green signal.

The bus, he said, was making a right turn and the boy ran into its side.

Miller was of the opinion that a guard at the terminal, watching the movements of both buses and pedestrians, would prevent careless walking and driving.

The traffic inspector had a conference yesterday with Policeman Brown of the Eighth Precinct, schoolboy patrol coordinator, and it was decided to station a boy patrol at the busy terminal.

Inquests Today

Francis, who lived at 5420 Connecticut Avenue Northwest, was killed instantly by a bus operated by Frank Crawford, 31, of Bethesda, Md. The latter will appear at today's inquest.

Identification of Mrs. Crossfield was established yesterday by her son, William E. Crossfield. She died at Sibley Hospital yesterday morning after being struck by an automobile at New York and New Jersey Avenues Northwest, Thursday night.

Police said the motorist who struck Mrs. Crossfield was Wyllis M. Brice, 60, of 1221 Gallatin Street Northwest. He also will appear at the inquest this morning.

Overcharge Costs Cabby A Suspension

ADELINE MAGGIO.

Harold G. Strickland, the cab driver who said he clocked a Congressman's goodnight, had his hacker's license suspended yesterday for ten days.

The Board of Revocation and Review, whose decision the Commissioners upheld, penalized Strickland for overcharging Representative John E. Sheridan (Democrat), Pennsylvania, on the night of February 19.

But as to whether it accepted Strickland's statement that it took Sheridan 14 minutes to say goodnight to Miss Adeline Maggio after taking her home from a movie, or Sheridan's claim that the farewell consumed less than two minutes the board did not commit itself.

According to either account, Sheridan was overcharged, the board found. Sheridan paid 20 cents to ride from Tenth Street and Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest to 122 D Street Southwest, where Miss Maggio disembarked, to 322 Second Street Northwest, Sheridan claimed this should have cost him 50 cents. Strickland claimed he should have been paid 80. The board found that under PUC regulations even if the Congressman had whiled away the 14 minutes, Strickland was due only 70 cents.

FPHA Forms New Housing District Here

As part of its decentralization program the Federal Public Housing Administration has established a Washington metropolitan district to handle the war housing program of this area.

Gilbert Rodier of the FHPA general staff will be in charge of the District, it was announced yesterday from the office of Commissioner Herbert Emmerich, and will work in cooperation with the regional offices for this section, which is headed by Oliver Winston.

Although regional offices are customary in the decentralization procedure of the new National Housing Agency, of which FPHA is a part, districts for special metropolitan areas will be created only when the program is large and concentrated. A similar district has been created for the Detroit area, for instance.

Approximately 45 million dollars worth of public housing is under way in the Washington area, financed by temporary shelter funds allocated to the Alley Dwelling Authority and by Defense Homes Corporation.

A 50-million-dollar program authorized under amendment to the Lanham Act is now before a Senate Appropriations Subcommittee. The House slashed the fund to $29,500,000, leaving in only money for the erection of dormitories for single workers. The Senate subcommittee, considering restoration of at least a portion of the authorization amount, has asked the NHA for information on the number of families coming to Washington in the influx of war workers.

As authorized, the program calls for the construction of 4000 family units. The Senate is expected to uphold this program if the percentage of workers with families is shown to "be large enough to deserve it."

Turnover 'Slight'

Chief Denies OCD Is Losing Its Personnel

On the heels of several resignations from the Office of Civilian Defense, Director James M. Landis yesterday issued a statement declaring the turnover in OCD personnel since the reorganization affected by his administration "has been very slight."

Resignations announced yesterday, some of them predicted for some time, included those of Corrington Gill, who was executive director prior to the Landis appointment, and his assistant, Burton Palmer. Gill, who was formerly assistant commissioner of the Works Progress Administration, has been ill for several weeks.

It was not known yesterday what job he would have next, but it was assumed he would be appointed to another New Deal advisory post at an early date. When the job of executive director of OCD was abolished, his title with the agency was special assistant.

Clyde Reeves, former State official of Kentucky, also resigned yesterday and announced he was returning home to become OPA administrator. He was a liaison officer in the civilian mobilization section headed by Jonathan Daniels.

Also leaving is Barry Bingham, of Louisville, Ky., who is going with the Office of Facts and Figures. Other resignations at the OCD are rumored, but Director Landis denied published reports that a wholesale exodus had begun "even among the clerks and typists, all of whom are trying to get transferred to another agency."

In his statement, Landis declared that during the reorganization many jobs were abolished and there was considerable changing around—"necessary if the OCD operations were to be carried on at a high degree of efficiency."

"Otherwise," he declared, "the turnover of personnel in our staff has been very slight."

Foxhall Homes To Be Open for Benefit Today

Nine of the most fashionable homes in the Foxhall Road section will open their doors to the public from 2 to 6 p. m. today to raise funds for the Home for Incurables.

At the home of Mr. and Mrs. Duncan Phillips, 2101 Foxhall Road Northwest, Washingtonians will view for the first time a collection of paintings from the Phillips Gallery, including nineteenth century French and modern American works.

Tea will be served on the terrace of the home of Mrs. Anne Archbold, 3905 Reservoir Road Northwest. Displayed there will be curios and trophies collected by Mrs. Archbold on her world travels.

Tickets will be on sale at all of the homes before 2 p. m. and also during the hours of the tour.

Other residences to be on display are those of Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, former United States Minister to Norway, at 1800 Foxhall Road; Mr. and Mrs. James Clement Dunn, 1714 Hoban Road; Mr. and Mrs. Howard Cushing, 2510 Foxhall Road; Mr. and Mrs. Walter F. Chappell, 4626 Garfield Street; Mrs. Edward T. Stotesbury, 2300 Foxhall Road; Mr. and Mrs. Morris Cafritz, 2301 Foxhall Road, and Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Clapper, 3125 Chain Bridge Road.

Socially prominent Washington women will be on hand at the open houses to receive visitors, according to Mrs. Edward R. Finkenstaedt, 3028 N Street Northwest, president of the board of the home.

This year the tour takes the place of the annual benefit tea for the Home for Incurables, previously held at Dumbarton Oaks, former home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss.

Mother's Day Rites in Capital Area Will Have Military Touch

Mother's Day services here in Washington and vicinity will have a decidedly military touch, according to announcements made last night of programs being arranged for tomorrow.

Of major interest in the District is the annual Mother's Day service which the American War Mothers will hold Sunday at 1 p. m. in the amphitheater at Arlington Cemetery. The program, in memory of the country's war dead, will include an address by Senator Sheridan Downey (Democrat) of California, which will be broadcast by the blue network of the National Broadcasting Co. He will be introduced by Mrs. Elizabeth Martin, national president of the American War Mothers.

Army Band Will Play

Other features will include music by the Army Band, songs by Gene Archer, baritone, and the placing of wreaths on the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier by District and national patriotic societies. Invitations have been extended to a host of notables, from President and Mrs. Roosevelt on down.

Four mothers with sons in the armed services will receive a distinctive present Sunday at 2 p. m. when through the C. B. S. program, "The Spirit of '42," they will be given an opportunity to talk with their boys overseas.

The program, with Kate Smith as soloist, and with the music of the United States Navy Band, is to originate at the Sylvan Theater, on the Monument Grounds, and will be open to the public.

Four Services Represented

The arrangements have been made so that mothers with sons in four services—the Army, the Navy, the Marines and the Coast Guard—will be able to speak to their sons in Honolulu, Panama and London.

Over at Fort Belvoir, Va., the Mother's Day program will include sermons by post chaplains appropriate to the day and a salute to a "mothers' battalion" which, the post publication announces, will be composed of the first commanding officers "the enlisted men ever knew." The visiting mothers will be greeted by Mrs. Edythe Dewey, the post's senior hostess, and are expected to participate in the day's services with their soldier sons.

A Washington mother, Mrs. Naomi Harris, 1228 Sixth Street Northwest, will participate in similar services at Fort Benning, Ga., where her son, Pvt. Woodrow Harris, is stationed. Mrs. Harris' name was one of 20 selected by lot from a group of the boys' mothers and invited to attend the services with all expenses paid.

Today, at 3 p. m., the Washington Assembly of C. I. O. auxiliaries will hold a reception for mothers of service men at 1407 L Street Northwest.

Guests of honor will be the mothers of C. I. O. unionists now in the armed services, and additional guests will be a group of Fort Belvoir soldiers. Admission to the reception will be in the form of gift packages for the soldiers.

Trucking Concern Asks $15,000 Rent For Unused Autos

Trial of a $15,000 suit for rental charges on 20 trucks that remained unused during the construction of the Fort Belvoir, Va., cantonment will begin Monday in District Court, with Government counsel appearing for the defendant as the construction job was on a "cost-plus-fixed-fee" basis.

The defendant is the Charles H. Tompkins Co., builders of the cantonment. The plaintiff is the Big League Trucking Co. of Hoboken, N. J., which is also seeking $6,000 in the same suit for alleged damage to its trucks.

Assistant United States Attorney Bernard J. Long, who will handle the case, contends for the defense that the Hoboken company refused to remove its trucks after they were no longer needed. The Tompkins company subsequently sent the trucks to Hoboken on a railroad flat car and some repairs were made by order of the War Department.

Van Duzer Warns Of Increased Peril To Pedestrians

Greater dangers than ever before face Washington pedestrians next week, Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer warned yesterday.

With drastic restrictions on gasoline consumption scheduled to become effective May 15, more and more persons will take to walking to and from their homes and between downtown office buildings, Van Duzer explained.

The traffic chief reminded that 43 persons already have been killed in traffic this year as compared to only 29 at this time last year.

To strangers and "natives" alike, Van Duzer urged extra caution in crossing streets. He pointed out that the city's pedestrian regulations require use of crosswalks and observance of signal lights. Operators of vehicles also were reminded of their responsibilities. Speed laws must be obeyed, he said, and driving habits must be revised.

Body of Canoeist Recovered From River

The body of Edmond Wiblitzhouser, 32, of 349 Kentucky Avenue Southeast, was recovered from the Potomac River near the Three Sisters Islands yesterday and was taken to the District Morgue.

A civilian employe of the quartermaster corps at Fort Meyer, Va., Wiblitzhouser was drowned Monday night when a canoe he was paddling with Pvt. William Rowe, a soldier from Fort Myer, capsized about a mile above Key Bridge.

John P. Smith of 1657 Newton Street Northwest, a friend of Wiblitzhouser, identified the body.

Sugar Registry Delinquents Now Face 3-Week Wait

Washingtonians who failed to apply for sugar ration books during the May 4 to 7 registration are "out of luck" until enrollment centers are reopened in two or three weeks, Leonard P. Steuart, chairman of the Sugar Ration Board, stated yesterday.

Meanwhile six auxiliary boards have been set up to answer questions and supply information about ration books, and further registration will take place at these centers as soon as the four-day total of 731,969 applicants is broken down and classified according to residence.

Exactly 23,597 District residents were turned down when they applied for ration books during the four-day period. Rationing officials said these had admitted having on hand more than the limit of 6 pounds.

The locations of the six auxiliary boards are: No. 1 at the old Force School, No. 2 at the Oyster School, No. 3 at the Mount Pleasant Branch Library, No. 4 at the Hayes School, No. 5 at Thomas Jefferson Junior High School, and No. 6 at the Ketcham School.

Lawson J. Cantrell, District rationing supervisor, said that the registration could be used as an excellent indication of Washington's current population figures. With 731,969 applying for ration books, the District's wartime population trend can be seen from a comparison with the 1940 census total of 663,091.

Many sugar applicants found from one to four stamps torn out of their books. This was done in cases where families already had some of the precious crystals stored in the closet. Those who admitted they already had between five and six pounds lost the first four of their twenty-eight stamps, thus preventing purchase of sugar until June 28 when Stamp No. 5 becomes effective.

Alabaman Is Here To Seek Free Milk for Children

W. D. Dobbins, Alabama's famous milk crusader, came to Washington yesterday to press for Congressional approval of his plan to provide every child in the United States with a free quart of milk daily.

"I'm going to see this thing through if it costs my life," said the Alabaman, who argues that the Federal Government, by spending 600 million dollars a year on free milk for every boy and girl under 14, can save a like amount on farm relief.

He admitted he is dismayed because the bill introduced last year by Representative Pete Jarman (Democrat) of Alabama, embracing his plan, isn't getting anywhere.

A resident of Marion, Ala., Dobbins has been campaigning for free milk for all children—"Rockefeller's children would get it as well as the poorest," he says—since 1936.

"My plan," he says, "would put roses in the cheeks of children, make pastures green and farmers prosperous."

Victory Sidelights

Steuart Named to Administer Gas Rationing Which Will Go Into Effect on May 15 Here

Leonard P. Steuart, chairman of the Sugar Rationing Committee was selected yesterday by the Commissioners to administer District gasoline rationing, which goes into effect May 15, Steuart also was named to the Traffic Advisory Council.

The Commissioners announced that the District hopes to use the white cottage in Post Square formerly occupied by the Defense Housing Registry as permanent quarters for the rationing organization.

Registration for gasoline users will be conducted Tuesday through Thursday, and will be conducted in the same manner as this week's sugar registration. Lawson J. Cantrell will be in charge.

Mrs. Harry S. Bernton said last night the Central Volunteer Bureau has offered to furnish the registrars for the three days. Ten blondes will go to the Capitol on Tuesday to sign up members of Congress.

Police Officer Allowed To Accept War Bond

Sergt. John F. Ryan of the Police Department was granted permission last night to accept a $50 War Bond presented to him by members of the Washington Post unit of the auxiliary police.

The bond was given Ryan by Post employes to whom he gave training in police activities. However before he could accept this expression of appreciation it was necessary to have the approval of the Chief of Police and of the Commissioners.

Rescue Squads Will Stage Review Tomorrow

More than 300 members of the civilian defense rescue squads will stage a mobilization and review tomorrow at 2:30 p. m. on the old Tuberculosis Hospital grounds, Thirteenth and Upshur Streets Northwest.

Civilian Defense Executive Lemuel Bolles, Defense Co-ordinator John Russell Young and other officials of the protective services will observe the drill, which will be conducted just as if an actual alert were in progress.

Twenty-eight squads of men, 62 women and 50 motorcycle messengers will participate. Two ambulances and several station wagons will be used in the exercises, Daniel C. Long, deputy chief of the rescue service, announced last night.

Although there are only 28 squads organized to date, the highest number of a squad is the Twenty-ninth, all of whose members were in the Twenty-ninth Division in the first World War.

New Home Nursing Class to Be Opened

Registrations are open for a newly organized class in Red Cross Home Nursing at the Maryland Court Apartments, Maryland Avenue and Ninth Street Northeast Tuesday and Thursday afternoons from 1 until 3 p. m. Registration may be made through Mrs. Buck at the Maryland Court Apartments.

Service Men's Lounge Opens Tomorrow

The President's reception room at Union Station, scene of many greetings extended to visiting foreign officialdom, will be opened as the "President's Lounge for Service Men" tomorrow at 5 p. m. with a host of notables in attendance.

Among the distinguished guests will be Federal Security Administrator Paul V. McNutt, Walter B. Clarkson, chairman of the joint committee for service to troops in transit; Sidney F. Taliaferro, chairman of the U. S. O. Council here; Randall J. LaBoeuf, president of the National Travelers Aid Association; Chester I. Barnard, president of the U. S. O., and Roy B. White, president of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Co., all of whom will speak.

Invitations also have been extended to Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, wife of the Vice President; Cabinet members, representatives of the War and Navy Departments and members of Congress.

To be operated 24 hours a day for service men, the lounge will be open tomorrow from 5:30 to 7:30 p. m. for public inspection.

Symphony Board To Weigh Funds Crisis Monday

To consider the crisis confronting the National Symphony Orchestra through lack of response to its sustaining fund campaign, a meeting of the orchestra's board of directors has been called for Monday.

The drive for the amount necessary to maintain the National Symphony's 1942-43 program of Water Gate, "Pop," Constitution Hall and students' concerts is still $30,000 short of its $114,000 goal, and has been extended to next Wednesday.

"We have not been able to discover any solution to our problem save the immediate response of those able to contribute small or moderate amounts," said Corcoran Thom, orchestra association president. "Contributors of large amounts have been exhausted. If the orchestra is to continue it must have the immediate support of those who have not yet contributed."

Contributions should be sent to the orchestra's campaign headquarters, 1111 Woodward Building.

Country Fair Here

An atmosphere of a typical county fair will be carried out at the Illinois State Society's dance tonight at Almas Temple, 1315 K Street Northwest. There will be a display of Illinois products and sale of homemade candy, ice cream and pink lemonade. Proceeds will go to the American Red Cross.

Catholic U. Makes 41 Grants for Graduates Studies

Forty-one awards of fellowships, scholarships and assistantships at Catholic University for the 1942-43 academic year were announced yesterday by the Most Rev. Joseph Corrigan, rector of the university.

The awards, valued at $25,000, represent one of the largest grants for graduate studies ever made by a Catholic institution of higher learning. The list includes 20 students who are reappointed to the grants they received last year.

Of the 20 fellowships, 18 were endowed by the Knights of Columbus, and have been given yearly since 1914. These grants are for graduate work in any of the schools of the university, and are valued at $1000 each. The remaining two, valued at $500 each, are the Winthrop Fellowship in biochemistry. The fifteen scholarships range in value from $200 to $300.

The Catholic University bestowed four chemistry assistantships, valued at $800 each; one biology assistantship and one mathematics assistantship of the same value.

Leo Wall, 4707 North Capitol Street, was awarded an assistantship in chemistry.

CHENO PLAN

The Five Factor Reducing Method

LOSE FAT on three square meals a day without dangerous drugs or starvation. Thousands of men and women have reported a loss of weight, improvement in skin and muscular tone. The CHENO REDUCING PLAN was created by a famous HOLLYWOOD nutritionist for overweight MEN and WOMEN all over the United States. CHENO tablets are a part of the Cheno Plan . . . a mineral and vegetable tablet that supplies additional important minerals in which many diets are lacking . . . CALCIUM, PHOSPHOROUS, IRON and IODINE. Due to the high mineral content CHENO TABLETS lessen the desire for starchy foods. 12 Cheno Tablets per day supply the average adult with over 70 per cent of the daily CALCIUM requirement, 50 per cent of the PHOSPHORUS requirement, the full daily requirement of IRON and many times the daily requirement of IODINE. Many diets are lacking in these minerals. These elements are essential to health. Your energy increases, you feel better and pounds come off. Losses from 7 to 11 pounds in one month frequently reported. In certain types of overweight, the addition of Phytolacca Berry Juice and Cheno Herb Tea is suggested.

42,822 'See' Dodgers Win Navy Relief Game, 7-6

Giants Bow As Melton Is Routed

Camilli's Home Run In Seventh Proves Clincher; Four-Run Rally Helps Flock

By Judson Bailey
Associated Press Sports Writer

Brooklyn, May 8.—One of the most extraordinary games in major league history, played at twilight before a crowd that contributed to a record of 42,822 paid admissions and a gate of $59,859.25 for the Navy Relief Society, brought the Brooklyn Dodgers a 7-to-6 victory over the New York Giants today.

It was an occasion without parallel and from start to finish the spectacle was saturated with more oddities, more thrills and more laughs than could ever have been collected anywhere outside Brooklyn.

To begin with it was not legally a game belonging to the Brooklyn Baseball Club because the Dodgers signed a contract giving the entire direction to the Navy Relief Society in order to escape paying taxes on the proceeds which were to be turned over to the charity.

Less Than 36,000 Present

In the second place, the paid admissions, which exceeded the all-time Ebbets Field record of 41,109 set May 30, 1934, did not fill the stands even though the park holds only about 36,000.

Many persons bought tickets who did not use them and in addition players, umpires, peanut vendors, policemen, ushers and others who occupied no seats, nevertheless paid their way into the park. No one, not even the sailors, legionnaires and musicians, who paraded in elaborate pregame ceremonies, entered the gates without tickets.

Whitlow Wyatt, the outstanding pitcher of the National League a year ago, lasted past the first inning for the first time in three games and went on to attain his first victory of the season, although he couldn't finish.

Four Straight Singles—No Scores

In the third inning, the Dodgers hit four successive singles without scoring because Wyatt was trapped going from first to third. But with the bases loaded Johnny Rizzo hit a ringing double to right for two runs and the National League champs, supposedly weak against left handers, went on to knock Cliff Melton out of the box and score four runs in this frame.

And in the fourth inning, the Dodgers stormed to two more runs, one of them coming home when Manager Mel Ott of the Giants made a tremendous throw from right field and the ball hit Catcher Hank Danning on the head and bounced against the screen behind the plate. Third Baseman Dick Bartell, trying to intercept Ott's throw, ran in front of Danning just in time to screen the ball and was charged with an error.

Bartell also had let a hard-hit grounder by Joe Medwick go squarely between his legs in the third inning to let two runs across.

Camilli Clouts Clincher

The Dodgers' final and winning run came in the seventh on a great arching homer smashed over the right field scoreboard by Dolph Camilli. It was his seventh of the season and came off Bill McGee, who replaced Melton in the third.

Wyatt, who made two of Brooklyn's 13 hits, gave six safeties in 6 1-3 innings, fanned five men, and was effective until the chill of evening got into his old bones.

In the fifth inning, he loaded the bases with a single and two walks and then forced across a run by hitting Willard Marshall with a pitch. Then he retired five batters in order until he skidded again in the seventh and walked two in succession. Lefty Bill Chipman from Atlanta came to the mound for his major league debut, walked John Mize to load the bases and then served a single to Marshall for two more runs.

Hugh Casey got the Giants out, but in the eighth Bill Herman made two errors on one ball to set up a last tally for New York.

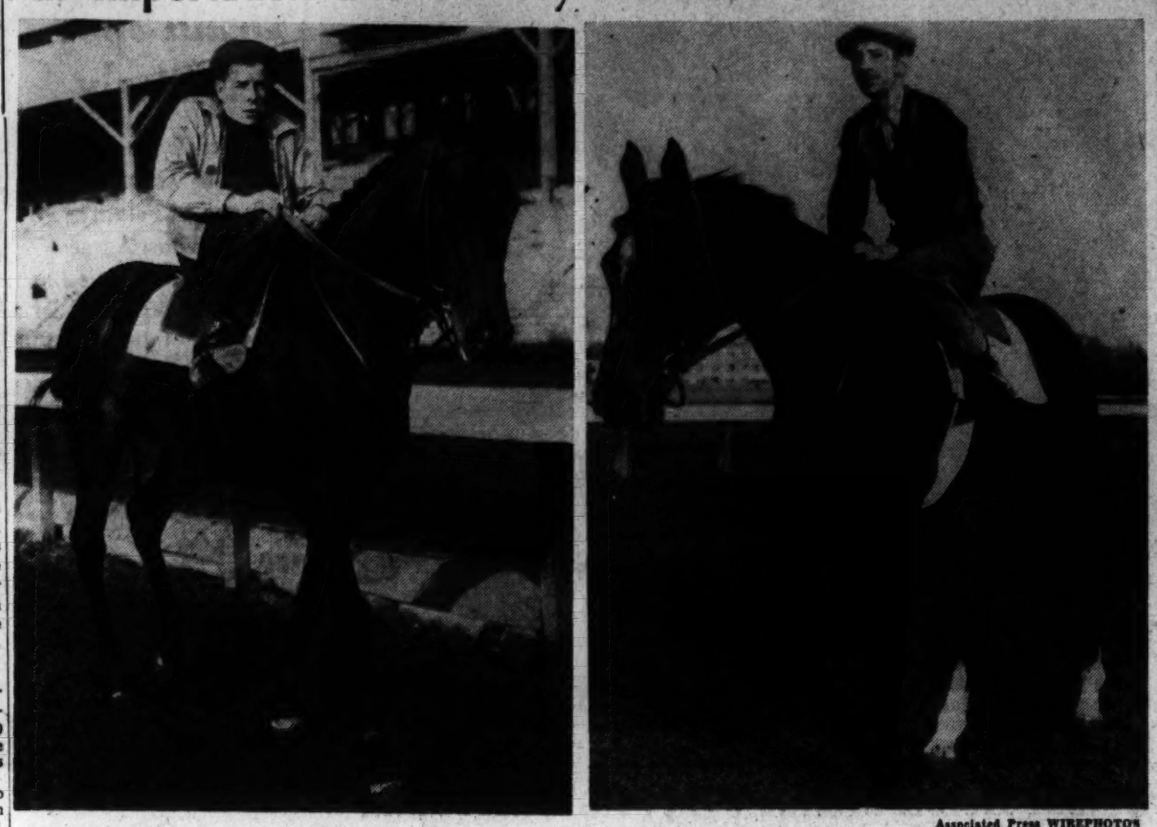
An Importation and a Maryland-Bred in Preakness Field



Associated Press WIREPHOTOS

Domingo (left), English-bred, imported dark horse of the Preakness field, is shown after a workout yesterday in preparation for the $60,000 race today. Colchis (right), a Maryland-bred, who holds two victories over Alsab this year, is considered a strong contender for the Pimlico classic. Both horses missed the Derby last week. A field of 10 is expected to face the starter at 5 p. m. today

Each Entry Has Strong Following

By Bob Considine

Baltimore, May 8.—The "bettingest" Preakness in years will be run on Pimlico's ancient oval tomorrow afternoon with ten slick thoroughbreds trying for the major chunks of an $80,000 purse.

The Greentree Stable's double knockout drops, Shut Out and Devil Diver, will prance to the start of the mile and three-sixteenths classic the favorite. But there promises to be tremendous support for nearly every other colt or gelding in the gallop—notably the game little Alsab, the brisk-running Valdina Orphan, and the doughty gelding Colchis, which whipped Alsab twice in five days, won the Chesapeake and has been resting since the Wood Memorial.

Warren Wright's Sun Again, which wasn't quite ready for last week's Kentucky Derby, may be dropped out at the last moment. But Trainer Ben Jones wouldn't say yes or no tonight. Suffice it to say that if Sun Again goes tomorrow, he will have considerable support. On the other hand the Texas delegation promises to stick with Ben Whitaker's Requested, with whom they were stuck last week when the Wood winner ran fourteenth in the Derby. Louis B. Mayer's imported Domingo, foaled in England, will appeal to enough long-shot players to bring him down out of the long-shot class.

Loom as Even Money

The Greentree pair, Shut Out and Devil Diver, may be backed down to even money by the expected crowd of 40,000. The latter, who will be ridden by Eddie Arcaro, is being counted upon by many here tonight to redeem his Kentucky Derby showing. The luck of the draw today gave Devil Diver the No. 1 post position. Shut Out, the liver-colored stepson of the Greentree Barn, will break from the sixth stall on the starting gate. The orphaned son of Equipoise-Goose Egg, whose victory in the Derby last week startled those who believed that Devil Diver was much the better of the two, will attempt to become the eighth thoroughbred ever to win both Derby and Preakness.

Apache, William Woodward's erstwhile Eastern favorite, will run in blinkers for the first time. He went to the Derby post as one of the better-regarded colts, but never challenged the leaders. Jimmy Stout worked Apache a mile in 1:39 2-5 on Wednesday, with blinkers, which persuaded the stable to run the almost black colt that way tomorrow.

Sterling Clark's Colchis, Maryland bred, drew the extreme outside post position but Georgie Woolf, who rode the gelding to victory in the Chesapeake, said today that that was okay with him. "It'll give us racing room," the little man asserted. Arcaro, in answer to questions concerning the possibility of his shifting to Shut Out, said that he never had considered doing so. Wayne Wright again will be up on Shut Out. bb

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Pimlico, Md., May 8.—Tomorrow afternoon when the Preakness gate is sprung, the heavy dough will be riding on the Greentree entry of Devil Diver and Shut Out, but the sentimental favorite will be a popular little bay colt from an unpopular barn. A victory for Alsab would please the two-buck bettors.

POVICH

Alsab will be running for the folks who don't like to see man or beast pushed around, and we don't mean the rough trip he had in the Kentucky Derby when he was bumped at the start and later forced to go wide. The Sabath colt apparently hasn't been getting a fair shake since he mopped up the 2-year-old division last year and was earning wonder-horse rating.

His stable bosses haven't let Alsab see anything except a box stall or a race track since he started his racing career more than a year ago. Alsab hasn't even been on the end of a length of rope in a pasture. While other stables were turning out their good horses for off-season grazing, Alsab was sent back to work for winter racing despite his obvious failure to fill out a normal development. The colt's bosses were hot after the dough. Eight times they have started Alsab as a 3-year-old, and eight times he has been licked. The task of winning has been too much for even as willing a colt as Alsab.

But the public liked the way he finished second in the Derby after being knocked off stride, and they saw with admiration the sensational move the colt made against older horses in the Widener Handicap when he struck his nose in front for a few brief seconds only to finish fifth. At Churchill Downs when he went to the post at 5 to 1, despite his seven straight defeats, it was testimony of the public's faith in the little gamester.

Favorite Rarely Public Choice

Walter Haight, The Post's racing man and our favorite track authority, tells us that the entry which goes to the post as the favorite tomorrow, won't actually be the public choice. "That's a misnomer, and has been for many years," recites Haight. "The favorite is rarely the public choice. The favorite is the horse on which the big bettors are plunging the big dough—the so-called smart money. The real public choice is apt to be a 5 or 6-to-1 shot who is being backed by the two-buck bettors. A horse like Alsab could go to the post tomorrow as third or fourth choice and still be the public's favorite."

Washington will have a peculiar interest in one of Alsab's challengers, however. R. Sterling Clark's Colchis will be out to add luster to the name of Happy Argo as a sire. Happy Argo raced for the late Admiral Grayson, the White House physician, and is fast soaring in the list of great sires. His good filly Augury is probably the fastest of her sex at seven furlongs, as she attested at Jamaica the other day, and Happy Argo seems to have transmitted both speed and staying power to Colchis.

Colchis is the colt that refused to yield to Alsab at the height of that horse's 2-year-old career last fall, running the Sabath colt to a dead heat in Maryland. In two later tests at Havre de Grace this season, Colchis again headed Alsab, but he lost his chance to carry his speed into the Derby because Mr. Clark had neglected to name him for the race. Clark has paid the $1500 late-starting fee for the Preakness, however, in what seems to be an entirely logical gamble that his colt can take it all. His would be a popular victory for Maryland fans because Colchis is Maryland-foaled, although he came to racing from the Grayson farm in Virginia.

Preakness Day Carries Meeting

The chances are that Preakness fans won't see the fastest mile and three-sixteenths of the Pimlico meeting. In fact, one bookmaker has offered 5 to 1, that the race won't be run as fast as this week's Dixie Handicap at the same distance. Whirlaway turned the distance in 1:57 in that race in beating out Attention, and nothing in the Preakness field seems capable of that time.

Pimlico will make a handsome profit on Preakness Day, but a profit that can scarcely be begrudged the track. The official Pimlico program carries an enlightening editorial on the finances of the track, and points out that the Preakness Day profits alone enable the track to escape a deficit for the year.

"It costs Pimlico $44,000 per racing day to operate the track," says the editorial "and Preakness Day has been the backbone of Pimlico business. On Monday's business, for example, Pimlico made a profit of $1,217.61, but on the very next day our estimate shows that it cost the track, after allowing for taxes, $6,905.32 to operate on that day." The stories of fabulous racetrack profits appear to be fabulous in themselves.

Albany Race Of Outboards Is Canceled

By the Associated Press

New York, May 8.—The war took its toll of the Albany-New York outboard classic today and threatened to further curtail motor boat and midget automobile racing throughout the 17 States affected by gasoline rationing.

Harry Birdsall, sr., commodore of the Middle Atlantic Outboard Association, announced cancellation of the 136-mile dash down the Hudson River, scheduled for May 17, after the Price Administration ruled that no gasoline could be sold for use in a vehicle or boat operated in an exhibition or race for public entertainment or prizes. Before Birdsall's announcement, the American Inboard Association had announced its withdrawal from the race.

Although an Office of Price Administration spokesman in Washington said there was no legal obstacle to prevent the drivers from purchasing gasoline prior to the May 15 rationing dead-line, officials of the Middle Atlantic Association said they had no desire to evade the spirit of the ruling.

Another Test Canceled

The intercollegiate outboard championships, scheduled for Long Beach, Long Island, on Decoration Day, also will be canceled, according to Charles F. Chapman, former secretary of the race committee of the American Power Boat Association. Several other minor events likewise will be affected but action on regattas scheduled after July 1 is not expected to be taken until it is known if there will be a change in the Government's ruling on rationing of fuel.

There is a possibility that some of these regattas will be held later in the year if the ban on gasoline is lifted.

The National Sweepstakes Regatta at Red Bank, N. J., was canceled early this year and no plans have been made for the Gold Cup.

Will a $10 Fine Protect League Umps From Spit?

By the Associated Press

Johnson City, Tenn., May 8.—Ross Edgemon, president of the Appalachian Baseball League, wasn't foolin' when he promulgated a rule against players expectorating on his umpire.

The east Tennessean today amplified his ruling because some sports writers interpreted his ban to mean that it would be okay to splatter arbiters any place but in the face.

"No ball player in the Appalachian League shall be allowed to spit, splatter, squash, squirt, squeeze or direct any spit, saliva, juice or any wet acid of any type on any umpire's clothing or equipment," decreed Edgemon.

"Should such a ball player take this liberty, it will be an automatic $10 fine. I trust that this shall clear up the much publicized question with reference to spitting on an umpire."

Argentine Committee Approves Canceling Pan-American Games

By the Associated Press

Buenos Aires, May 8.—The Pan-American games, the Western Hemisphere's successor to the Olympic games, needed only the approval of the central committee today before joining the list of international sporting events canceled because of the war.

The Argentine Olympic Committee today approved postponement of the games, scheduled to start here November 21, until 1943 and passed its action on to the central committee for final action. The central committee is headed by Avery Brundage of Chicago, president of the United States of America Sports Federation.

The Argentine committee's action was based on the recommendation of 23 athletic federations of North, Central and South American countries, which asked for a postponement after the United States had withdrawn from the games on April 18.

Juan Carlos Palacios, chairman of the Argentine committee, said previously that "there is no thought of abandoning the games." He said Argentina considered the postponement merely on a one-year basis and that if it became necessary to postpone the games again in 1943 it could be done on a year-to-year basis. The country's' organizing committee will be kept intact.

The Pan-American games came into being when the war forced the cancellation of the 1940 Olympic games at Helsinki. Helsinki had taken over the Olympics after Tokyo had turned the games back to the International Olympic Committee.

Georgetown Golfers Bow To Penn State

By the Associated Press

Princeton, N. J., May 8.—Penn State's golfers took undisputed possession of first place in the Middle Atlantic Division of the Eastern Intercollegiate Golf Association with a 6-3 victory over Georgetown on the Springdale course here today as Cornell dropped Princeton by the same score.

Dick Stephens, playing at Number 3 for the Nittany Lions, took medal honors with a 1 under par 71 in the Penn State-Georgetown encounter. Captain Bud Sharkey of Georgetown outstroked Captain Bob Wallace, 3 and 2, in the feature twosome match.

Bill Hollijan of Georgetown downed Chuck Seebold, 3 and 2, in the Number 2 twosome and paired with Sharkey for a 1-up victory over Wallace and Seebold in the top best-ball foursome. Penn State capitalized upon superior strength in the lower ranks, however, winning all of the remaining matches.

The loss dropped the Hoyas into a fourth place tie with Penn, which defeated Pittsburgh, 6-3. Georgetown will meet Pitt and Cornell tomorrow.

Bud Sharkey (Georgetown) defeated Bob Wallace, 3 and 2; Bill Hollijan (Georgetown) defeated Chuck Zebold, 3 and 2; Dick Stephens (Penn State) defeated Jack Donahue, 3 and 1; Bill Swan (Penn State) defeated Bill Rohrer, 3 and 2; Dent Holden (Penn State) defeated Dick Myers, 2 and 1; Jim Kramer (Penn State) defeated Bob Higgins, 3 and 1. Sharkey and Hollijan defeated Wallace and Seebold, 1 up; Swan and Stephens defeated Donahue and Rohrer, 1 up; Holden and Kramer defeated Myers and Higgins, 6 and 5.

Two Jockeys Repeat In Beulah Dead Heats

Columbus, Ohio, May 8 (AP).—Two jockeys rode in two dead heats at Beulah Park today.

Willie Farrell of Cincinnati and Charlie Hanauer of Springfield, Ill., aboard Askaris and Dick Brady, respectively, tied for first in the seventh race. In the next event, with Farrell up on Flyball and Hanauer piloting Agnes S., the pair finished in a deadlock for third.

Steal of Home Gives Generals Win Over Terps

The Old Liners lost a 2-1 pitcher's duel to Washington and Lee's Generals at College Park yesterday as Pitcher Jay Cook allowed only three Terp hits.

The Generals got their winning margin off Hartley Crist, who allowed four hits and two runs in four innings. Lloyd Roberts then took over mound duties and limited the visitors to one hit.

Washington and Lee scored its runs in the third inning, starting with a single by Robert Cavanna. He advanced to second on George Eshelman's single and scored on Paul Cavalier's single to center. Eshelman stole home for the winning run.

Who Cares What And How Durocher Signs at Brooklyn

By the Associated Press

Brooklyn, May 8.—Leo Durocher, the nonplaying "player manager" of the Brooklyn Dodgers, did not sign a player's contract this spring it was learned today.

His retirement from active service after 14 years as an infielder in both the major leagues was kept secret apparently because the Brooklyn Club did not know whether it would be permanent.

If Durocher had signed as a player and then retired when the major league squads are reduced to 25 players May 15, he could not have returned to the active list later during the season. By not signing a player's contract originally, however, he will be able to return to the active list at any time his services are needed.

He still is on Brooklyn's reserve list, but all other National League clubs have waived on him and the club is expected to give him an unconditional release as a player within a few days.

Nats to Start Hudson Against Yanks Today

Question Mark of Washington Staff Will Open New York Series; Newsom Wants Action

The mystery of Sid Hudson's failure to win ball games will be deepened or clarified today when he goes to the mound in Yankee Stadium where the Nats open a three-game series with the Yanks.

Hudson has been no mystery to the league's hitters, but he has been mystifying Manager Bucky Harris with his inability to win. He has started four games thus far, and hasn't turned in even one creditable job, despite a record that shows one victory and two defeats.

In his last two starts Hudson had seemingly untracked himself and was en route to impressive victories when he suddenly lost his control and effectiveness and was slugged out of the box.

"For five innings against the Browns the other day Sid showed me more stuff on the ball than I had ever seen him throw," said Harris, "and I thought he was a sure-shot to finish nicely. Then he lost his control and I had to get him out of there."

Maybe He Needs Hot Weather

Hudson's slow start this season is in complete harmony, however, with his performances of other years. In 1940, his first season in the majors, he lost seven of his first nine starts and ended up winning 17 games. Last year he was pounded heavily until June.

"Maybe," said Harris as he entrained for New York with the Nats last night, "the fellow is just a bad pitcher in the spring. There's no reason why he should be, because each year in Florida he always has done well. His case has me baffled."

Buck Newsom has volunteered to pitch one of the games of the double-header with the Yanks on Sunday despite only three days' rest since his one-hit performance against the Yankees. "I think I'll let him pitch," said Harris. "Work never seems to hurt Newsom."

Washington's pitching situation has brightened with the jobs turned in by Newsom and Early Wynn in their last starts. Wynn has now won two in a row, including a five-hit 1-to-0 shutout against the White Sox.

"If we had Dutch Leonard with us I'd say our pitching would be all right from here in," said Harris. "Every time I think of Leonard being out for six weeks with that broken leg I feel slightly ill. Maybe Jack Wilson will come along to take up the slack."

Wilson, bothered by a lame ankle, has not been in action for ten days, and Harris plans to test him in a relief role before giving the big right-hander a starting job.

Pirates Beat Cubs, 6 to 4; Sewell Hurls

By International News Service

Chicago, May 8.—The Chicago Cubs today suffered their seventh defeat in their last nine starts when they dropped a 6 to 4 decision to the Pittsburgh Pirates.

The Pirates put across their two game-winning runs in the seventh inning on Barrett's double and singles by Wasdell and DiMaggio, coupled with Fletcher's sacrifice. DiMaggio hit his third homer of the season in the fourth inning.

It was Truett Sewell's fourth win of the season against one defeat.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

Baltimore, May 8.—You get an editorial with your race program at Pimlico. No extra charge. It's just one of the added attractions of this charming old horse-gambling joint, where the richest Preakness of them all will be run tomorrow.

CONSIDINE

The editorials are written by Dave Woods, a fine young horse publicist. Woods will naturally be pardoned for not coming out in the program and cursing the evils of gambling, or crusading against the folly of four-horse parleys. That must be left to less interesting publications than ever-absorbing directory of names, numbers and colors. What Woods has to say often is interesting and always is sound. If Alsab runs out of the money tomorrow, we'll at least be uplifted on our walk back to New York by the program editorial. It will be comforting to know that we contributed even slightly to the noble and selfless enterprise known as thoroughbred racing, that we helped the needy.

Several of Dave's editorials have just about persuaded me to snub the collection plate at church Sunday and give my pittance to Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, Matt Daiger and other officers of the Pimlico track. Seriously, Woods has sternly broken down the put-and-take of operating a plant like Pimlico and some of the figures may be slightly astonishing to you.

It costs $44,000 a day, roughly, to operate Pimlico. On that figure, the opening day's handle of $424,316 resulted in a profit of $1,217.61, after all was paid. The following day, however, Pimlico's machines chawed $386,841, which meant $33,145.18 for the operators. Gate receipts were $6,949.50 and miscellaneous income amounted to $3,000. The total gross income to Pimlico that second day, therefore, was $43,094.68. Ostensibly that was a loss of $905.32, but since the $44,000 per day does not take into account the 15 per cent State profits tax, State income taxes and Federal taxes—amounting to about $6000 a day—the nest egg of $1,217.61 which was realized on opening day had now become, 24 hours later, a deficit of $5,687.71, Alack!

Woods brings out that for all the money that Pimlico handles, it must depend on one day's business—Preakness Day—to wipe out such days as the Tuesday in question. We doubt very much if this tale of corporate woe will bring many scalding tears to the jowls of the horseplayers, hardened rascals that they are, but the figures are interesting to a bloke like myself whose mind blurs easily after more than two ciphers have been added to even a modest digit.

In another editorial, Dave applies himself intelligently to the task of dismantling the general fallacy that the mutual "handle" is the amount which the public has that day brought to the track. It has been estimated that the actual money-in-the-pocket sum, on hand at the track, is about 25 per cent of the "handle."

That is, when you hear about those "million-dollar days," about $250,000 actually passed through the machines. The money, however, was bet over and over again. It is possible that a man could have bet $1000 a race, or a total of $7000, using the same $1000 all the time.

Some of Pimlico's expenditures, which amounted to $1,103,425.44 last year (this sum divided by 25 racing days gets the $44,000 a day figure) may interest you. We rip the following out of a Woods editorial, by the roots: Purses, :394,547.65; payroll, $185,309.59 (only $20,000 of this for officers' and directors' fees); rental of "tote" and other fixtures, $39,880; policing and horse identification, $12,470; music for Preakness Day, $1545; ambulance, $825, and money wagon, $1080. This latter expenditure, you will readily understand, will hardly be necessary when the new Federal taxes go into effect.

If your eyes are not swimming with misty sympathy by this time, then let us add that the Preakness ought to be an even more entertaining race than the Derby. It has absorbed the advantage of all the lush Derby build-up and past-performance glamour. It has the added advantage of three or four strong starters who did not appear in the Derby—Colchis, twice winner over Alsab; Warren Wright's Sun Again and the foreign charger, Domingo.

We know full well the problem of getting something down on paper every day and how much it means to an editorial writer, like Dave, to have some outside thinking done for him. Therefore we suggest that Dave knock off something on the city of Baltimore and the big-league way in which it handles the Preakness.

Lew Jenkins to Fight Fritzie Zivic, May 25

Hot Springs, Ark., May 8 (AP).—Former Lightweight Champion Lew Jenkins said today arrangements had been completed for him to fight Fritzie Zivic, former welterweight champion, in Cleveland May 25.

Jenkins said that after the Zivic fight he would box Welterweight Champion Red Cochrane in Boston.

Here in training for a fight Monday night with Jack Byrd of Blytheville, Ark., Jenkins indicated that his "days of fighting in the lightweight ranks" have passed.

Victory Ends Wagner Jinx Over Macks

Sox Hurler Suffers Season's First Loss; Boston Is Dropped to Third Place in Race

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, May 8.—Phil Marchildon threw a five-hitter at the Boston Red Sox today and thereby accomplished these results:

(A) The Athletics beat the Sox, 2 to 1, for the first time this year.

(B) Kept Boston from tying the Yankees for first place in the American League. In fact the setback dropped the Sox to third, a game behind the Yanks and one-half game behind Cleveland.

(C) Ended Charley Wagner's string of nine consecutive victories over the A's. In fact it was the first time the Mackmen have ever defeated Wagner.

(D) Ended Wagner's three-game winning streak this season. He previously had been undefeated.

Marchildon in Rare Form

Wagner yielded only seven hits, well enough to win ordinarily, but Marchildon, who twirled a two-hitter against Detroit last Sunday, was in rare form. He fanned six and issued only three bases on balls, two of them to ever-dangerous Ted Williams.

Marchildon retired the first ten batters to face him. Then John Pesky dropped a dinky single into center, Williams walked and Jimmy Foxx drove in Boston's lone tally with a single to center. Williams and Foxx were left stranded when Tabor struck out and Pete Fox grounded out.

C. U. Captures Early Lead In Track Meet

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, May 8.—Catholic University took early command of the Mason-Dixon Conference track and field meet in today's qualifying round, placing its athletes in nine spots for the track finals.

Point-scoring begins tomorrow with the Cardinals starting off with five to their credit—won in the Mason-Dixon relay at the Penn Relays in Philadelphia—and are favored to amass enough points to take their fourth straight conference title.

Pierce, Cardinal freshman, won an unexpected victory by defeating Defending Champion Lovett of Randolph-Macon in the semifinals of the 100-yard dash. Pierce took his heat in 10.1 and upped the pace to 9.9 when he met Lovett in the semifinals. The pair will meet again tomorrow.

100-YARD DASH (two qualify per heat):
First heat—Won by Lovett (Randolph-Macon); second, Siegel (Hopkins); third, Metcalfe (Washington College). Time, 0:10.1.

Terp Nine Faces G. U., Colonials Battle Duke

Army Trackmen Invade College Park Today; Catholic U. Invades Western Maryland

University of Maryland's athletes, much beaten in their previous weekend programs, will try it again today at College Park when Georgetown invades for baseball and a strong Army comes in for track.

Baseball is scheduled for 2:30 p. m.; track a half hour later.

The baseball game will have bearing on the scrambled unofficial District college championship race. To date, Maryland has beaten George Washington in its only test against its two major rivals. Georgetown and George Washington split their two scheduled games.

Army will be a heavy favorite over the Terrapins' track team. The Cadets will present some of the East's better cinder and field artists, among them Hurdler Bob Walling; High Jumper Frank Cann, Pole Vaulter Bob Short and Javelin Thrower Ralph White. White won at the Penn Relays with a throw of more than 200 feet and may approach Bill Guckeyson's Byrd Stadium record.

Another attractive college baseball game today will pit George Washington against Duke in a Southern Conference engagement on the East Ellipse at 2:30. Catholic University's nine will be at Westminster to play Western Maryland, while American University visits Randolph-Macon at Ashland, Va.

The Mason-Dixon Conference track championships will wind up at Baltimore, and the tennis and golf teams of Maryland and Georgetown will be in action.

The day's only lacrosse match will find Maryland at Rutgers.

Cards Take Homer Battle From Reds, 5-2

By the Associated Press

Cincinnati, May 8.—Billy Southworth's St. Louis Cardinals said it with home runs today, sixth inning circuit blows by Country Slaughter and Ray Sanders helping them to a 5-to-2 victory over Cincinnati.

Homers by Ray Lamanno and Frank McCormick, in the second and sixth innings, accounted for both Red tallies in a game which saw Left-handed Clyde Shoun—just obtained from the Cards—face his old teammates during the last two frames, after Elmer Riddle gave way to a pinch-hitter.

Only 1163 spectators sat with scant interest in damp chill as the teams met—the Reds after two postponements.

Long Lon Warneke, who on his last appearance here, August 30, hit baseball's jackpot with a no-hit shutout, scattered eight hits along the route.

Two of these came in the first, but went for naught and two more—slightly misplaced to do much good—followed Lamanno's blow that went high over the center-field wall, 383 feet from home plate.

McCormick Hits Circuit

From then on until two were out in the sixth, the Arkansas Traveler "gave nothing to no one." The exception was McCormick's sixth 4-baser of the year. Warneke struck out three and walked but one, while Riddle did as well in going down to his fourth defeat against a lone triumph.

Teentee Takes Pimlico Nursery Stake in Blanket Finish

Hasteville, HeavyChoice, Next to Last

By a Staff Correspondent

Pimlico, Md., May 8.—J. L. Collins' Teentee drove to victory in the historic Pimlico Nursery here this afternoon. Getting up in final stride, the Texas-owned son of Flares took the decision in a thrilling, four-way blanket finish. Only three of the juveniles in the field failed to get into the thick of the drive for first money in the $5000 added battle. The Christiana Stable's Quillon was second and L. I. Higgin, jr.'s Menext was third. They were noses apart.

With Mrs. Gustave Ring's' Hasteville, the heavily played favorite, next to the last, the entry of Teentee and Liberty Pan paid $11.70. The winner was clocked in 1:00 4-5, only three-fifths of a scend over the track record for the 5 furlongs.

Jockey Al Schmidl, a Baltimore boy, put up a fine ride on the winner. Hygrohour, winner of the Bowie Kindergarten, set the early pace and Teentee was closest along the backstretch. However, Schmidl eased back to save the energy of the son of Flares. Menext then moved up to the pace and in the stretch, Menext disposed of Hygrohour to take a slight lead.

Schmidl then placed Teentee to a hard drive and the youngster came boldly. Quillon, meanwhile, had gone to the outside and he also came with a rush. The three, just ahead of Hygrohour, went into the line as a team.

This was the third victory of Teentee since coming to Maryland from New Orleans and it was worth $3720 in earnings.

The program produced a $456.80 mutuel in the daily double. The major portion of that money was the work of the Elobee Farm's Tweendeck, a $51.10 shot in the first race. Jockey Paul Keiper brought this one along in the stretch and he disposed of Piccadilly in the final strides. Magdala was third in the limit field of juveniles.

J. L. Fiedman's Sir Kid won the second half of the double, coming from far back under good handling by Jockey Eddie DeCamillis to win going away. This $8.60 shot downed Joanny and Clamor Girl, the latter the favorite in the field of 12.

Member's Death Forces Postponement of Shoot

The weekly shoot of the Washington Gun Club, scheduled for today has been postponed because of the death of Robert Fawsett, former club vice president.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—TWEENDECK, $51.10, $20.50, $8.60; PICCADILLY, $5.30, $4.20; MAGDALA, $7.60.

TWEENDECK was off in first flight, came to outside to improve position, rallied gamely when placed to pressure and wore down PICCADILLY. The latter raced OOMPH into submission to take command at eighth pole, but could not resist winner while under strong handling. MAGDALA, off first, dropped back and closed with good energy. MAEJAMES was off slowly, came wide and closed some ground.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 3:01½. Off at 3:03½. Winner, J. L. Friedman's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SIR KID, $8.60, $4.80, $2.90; JOANNY, $5.40, $3.30; CLAMOR GIRL $2.70.

SIR KID lacked early speed, was taken wide for racing room, responded when placed to drive, disposed of JOANNY and won with speed in reserve. JOANNY raced with AVERT early, shook off latter but could not resist winner. CLAMOR GIRL was allowed to race on own course early, was placed to drive entering stretch and hung in closing stages. FRED'S FIRST was off slowly and improved position gradually.

Daily Double, TWEENDECK and SIR KID Paid $456.80.

THIRD RACE—Two miles. Purse, $1000; claiming. Steeplechase. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place same. Went to post at 3:32. Off at 3:32. Winner, R. E. McDevitt's ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—RED RAIN, $4.50, $3.40, $2.90; WAR PORT, $4.00, $3.20; SPEED DEMON, $5.00.

RED RAIN, rated for mile while in first flight, responded when asked, recovered from bad landing at twelfth fence, wore down WAR PORT to take command and won easily. WAR PORT saved much ground while setting pace, fenced well and closed with good courage. SPEED DEMON moved up in opening mile and then weakened gradually. ROUGEMONT was well placed early and tired badly.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1200; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:02. Off at 4:02. Winner, Christiana Stable's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SOBRIQUET, $4.40, $3.20, $2.60; IMPERIAL IMPY, $5.40, $3.50; FOGOSO, $3.50.

SOBRIQUET, first to show in front, opened good lead and was kept to drive to end. IMPERIAL IMPY was closest to pace from break, was strongly handled, but was no match for winner. FOGOSO, off slowly, improved position on inside and hung in final test. NEUTRALITY, close up early, dropped back and came willingly at close.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—FIREBROOM, $5.50, $3.40, $2.20; COLD CRACK, $4.90, $2.50; TRADE LAST, $2.40.

FIREBROOM, well handled, took command going to first turn, was rated when COLD CRACK was driven to front, rallied when asked and drew out in final sixteenth. COLD CRACK was hustled into lead, was rated after taking good advantage, but hung when placed to hard drive. TRADE LAST was close up from start and closed willingly. CAL'S PET was slightly bothered leaving gate, came wide and weakened in closing test.

SIXTH RACE—Five furlongs. Purse, $5000 added. Pimlico Nursery Stakes. For 2-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:01. Off at 5:01½. Winner, J. L. Collins' b. c. (2) by Flares—Exhilarate. Trained by M. M. Harrison. Net value to winner, $5720; second, $1000; third, $500; fourth, $250. Time, 1:00⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—TEENTEE (entry), $11.70, $6.00, $3.80; QUILLON, $19.20, $6.80; MENEX, $3.60.

TEENTEE, off in first flight, was steadied in early stages, responded willingly when shaken up and closed with bold rush to be up in concluding strides. QUILLON was vigorously handled, came wide and closed resolutely. MENEX was in thick of forward contention from start, moved up in stretch to dispose of HYGROHOUR and hung right at end. HYGROHOUR was sent to front in opening furlong, drew out, but weakened in final eighth.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:31. Off at 5:32. Winner, Mrs. H. W. Two-dollar mutuels paid—PUNCHDRUNK, $17.70, $7.90, $4.80; MOLASSES MIBS, $5.10, $4.40; SPANG, $8.30.

PUNCHDRUNK, got hurried while well placed in opening half, came to outside for racing room and withstood a long drive to win going away. MOLASSES MIBS bettered position gradually, took command in stretch, but could not resist winner. SPANG moved to serious contention after a half and came willingly under strong handling. CRIMSON LANCER went evenly.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-half miles. Purse, $1000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 6:01½. Off at 6:02. Winner, Mrs. D. B. Miller's ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—HELEN'S LAD, $12.70, $4.70, $3.30; RAHANEE, $3.30, $2.80; ROUGH GOING, $3.70.

HELEN'S LAD, under improved handling, went to leaders on backstretch, took command, drew out and was kept to hand drive to end. RAHANEE improved position gradually, reached contention leaving backstretch and faltered at close. ROUGH GOING moved up boldly and weakened in stretch run. SKIRMISH broke first, was taken back and closed with good energy.

Selections at Pimlico

Dear Al:

I'm going to string along with the chalk, I mean, of course, the Greentree entry. Both horses are of the solid sort, capable of going the distance. After all, Shut Out won the Kentucky Derby and despite everything, he put up a strong, game finish and that's what wins horse races. The Derby time was slow, but I blame that on the track. They don't pay off on time, they cash on the nose that hits the wire first. The stable still believes Devil Diver is the best of the two horses. If this is true, then Devil Diver may be the one to battle it out with Shut Out for the main money. Arcaro admits he made mistak with Devil Diver at Louisville. He means to correct these today. Wayne Wright will have the confidence of knowing he has a horse under him who can take it. So I'm picking the Greentree pair to finish first and second, in either order. Alsab belongs next. He had excuses in the Derby. Although Basil James denied Alsab was impeded, he confirmed that something took place when he tangled with Leon Haas after the race. Alsab is going to be one to beat but he, probably through overwork, has become an "excuse" horse. He always looks good in his races but not good enough. He can take it all, but third looks like the right spot. Sun Again belongs close if for no other reason than that he will be saddled by Trainer Ben Jones and carries the Calumet silks. Sun Again has been brought along gradually. Jones wouldn't start him unless he had a chance. The boys on the backstretch like him, so I'll have to stamp him as a dangerous contender. Clocker Mike is among those who will back Sun Again. Just to go farther out on the limb, I'm going to take the others in this order: Colchis, Valdina Orphan, Requested, Apache, Domingo and Fair Call. Any way you take it, this will be a race worth seeing. I don't know how close you'll get to the rail today, but I'll be looking for you.

BILL.

First race—JACKET appears suited by conditions in the day's opener, the Pennsylvania A. C. Steplechase. Gets in light and needs only a ride. DUNDRILLIN won a timber race here and belongs close. JUDGE'S BID for the minor money.

Second race—MILK CHOCOLATE breaks off the rail. Packs plenty of speed and should make every post a winning one. LITTLE WIZARD closes well and should be along in time for the place. BLACK GRIP to take care of the others.

Third race—RADIO WAVE defeats this kind occasionally and is fit. Likes the route and I see no reason for mistakes. AVESTA looms as one to beat. DIZZY DAME begins to figure when the opposition is this cheap.

Fourth race—BLUE STEEL goes well with this kind and will be hard to down. HIGH CELERITY is good now but may be overweighted with 117 pounds. BOLA MOWLEE improved last out and is a possibility.

Fifth race—WARLOCK looks like the best bet on the program. Gets weight from CAPE COD. The latter is good now but may find those 124 pounds too much. HIGH COMMAND for the minor money.

Sixth race—GREENTREE ENTRY one-two. ALSAB third and SUN AGAIN fourth.

Seventh race—GENTLE SAVAGE and EXPLORATION to battle it out for the chief award in this field. I prefer them in the order named. BULLWHIP for the show end.

Best bet—WARLOCK.

Peoples Drug Sales Up 16% In Four Months

Peoples Drug Stores, Inc., yesterday reported net sales of $2,499,902 in April, a gain of 16.5 per cent as compared with $2,145,856 in the same month last year.

Sales in the first months this year aggregated $9,737,297, a gain of 16.1 per cent as compared with $8,387,480 in the same 1941 period.

At the same time Treasurer W. H. Churchill released the earnings statement for the first three months showing net income of $201,768, equal to 41 cents a share on common stock. In the same period last year Peoples Drug earned $199,977 or 41 cents a share.

Net profits before Federal income and excess profit taxes totaled $504,421 in the first quarter, against $344,789 in the same period last year. Estimated income and excess taxes were $302,652 for the first three months, a sharp upturn as compared with $144,810 in 1941 period.

Earned surplus as of March 31 rose to $4,510,609, against $4,227,925 at the same time last year.

Consolidated balance sheet as of March 31 showed current assets of $6,542,342 against current liabilities of $2,531,584. At the same time last year current assets totaled $5,608,849 and current liabilities were $1,933,820.

Common Metals Scarce, Use of Silver Leaps In War Output but Treasury Is Bottleneck

By the Associated Press

New York, May 8.—Silver bullets in legend won the battle and silver, in weapons of another form, is helping America's fighting men.

As much silver is going into planes, tanks, ships, trucks, guns and shells and their manufacture this year as all United States industry used in 1939, a reliable trade source estimated today, placing the figure at 30 million ounces.

The substitution of silver for copper, nickel, tin, aluminum and other war-needed non-rusting metals by civilian industry also has skyrocketed demand from non-war manufacturers.

The War Production Board, in its order last week banning iron and steel from more than 400 common civilian articles, specifically permitted the use of silver, or of gold, as a substitute.

American factories, a large bullion dealer estimated, could use 140 million ounces of silver profitably this year at current prices—if they could get it. The total supply for the year, however, was figured at 100 million ounces.

This shortage of supply compared with demand has made necessary, trade reports said, an informal rationing or doling out of silver to users because it would be impossible to supply the metal they want at prevailing prices.

Paradoxically, the trade points out, the United States Treasury owns more than three billion ounces of silver.

The catch, silver men say, is a three-way price policy, explained this way:

Foreign silver brings 35 cents an ounce at the Treasury, and industry pays a fraction of a cent more to obtain its requirements.

Domestic silver, under the law passed July 6, 1939, must be bought by the Treasury at 71.11 cents an ounce. Such purchases in 1941 were estimated at about 70 million ounces. Under this law, the Treasury cannot sell that same domestically-mined silver for less than $1.29 an ounce.

Thus foreign mined silver, mostly from Canada, Mexico and South America since the war disrupted other trade routes, has been American industry's only major supply. Federal price freezing, some sources believe, might prevent industry from offering more for silver in an effort to encourage producers.

The growing demand has brought discussion of ways by which the Treasury could release some of its silver as a "loan" to industry, to be returned or replaced after copper and such metals again become available.

The Treasury agreed to loan 40,000 tons of silver to the power industry for use in bus-bars, through which electricity passes on its way from generators to power lines. Now the talk has turned to loans for other industrial purposes.

The Treasury could "farm out" a good deal of its silver, by the way, without affecting the amount of silver coin in circulation. It has on hand more than 480 million silver dollars, and millions of dollars more in subsidiary coin, in its vaults.

Aside from coinage use, Handy & Harman, New York bullion dealers, estimate the United States used nearly 80 million ounces of silver in 1941, almost twice as much as in 1940, and credited the rise directly and indirectly to the war. Use of the white metal still is increasing.

Silver alloys have replaced brass (copper and zinc) in some articles.

Pure silver wire substitutes for copper in some electrical appliances and small motors.

Silver plating puts a resistant surface on metals that otherwise might rust or corrode.

Large quantities of silver have been mixed with lead to substitute for tin-lead solders.

War use of silver is chiefly in the form of brazing alloys, while compositions of it are used in making electrical contacts, and pure silver is used in airplane bearings, photographic film, surgical materials and the like.

Silver men estimate 200 to 250 tons of copper would provide all the alloying metal needed to harden the 140 million ounces of silver needed for industrial use.

Subsidy Asked To Save Postal Telegraph Co.

By the Associated Press

Subsidization of the Postal Telegraph Co. under strict Government control was proposed yesterday by the American Communications Association (C. I. O.) as a substitute for proposed merger of Postal and Western Union.

Joseph P. Selly of New York, association president, told a Senate Interstate Subcommittee at a hearing on legislation authorizing such a merger that if consolidation were deemed desirable it should be done by Government order without the abandonment of any existing communication facilities.

Urging subsidization, the witness said:

"Postal Telegraph should be maintained as an independent communications system for the duration of the war by means of Government grant, loan or subsidy. Specific portions of these funds should be allocated to repair and maintain the Postal plant.

"Postal's deteriorated service could be quickly rehabilitated, with a proper and judicious expenditure of funds under the regulation of the Federal Communications Commission, to realize the full potentialities of the recent semiautomatic installation.

"It requires men as well as machines to operate the telegraph system. Therefore, specific sums should be allocated to raise the unbelievably low wages being paid by the Postal system . . ."

Upward Curve in Selected Industrial Stocks Flattens in Late Trade; Chrysler Continues Up

New York, May 8.—Modest recoveries continued for selected industrials in today's stock market but the swing flattened out appreciably in the final hour.

Activity and prices were best at the start. Gains running to a point or so for favorites were reduced or cancelled at the last and rails and utilities generally were lower.

Sentiment was buoyed to a certain extent in the forenoon by first reports of the air-naval battle in the Southwest Pacific. Commitments eventually were lightened in many cases, however, on the thought it might be better to await outcome of the sea clash before getting too bullish.

The war news, on the whole, provided little outstanding speculative stimulation and such bidding as appeared was credited mainly to the persistent idea the list could go considerably farther in the technical rebound from recent nine-year lows.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was unchanged at 33.8. Of 618 individual stocks traded 287 were up, 152 down and 179 unchanged. Transfers totaled 313,209 shares against 343,250 yesterday.

Much of the day's volume was accounted for by sizable blocks of low-priced stocks, most of which finished with slight variations in either direction.

Among new 1942 highs were those of Chrysler, Goodrich common and preferred and Goodyear. New York Shipbuilding and Continental Motors edged into new low territory for the year.

Clinging to part of their morning advances were United States Steel, Bethlehem, General Motors, Montgomery Ward, Sears Roebuck, Deere, International Harvester, Eastman Kodak, Johns-Manville, Owens-Illinois, Texas Co., Standard Oil of Indiana, American Can, Air Reduction, General Electric, Twentieth Century-Fox and Paramount Pictures.

International Telephone was the liveliest performer in the wake of announcement the Export-Import Bank had granted the company credit of 25 million dollars to acquire its debentures and develop Latin-American properties. The issue ended off ¼ of a point at 2½.

Prominent losers were American Telephone, Union Pacific, Anaconda, Union Carbide, Santa Fe, North American, Standard Oil (N. J.) and Western Union.

Bonds were a bit spotty after an initial upturn. Commodities were mixed. At Chicago wheat lost ¼ and hogs steady. Cotton was up 30 to 50 cents a bale.

Singer Mfg. came back 4 points in the curb. Lesser gainers included Aluminum of America, Brewster Aero, Humble Oil and Lake Shore. Turnover here amounted to 41,316 shares against 50,517 Thursday.

Johns-Manville Head Foresees Dividend Cuts

New York, May 8 (AP).—Lewis H. Brown, president of Johns-Manville Corp., told stockholders at the annual meeting today the greatly increased taxes in prospect meant that all companies might have to reduce payments to stockholders.

His statement was taken as a hint the company might cut its dividend on common stock before the end of the year, although Brown did not go into further detail.

Brown said the company would do a larger volume of business this year than last, but added operating profit probably would show only a slight improvement because of rising costs. He estimated 80 per cent of output was essential to the war effort.

Stockholders approved a proposal to retire 25,000 shares of cumulative 7 per cent preferred stock outstanding.

New Air Conditioning Units to Be Restricted

By the Associated Press

Orders sharply limiting production of air conditioning and commercial refrigerating equipment will be issued soon, War Production Board sources indicated yesterday.

It was understood the restrictions would limit installations of new equipment to hospitals and essential industries, although production of repair parts for existing equipment will be permitted.

Brazil Gets U. S. Credit For Rubber Expansion

Rio de Janeiro, May 8 (AP).—Finance Minister Arthur de Sousa Costa announced today that under terms of an agreement with the United States Brazil would apply a five million dollar United States credit to rapid expansion of Brazilian rubber production.

The United States, through the Rubber Reserve Co., will purchase all excess Brazilian rubber at a basic price of 39 cents a pound, f. o. b. Belem, he explained.

WPB Expected To Freeze Sales Of Soft Wood

By the Associated Press

The War Production Board was reported yesterday to be contemplating the freezing of all manufacturers' sales of soft wood construction lumber, except to Government buyers, to conserve supplies for the Army, Navy and shipbuilding programs.

Official confirmation was lacking, but reliable sources said the action could be expected "very soon." The freeze would apply to future production and to distributors' stocks as well as manufacturers', but not to retail sales, it was said.

The freeze will be temporary, these sources reported, and preliminary to creation of a lumber allocation system which would apportion available supplies between the Army, Navy and Maritime Commission, on the one hand, and other permitted construction, on the other.

WPB officials were said to feel that lumber stocks in the hands of retail dealers would be sufficient to care for the needs of defense housing and other authorized construction until the allocation quotas were worked out.

The contemplated order was foreshadowed, observers believed, in Tuesday's appeal by War Production Director Donald M. Nelson to logging and sawmill operators and their employes to launch a "full program of maximum production of all species of soft wood lumber in common board, dimension, and structural timber sizes and grades."

St. Louis Market Passes Chicago In Hog Receipts

National Stockyards, Ill., May 8 (AP).—Spurred by the war's demand for "victory food," farmers and stockmen in the Midwest have stepped up production of hogs with the result that the National Stockyards has become the Nation's largest market.

Department of Agriculture figures showed today that the East St. Louis, Ill., terminal had passed Chicago in salable hog receipts.

From March 30 through yesterday, arrivals at principal markets were: National Stockyards, 312,543 head; Chicago, 266,137; St. Paul, 245,440; Omaha, 106,912, and Kansas City, 71,442. Last week's official run here was 59,330 head, or 13,000,000 pounds.

Pork has become known as "victory food" because of the huge quantities shipped to America's allies, said H. D. Wright, manager of the Producers Livestock Commission Association.

"The lend-lease outlet is now set to absorb 27 per cent of the total pork supply and approximately 45 per cent of the total lard supply. Moreover, increased quantities are being taken for the armed forces of the United States."

Business Briefs Of D. C. Interest

R. C. Jones & Co. to Move Offices

Robert C. Jones & Co., local investment house, Monday will open business in their new quarters in the Metropolitan Bank Building, in the 600 block of Fifteenth Street Northwest.

The company has membership in the New York Curb Exchange, Washington Stock Exchange, Chicago Board of Trade and principal New York commodity markets.

No Apparent Hardship

Department store charge accounts were paid off in an average of 65 days last year, which is close to the requirements of the new Federal Reserve Board regulations.

The new board rule requires payment by the tenth day of the second month after purchase, which means a period ranging from 40 to 70 days, depending on the day of month of the purchase.

The estimate of payment time last year was made after a survey by Duncan McC. Holthausen of the Commerce Department.

Republic Service Under SEC Knife

Philadelphia, May 8 (AP).—The Securities and Exchange Commission instituted proceedings today against the Republic Service Corp. to determine whether the utility system should be simplified to conform with the "death sentence" provisions of the Holding Company Act.

The company, with 15 operating firms in Pennsylvania and Virginia, had consolidated assets of $9,341,813 on December 31, 1941.

Seat Price Up $2000

New York, May 8 (AP).—A New York Stock Exchange seat was sold today for $20,000, up $2000 from the last previous sale.

Retail Sales Gain Narrows During Week

By the Associated Press

New York, May 8.—Retail sales during the past week barely maintained a margin over a year ago, Dun & Bradstreet reported today, pointing out that buyers concentrated heavily in seasonal lines backed by promotional activity.

"Reports from various parts of the country indicated that there was some difference of opinion among retailers this week over the effect of the impending price ceiling on consumer demand," it said in a trade review.

"Stock Up" Slackens

"Some merchants ascribed a slackening of buying interest in a number of staples to the decline of price anticipatory buying."

"Store advertising activity gave major stress to Mother's Day purchases and to May sales of house accessories," it continued. "Some stores took space to announce that prices had already been adjusted to the ceilings established by the general regulation, although the effective date of the order was set at May 18. Conservation ads, rapidly increasing in number, put special emphasis on moth preventatives, wardrobe closets, cleaning accessories, and fur storage."

The survey showed gifts, household items and garden implements sold briskly. Furniture sales were off slightly although bedding and upholstry goods sold well.

Less Than 5% Ahead

Sales figures showed a dollar volume for the country as a whole ran less than 5 per cent ahead of a year ago. Percentage sales increases in major regions were New England 3 to 5, East and Southwest 1 or 2, South 4 to 7, Middle West 2 to 8, Pacific Coast 2 to 4 and Northwest off 1 to 3.

Wholesale business, while substantial, reflected the hesitation that followed the general price ceiling order. Buyers continued to ask as much merchandise as mills would accept in some lines.

Seasonal goods were slow, pending clarification of the Government order's effect on prices of seasonal merchandise.

5 New Members Named To C. & E. I. Directorate

Chicago, May 8 (AP).—Five new members were elected to the board of directors of the Chicago and Eastern Illinois Railroad today at the annual stockholders meeting.

The new directors are:

Victor V. Boatner, Washington, D. C.; Robert F. Carr, Chicago; J. Travis Fleishel, St. Louis; Henry E. Perry, New York, and Bryan S. Reid, Chicago.

The new directors were backed by a group of stockholders represented by New York interests. Boatner explained after the meeting that the group, consisting of Hallgarten and Company, himself and Cornelius Hearn, jr., and their associates, was entering the management in an effort to improve its earnings. He said he intended to resign soon as director of the Gulf, Mobile and Ohio.

April Output Of Steel Plates Sets New High

By the Associated Press

The War Production Board reported yesterday that steel plate shipments on Maritime Commission orders in April met the tonnage requested "for the second successive month" with 280,000 tons going to the commission from a record production of 895,971 tons.

The shortage of plates is "being eased slightly" by increased production, said C. E. Adams, chief of WPB's iron and steel branch, "but any permanent solution will depend upon new plate mills coming into operation."

The April shipments compared with 878,726 tons in March, the previous record.

"The pressing problem of the Maritime shipbuilding program is to have the right plates at the right yard at the right time," Adams said. "Problems of ordering and scheduling to insure this insofar as possible now are being worked out between WPB and the commission.

"The ideal solution of the problem would be to have a backlog of all types of plates on hand at each ship yard. To do this it would be necessary to curtail shipments to the Army, the Navy, the railroads, and for the construction of hundreds of war plants now going up in all parts of the country.

"With demand for plates far in excess of supply, any such curtailment would delay other important phases of the war effort."

Credit Congress To Open Monday

Special Dispatch to The Post

Cincinnati, May 8.—The financial challenge of war to American business and the role of credit for the duration and after the war will be principal subjects of discussion at the forty-seventh annual Credit Congress of the National Association of Credit Men, which opens its business sessions here on Monday.

This wartime Credit Congress is being arranged under the direction of N. A. C. M. President R. C. Wilson, vice president of the First National Bank, Salt Lake City, Utah, and Henry H. Heiman, N. A. C. M. executive manager.

Highlighted among the speakers are:

Joseph C. Rovensky, assistant coordinator of inter-American affairs, Washington, who is a former vice president of the Chase National Bank of New York. He will discuss "The Course of Inter-American Relations" in the present and postwar period.

Representative Wesley E. Disney, member of the House Ways and Means Committee, whose topic is "The Financial Challenge of War to American Business."

Stock Short Interest Shows Slight Increase

New York, May 8 (AP).—The New York Stock Exchange reported today that the short interest, excluding odd-lot accounts, existing as of April 30, amounted to 530,636 shares compared with 513,546 shares March 31, or an increase of 17,090.

Business Highlights

By Standard & Poor's Corp.

Stock Price Levels

The Administration's anti-inflation program need hold no terrors for the common stock market, which has been in the throes of deflation since the start of the war and is more or less adjusted to a low level of corporate profits. Commodity prices are to be frozen at a ceiling represented by March, 1942, prices. The Labor Bureau's index of wholesale commodity prices was approximately 21 per cent higher in March, 1942, than in October, 1939, but the Standard & Poor's index of 90 stocks is down 40 per cent since October, 1939, when the public was scrambling for equities as inflation hedges or as potential beneficiaries of war orders.

April Rail Earnings

Rrailroad traffic through the first three weeks in April rose widely, as had been expected. April's revenues and earnings will make an exceptionally favorable comparative showing, with improvement most marked among the coal carriers, which were brought to a virtual standstill by the strike a year ago. With armament production increasing at a rapid rate, freight traffic may be expected to advance at least seasonally in the months immediately ahead. A leveling off on a high plane is likely during the summer and fall, however, unless some method is found to accelerate export shipments. The 1941 traffic peak was reached in the October 18 week when loadings totaled 922,844 cars, the largest volume of freight handled since the week of November 2, 1930.

Inventory Profits

The active demand for meat products should insure firm price structures, but further substantial increases will be prevented by governmental action. Price ceilings recently have been announced for pork and beef products. The packers, consequently, will not obtain the large inventory profits which aided earnings in the past fiscal year. With larger sales reducing unit handling costs, however, declines in operating profits will be moderate, and the expected drop in earnings will be primarily the result of higher taxes.

Beverages and Confections

While restrictions on the use of sugar are likely to moderate later in the year, threatened shortages in other materials, supplies or transportation facilities promise to restrict sales of beverage and confection companies. With costs rising and with heavier income taxes in prospect, a marked decline from the high level of earnings in 1941 is clearly indicated.

Net Rises Sharply

Snider Packing Corporation, for the fiscal year ending March 31, reported net profit of $449,237, equal, after all charges and Federal tax provisions, to $2.14 per share of capital stock. In 1941, the corporation's net profit was $362,940, or $1.73 per share. Net sales totaled $8,989,890 against $6,538,480 the preceding year.

Wholesale Grocers Ask Easing of Rule

Nashville, Tenn., May 8 (AP).—The United States Wholesale Grocers' Association in closing sessions today asked for the elimination of the requirement of a return load for all wholesale trucks delivering to retail merchants.

The resolution approved a message sent to the ODT by the association's board of governors earlier this week, which asserted that Federal regulation "would put out of business many rural stores not on common carrier routes which now are serving a major part of our rural population."

Is the Answer to Your Summer Housing Problem

Safe from Bombs and away from Blackouts

Here in a select summer colony, a short distance from Washington, you and your family can enjoy life in the open—away from any possible wartime dangers and yet be close to your interests in Washington.

Here you have all the advantages of a country club plus the luxury of living in a private, well-furnished cottage—here also you may enjoy safe salt-water bathing, boating, fishing, golf (two courses), tennis, horseback riding, supervised play for children.

Drive down today and inspect this delightful colony of summer cottages. You need just what Sherwood Forest offers this year if never before.

If a man arrived for "Hobby Lobby" rehearsal with a bag of flour and announced he was going to play it, Musical Director Harry Salter wouldn't raise an eyebrow.

A man of long experience in the production of formal music, Salter is adept at coaching amateur musicians and has widened this experience on "Hobby Lobby," which you hear over over WJSV and the Columbia network every Saturday at 8:30 p. m.

Whether a person turns up with a pile of dinosaur bones, a punching bag, alarm clocks, soup bowls, or assorted plumbing fixtures, Salter can always fit the odd musical (?) results into the program. So far this season, Salter has had to deal with a musical saw player, a man who sings backward, a girl who plays the violin with mittens on, a woman who plays a collection of ancient Peruvian instruments, a fingerless pianist and three ocarina manufacturers. And, oh yes, he arranges and composes the music for the program, as well.

Salter organized his first orchestra in high school. He played the violin. The fact that he majored in geology at New York University seemed to have no effect on him. After graduation he gave a number of solo concerts and somehow eventually became conductor of the orchestra at the old Waldorf-Astoria.

He made his radio debut on a Montreal station in 1928, organized his own dance orchestra to tour the United States and Canada, then became musical director of WABC. Since then he has been conductor of "Hit Parade," and "The Phil Baker Show," in addition to "Hobby Lobby," and several others on CBS.

Mounties Retake Two Nazi Fliers

Ottawa, May 8 (AP).—Two German war prisoners who escaped Tuesday were arrested today, Royal Canadian mounted police reported. The Germans, both aviation lieutenants, were Reinhardt Pfundter and Ernst Wagner.

Contract Bridge

"This hand caused much discussion," writes Mrs. J. W. P., of Shoals, Ind. "May we have your opinion of the biddings?"

The hand is a freak which will make six diamonds or six spades, or even six no trump, should any one be foolish enough to bid it. There are no rules for bidding freaks, as no one really knows enough about them. They occur too rarely in play to permit much study. But strong players have learned one thing through painful experience, and that is to regard all freaks with suspicion; more than likely, the remainders of your long suits will turn up in the hands of the adversaries. This deal holds no such fearful distribution, however. Here are the cards, with neither side vulnerable and East dealer:

♡ A 6
◇ A K Q J 7 6 5

WEST
♠ 10 8 4
♡ K 9 7 5 4 3
◇ 8 3 2

EAST
♠ 8 7
♡ Q J 10 8 2
◇ 10 9 4
♣ A Q 3

SOUTH
♡ None
◇ None
♣ K 10 9 8 7 6 4 2

The bidding might go like this:

East	South	West	North
Pass	1 ♣	Pass	2 ◇
Pass	3 ♣	Pass	3 ◇
Pass	3 ♠	Pass	4 ◇
Pass	4 ♠	Pass	4 N.T.
Pass	5 ◇	Pass	?

Honors a Factor

Whether North would say six spades or six diamonds after his partner's reply to the Blackwood query for aces would depend on whether he was playing duplicate or rubber bridge. At rubber bridge, it would be natural to try for 6 in the suit where he could claim 100 points for honors. At duplicate, where honors are not scored, he would try for 6 in the highest-ranking suit, spades, to score 180 points, as against 120 points for making 6 diamonds.

If North plays the hand, he very likely will win an over-trick, as it is doubtful that East will open his ace of clubs, and North's club loser then can be thrown along with a heart on dummy's long spades. At spades, depending on the opening lead, declarer either will have to play to enter dummy with the third lead of trumps by the queen and run in the diamonds and the ace of hearts for his long tricks, or will have to develop his own club suit, giving up a trick and ruffing.

TERRY AND THE PIRATES — Gent Rent — BY MILTON CANIFF

OUR SURGEON IS AT WORK... HE WILL BE WELL SOON ENOUGH! HE TOLD ME OF YOUR ADVENTURE!...
IF I HAD KNOWN THOSE EXPLOSIVES WERE FOR YOU I WOULD HAVE RUSHED THEM HERE MUCH SOONER!
THE GLIB TONGUE RETAINS ITS SHARP EDGE... IT IS ESPECIALLY NOTICEABLE SINCE ITS OWNER KNOWS THE DRAGON LADY IS NOW UNDER OBLIGATION TO HIM!
WHAT KIND OF TALK IS THAT?.. WE'RE ALLIES NOW, BABE! I'LL BE GLAD TO HELP YOU PLANT THAT WHAM-STUFF UNDER SOME OF THE LITTLE FLOWER-ARRANGERS!
...I AM AWARE OF THE HANDSOME ONE'S ABILITIES —I AM FURTHER AWARE OF HIS SHREWDNESS AS A BARGAINER! IN RETURN FOR HIS GOOD EFFORTS, THE DRAGON LADY MUST OFFER SHELTER TO THE MOUSEY ONE AND HER CHILD! IT IS THE FIRST TIME I EVER HAD TO BECOME A SOCIAL WORKER IN ORDER TO HOLD A MAN!

MARY WORTH'S FAMILY — BY DALE ALLEN

PAT LEFT TWO HOURS AGO? BUT-- --WHERE DID HE GO, BLEEK?
I COULDN'T SAY, MISS BARBARA! HE GOT A WIRE, CONFERRED WITH MR. BLACKSTON AND DEPARTED POST HASTE!
WHAT'S GOING ON, BLEEK?--OH, IT'S YOU, IS IT, BABS?
JOHN! WHERE'S PAT? WE QUARRELED AT THE DANCE...HE PRETENDED TO HURT HIS KNEE--AND...!
IT WAS NO PRETENSE! PAT NEVER TOLD YOU--BUT HE IS AN R.A.F. PILOT....ON CONVALESCENT LEAVE OVER HERE WITH A LEG INJURY, RECEIVED IN ACTION!
OH! CAN HE EVER FORGIVE ME?
YOU MAY WAIT A LONG TIME TO FIND OUT! HE WAS ORDERED TONIGHT TO REPORT AS INSTRUCTOR AT AN R.A.F. TRAINING FIELD IN THE SOUTH! HE ASKED ME TO TELL YOU GOODBYE!

MICKEY FINN — Unexpected Visitor! — BY LANK LEONARD

WELL, SLONG, TOM! I'LL SEE YOU AT THE PLANT, TONIGHT!
OKAY!
PARKER
THAT TAXI IN FRONT OF THE HOUSE, MA— IS SOMEBODY HERE?
A YOUNG MAN FROM THE ACME PLANT—I TOLD HIM YOU'D BE HOME FOR DINNER, SO HE WAITED—HE'S IN THE PARLOR!
BENNY WITKOWSKY! SAY— SINCE WHEN HAVE YOU BEEN RIDING AROUND IN A TAXI?
THE BIG BOSS IS PAYING FOR IT, MICKEY! YOU'VE GOT TO DO HIM A FAVOR!

MR. AND MRS. — Pussy Cat, Where Have You Been? — BY ARTHUR FOLWELL and ELLISON HOOVER

DON'T DO THAT! HAVE YOU NO SENSE?
DON'T DO WHAT?
DON'T EAT FRUIT WITHOUT FIRST WASHING IT. YOU NEVER KNOW WHAT GERMS-
OH, YOU AND YOUR GERMS! WASHING TAKES THE FLAVOR OUT
FRUIT
I FORGOT THAT YOU DON'T GO OUT AND PICK FRUIT OFF YOUR OWN TREES NOWADAYS

DIXIE DUGAN — Anything Wrong? — BY J. P. McEVOY and H. J. STRIEBEL

OH—NOOOO, MISTER SHIPLEY!
HMPH! SHE LOCKED THE DOOR!
I REPEAT—IS THERE ANYTHING WRONG??
OH YESSSS, MISTER SHIPLEY!

DON WINSLOW OF THE NAVY — Autograph — BY FRANK MARTINER

OH, BOY! SO HE WANTS TO DOGFIGHT!
THEY'RE JAPS, ALL RIGHT. SEE 'EM SHOOT WITHOUT WARNING?
HOW'D THEY EVER STEAL THAT U.S. ARMY PLANE?
WATCH IT! I'M GETTING ON HIS TAIL NOW.
"DUCK-ON-A-ROCK" IT'S AN OLD NAVY GAME
AND THAT, I BELIEVE, WILL BE ALL FOR TOGO!!

BIG CHIEF WAHOO — BY SAUNDERS AND WOGGON

AH! THE AMERICAN TOURISTS WHOM THE MASTER HAS ORDERED ME TO ENSNARE! PERHAPS--IF I CAN GET THE BLONDE ONE ALONE--!
BUT, FIRST--I MUST SEE IF MY LITTLE PARASOL IS READY--IN CASE I SHOULD NEED IT--!
VERY GOOD! IT IS READY!
GOOD MORNING, HANDSOME AMERICAN FRIEND! HOW FORTUNATE! I WAS LONGING FOR A COMPANION ON MY STROLL ALONG THE BEACH--YES-SS!

DONALD DUCK — Total Eclipse — BY WALT DISNEY
